$10,000 Damage In 4 Months Vandalism May Force Recreation Cutbacks

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

This year is already the worst ever for vandalism in city parks, says Richard Koch, executive secretary to the Park and Recreation Board.

And the vandalism - $10,000 worth over the past four months - may force cutbacks in the city's park programs, Koch said.

"We're caught in a triple squeeze," he said. The city's fiscal problems resulted in the Park Department budget being cut to three percent below last year's. Inflation has cut into the purchasing power of what money the department does have."

And finally, Koch says, the drastic increase in vandalism is draining the expense budget that would normally go to other purposes.

"Although we don't have a budget as such for vandalism damages, we can usually count on $5,000 to $7,000 a year," he said. "But now we're talking $10,000 in four months. In my 18 years with the city, this spring has been the most expensive and destructive that we've had."

"It's really going to affect our facilities and our future if it's not curtailed immediately," Koch said. "We might be forced to do something drastic."

One solution to the department's budget crunch, Koch said, could be shutting off some of the lights used for evening softball leagues. This would curtail or restrict the schedules of those leagues, which involve an estimated 1,500 adults, Koch said.

Another possibility would be closing some of the city's summer playgrounds programs early, Koch said. During the summer, daily programs are offered for eight weeks at 35 city playgrounds. About 4,500 children take part in these summer programs, Koch said.

Koch cited the following incidents of vandalism over recent weeks:

- About $1,000 in damages caused last Friday night or early Saturday to the bowling green clubhouse at Merrymount Park.

Supplemental Budget?

Mayor Seeks To Add $13,000 To $101 Million

By TOM HENSHAW

Quincy's $101 million budget for fiscal 1981 may be going up another $13,000 or so.

The dread phrase "supplemental budget" reared its head at Monday night's City Council meeting but Mayor Tobin hastily beat it down. "Supplemental request" would be a better term, he said.

Whatever it is called, the city wants some $13,000 more from the 1981 tax levy in order to restore three items that were cut from the budget, either by the Mayor or the Council or both.

They are:

- $2,500 for the "airplane noise" account in the City Solicitor's office to help Citizens Against Airport Noise (CAAN) in its fight to keep down the noise level of planes from Logan Airport.

- About $1,200 for an expense account for Civil Defense volunteers who donate their time to work at fires, storms and other natural disasters.

- $9,503 to retain the operator of the Gestetner copying machine, who turns out most of the city's printing work and also acts as the city's backup mailman.

It wasn't the request as much as it was the wording of it that turned on the City Council Monday night.

Said the letter from Mayor Tobin to Council:

"Upon receipt of individual requests from members of the City Council, and after discussions with the City Auditor, I have directed that the following monies which were cut by the City Council be restored and appropriated from existing funds."

City Councillor Daniel G. Raymond said he couldn't recall the Council cutting those funds.

"Could you tell me," he asked Auditor Charles L. Shea, "how much money the City Council cut from Civil Defense?"

"I don't think it cut anything," said Shea.

Raymond said he didn't think the Council should accept an inaccurate document.

"I have no problem if he wants to bring a supplemental budget back to the council to restore monies into individual accounts," he said. "I will entertain that."

The words "supplemental budget" alerted Councillor Stephen J. McGrath.

"Did I understand you to say," he asked Shea, "that an

Malls Impress Business Leaders

Some 20 downtown businessmen and bankers viewed Stephen Weiner's handiwork Tuesday and came back impressed.

Weiner is the designated developer of land in the Hancock Parkway where Mayor Tobin hopes to see a development that will include a mall and office building.

Tobin took the businessmen and bankers on a chartered bus tour of two existing Weiner developments — Chestnut Hill Mall in Newton and Meadow Glen Mall north in Medford.

"The tour was to acquaint downtown merchants with the developer and the type of thing that could happen in downtown Quincy," said Tobin. "Most of those who went were impressed."

"I was particularly interested in the quality of construction and that, from my point of view, was excellent," said Charles Pearce, president of the Quincy Savings Bank.

Traffic Rules Amended

The Traffic Commission and the City council both have passed on the following changes in traffic regulations:

- Yield sign on Hancock St. at the intersection of East Squantum St., Atlantic.
- No parking signs on both sides of Gordon St. from Water to Granite Sts., South Quincy.
- Loading zone sign in the vicinity of 13-15 School St., Quincy Center.
- No parking—tow signs on Hancock and Alleyne Sts. in the vicinity of Executive House.

Quincy Center.

- Two-hour parking—town zone signs on both sides of Russell Park from points some 260 to 300 feet in from Hancock St. to Woodward Ave., Quincy Center.
- No parking—bus stop signs on Lancaster St. in the area of the Daniel Webster School, Quincy Point.

The Traffic Commission denied a request for 15 minute parking signs on the southeast side of Sea St. between Nos. 1185 and 1191 in the Houghs Neck business area as too difficult to enforce.

$1,000 VANDALISM AT THE clubhouse at the Merry Mount Park bowling green included a broken door, a tipped-over refrigerator and damage to the walls and furnishings.

Vandalism May Force Recreation Cutbacks

Vandals kicked in doors, defaced

the walls and overturned a refrigerator.

• A fire which caused about $3,000 in damages to the Faxon Park fieldhouse last month. The fire, apparently the result of a late-night drinking party, was pronounced of suspicious origin by the Fire Department.

• A $500 to $600 loss caused when vandals sawed through the six metal supports of a slide and carried it away. The whereabouts of the slide is still unknown.

• An unknown amount of damage to the Fore River Clubhouse, under Park Department jurisdiction.

"We replaced that roof three years ago at a cost of $16,000," Koch said. "Now we hear that there are vandals climbing onto the roof at night and ripping the shingles off."

• Damages of between $1,500 and $2,000 caused when about 12 trees at Quincy Point's Mound St. beach were cut down in recent weeks.

"We feel a good part of it is drinking," said Koch of the city-wide vandalism problem. "We know there are other problems as well, like the drugs."

Groups of youths, some as young as 13, can be seen gathering in parks for these late night parties, Koch said. The morning after frequently finds the parks a treacherous mess of cans and broken bottles, he added.

Koch speculated that the crackdown, by the MDC police, on public drinking at Wollaston Beach has driven many youths to inland sites.

Although Koch was spoken to the Quincy Police Department about the problem, he says there's only so much they can do.

"We realize it's a major problem for the police throughout the city," he said. "It's impossible for them to be everywhere."

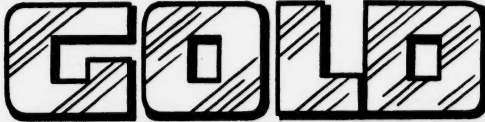

"We move as fast as we can on these things, maintenance-wise," he said. But the city's budget problems took their toll in this area, too.

Last year the park department had 93 summer youth workers who cleaned up city parks, Koch said. This year there are none.

Koch asked the cooperation of both youths and adults in discouraging and reporting vandalism, as a sort of Play-ground Alert program.

"The biggest helpers could be the peers of these kids, the ones who use the parks for the right reasons," Koch said.

Fares Up 25 Cents

Commuters Hustle For Low-Priced T Passes At Quincy Cooperative

Fares on the MBTA went up Monday, and so did the number of people trying to buy T passes.

More than 1,000 persons—about 300 more than ever before—purchased the passes at the Quincy Cooperative Bank's main offices and branches during the last six days of June, reports Assistant Vice President Carl Abramson.

Although normal T fares jumped Monday—from $1 to $1.50 per Quincy-to-Boston round trip—the price of the $18 monthly passes will remain the same until September.

Thus, the average commuter who uses the pass on each of July's 22 work days will save a minimum of $15.

Abramson said demand for the passes was so great, that Quincy Cooperative ran out at about 1 p.m. Monday. A new batch of passes had to be sent from T headquarters in Boston.

During the last six days of June, 900 passes were sold at Quincy Center office, 100 more at the Braintree branch and about $0 more at other branches, Abramson said.

"The most we had ever sold before was 718 in one month," he added.

The MBTA is keeping the pass prices low during the summer months in hopes that commuters will start buying them and continue in the fall when those prices rise, he said.

Quincy Cooperative is the only bank on the South Shore selling the passes to the public, Abramson said. Passes are sold only during the last six days of each month.

City To Seek $1 Million Loan To Purchase Burned Out Block

The city is applying for a $1 million loan from the Government Land Bank to purchase for future development a burned out block of business property on Ross Parkway, site of an incendiary fire last week.

Mayor Tobin said he sees it as a possible site for an office building, motel and function facility complex.

The part of the block that houses the Kustom TV store burned last week in a spectacular pre-dawn fire that Deputy Fire Chief Carl Valenti said was undoubtedly the work of an arsonist.

The remainder of the block is occupied by the California Disco, the South Shore Mental Health office and several other stores, including the old Gerber Photo shop, that had burned previously.

Valenti said investigators found that a piece of plywood that had been nailed over a doorway in the old Gerber building had been ripped off prior to the latest fire.

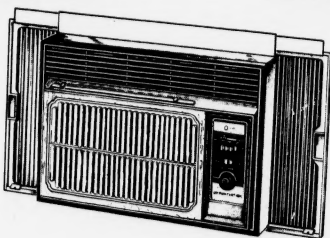

A light green and white Cadillac was seen driving away from the rear of the building before the fire, said the deputy.

The ruined Kustom TV store has since been levelled by a bulldozer as a safety measure.

"We are concerned," said Mayor Tobin, "with future vandalism and fires in the block. Now is the time to move on it while the Upland Rd. Extension is becoming a reality."

Judie Cullen of the Planning Department said it probably will take six months for the application to go through the Government Land Bank, which operates with federal funds under state administration.

Quincy CETA, 1073 Hancock St., Quincy Center, is interviewing applicants for the Brighton site of a Women in Construction Project which begins July 28, and continues for 12 weeks.

An open house will be held Tuesday, July 8, at 9 a.m. at 385 R. Market St., Brighton, for the project which is in response to federal regulations that all construction projects receiving over $10,000 in federal funds employ a percentage of women.

Women who are unemployed, low-income heads of households, or public assistance recipients can qualify for the program which was also conducted in March in Lowell and Springfield as well as Brighton. High School diplomas are not required, and participants are paid hourly wages and transportation expenses.

Linda Walden, Brighton's on-site administrator, said the program will ease women's entry into the previously all-male occupation. Participating women will develop marketable skills and qualify for trade union membership.

Sponsored by Jobs, Inc., Massachusetts State Building Construction and Trades Council and AFL-CIO, the program begins with three weeks of study of the three trades offered. The remainder of the program focuses on the skill chosen by the woman.

The workday is devoted to "hands-on" and classroom training, and there is also physical training to prepare for additional body strain, and personal counseling.

Placement rate for the 1978 pilot program was 70%, and for the 1979 program, the rate reached 78%.

For more information, contact Patricia Bickford, at Quincy CETA, 773-3983.

MONTEZUMA'S REVENGE

There have been so many bad jokes about overseas diseases resulting in diarrhea to travellers, that the myth has become more threatening than the disease itself.

Actually, locally acquired ailments with names like "Montezuma's Revenge", "Aztec Two-Step", "Delhi Belly", or "Turkey Trot" are not as bothersome to most travellers as the victims would like you to believe.

If it's going to hit you, it will usually come during the first or second week. There is not much you can do, other than relieve the more uncomfortable symptoms. The disease almost always runs its full course in three days or less.

It is generally concluded that young people are more susceptible to it than older people indicating a sort of immunity to "Turista" may develop with age.

Shea Optimistic Quincy Can Have Tax Rate By Sept. 1

Quincy may have a 1981 tax rate set by Sept. 1 or even earlier.

City Auditor Charles L. Shea made the forecast Monday night as the City Council wandered somewhat afield from the immediate subject, which was the year-end transfer of monies between accounts.

Councillor Francis X. McCauley wanted to know how Shea's department was getting on since it had lost one accountant to the Retirement Board and was about to lose two more to layoffs. "How do you stand now as far as bookkeeping goes?" asked McCauley. "How far up to date are your books?"

"The cherry sheet figures are out," said McCauley. "It's been the earliest we've known in many years. How soon would you forecast the setting of the tax rate?"

"I would think it could be set by Sept. 1 or a little earlier," said

Shea.

McCauley then wanted to know if the shortage of help in the Auditor's Department would mean a delay in getting the books caught up in time to set the tax rate early.

"I'm going to be behind," said the auditor, "but we're going to do our best to close out this year."

Shea added that there are "some other things we have to do before we set the tax rate."

One of the things, he said, was the tax cap forms that had to be filled out for the state, which couldn't be done until the city's books had been closed for the year and approved by the state.

Shea told the councillors that,

"with the exception of temporary loan interest, I think we will show an appropriation surplus" for fiscal 1980.

One of the accounts that showed a surplus for 1980 was the Highway Department's personal services (payroll) account, which was raided for $80,000 in transfers Monday night.

Councillor Stephen McGrath wanted to know how come the account wound up with such a large surplus.

"We haven't hired anyone since September, 1979," said Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti, "and the normal rate of attrition enabled us to save $80,000."

Lynch, Harold, Continue As DAV Officers

Two Quincy residents, George J. Lynch and Joseph R. Harold, have been named to continuing terms as officers in the Massachusetts Department, Disabled American Veterans.

Lynch was elected to his 24th term as department treasurer, and Harold is beginning his 30th year as department adjutant.

Elections were held at the recent 59th annual state convention at the Park Plaza Hotel, Boston.

Visting Fireman Saves Man In Quincy Fire

William Glover, a volunteer firefighter from Wareham, was doing some maintenance work at the Presidential Estates, off Southern Artery last Friday, when he spotted smoke coming from an apartment window.

He entered Apartment 2 at 55 Presidential Drive and found the occupant, Dennis Conroy, unconscious on the bed and the rooms full of smoke coming from a kitchen fire.

Glover carried Conroy from the building and, said Deputy Fire Chief Joseph Jackson, Conroy was sitting up in the driveway when fire engines arrived. He refused hospitalization.

Jackson said the fire apparently started with some food that was left cooking on the stove. It was confined to the stove and some kitchen cabinets. There was no estimate of damage.

McCauley Seeks To Trim 2 Administrative Raises

City Councillor Francis X. McCauley says he doesn't mind granting pay raises to department heads and other city administrators but he feels that two of them are excessive.

Two weeks ago, the Council passed an ordinance giving pay hikes to Labor Negotiator Joseph P. McParland and Police Counsel John Sharry, with McParland getting $3551 in retroactive pay and Sharry $4051.

All the other department heads got $1,500.

"I think these two increases are excessive, specially in a year when we have a number of people being laid off and many people on the verge of being laid off," said McCauley.

His proposed ordinance change would reduce the retroactive pay to McParland and Sharry to the level of other department heads. McCauley also proposed that the Council eliminate the post of budget coordinator, a job that hasn't been filled since the administration of Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia.

"When Mayor Tobin took office," said McCauley, "he told the City Council he was not filling that position."

"As a matter of fact, he asked the Council to transfer funds from available balances to increase the salaries of his executive secretary and his administrative assistant and I think he picked up an additional secretary. We went along with that."

"Since the job is not to be filled it makes good sense just to eliminate it."

McCauley's proposals were sent to the Ordinance Committee.

Firefighter Commended For Aid To Pair

Quincy firefighter Mario Pasquale has been commended for his aid to two stricken persons during a recent Mass at St. John's Church.

In the space of several minutes, Pasquale assisted a boy, who was choking on a piece of candy, and a woman who suffered a seizure during the Mass.

"The above alertness on the part of Firefighter Pasquale reflects well on the Fire Department," wrote Fire Chief Edward Barry in commending him.

The two incidents took place during the Saturday, June 14, 4 p.m. Mass, celebrating the Feast of St. Anthony.

Barry gave the following account of the incidents:

Pasquale observed a six-year old youth in trouble a few pews in front of him. The lad was white and looked as if he was going to faint. Pasquale picked the boy up and noted a purple sound from the boy as if he was choking. Pasquale turned the boy upside down and slapped him on the back a few times whereupon a large piece of candy was dislodged from the boy's throat. He was taken outside the church and soon his color returned. The name of the boy is not known.

A few minutes later, a woman was having a seizure and Pasquale also assisted this woman. With the help of Lt. George MacDonald and Firefighter George King, the Rescue was called. She was treated (name unknown) and taken to Quincy City Hospital by Quincy Police ambulance.

Shea Rink Roller For Summer

The MDC's Shea Rink isn't the MDC's Shea Rink anymore at least for the summer.

West Quincy businessman Rene Lumaghini has rented the ice rink for the summer for use as a roller skating rink.

The opening of the roller rink drew some complaints from residents who didn't know the facility had been rented to a private concern. Lumaghini said.

Lumaghini said he's talked over the complaints with Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets.

"He didn't even realize it was me," he said.

The Shea Rink will remain a roller skating facility until Sept. 15, when it will once again become a hockey and ice skating rink. Until then, it will be open seven days a week.

From Monday through Thursday, the rink will be open 2 to 5 and 7 to 10 p.m.

On weekends, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, it will be open 2 to 5 and 7:30 to 11:30 p.m. On those three nights, disc jockeys will present recorded music.

 "Yes," said Shea, "it will have to be in the form of a supplemental budget."
 Councillor Joanne Condon noted that the letter to Tobin said the money would come from "existing funds."

The letter indicates existing

"As I looked at it my eyes kind of beamed. Boy, would I like to have that in Quincy."

"Anything that brings business into Quincy is good," said Jason Feldman, president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA) and proprietor of Jason's.

"But we didn't know what sort of developments this man has done. Chestnut Hill was a very attractive mall and very well done. We were impressed."

"I think something like that is feasible here," said Bernie Reisberg of Bernie's Modern Formal. "I think it could be quite a shot in the arm; it could be just what Quincy needs."

"As long as we know what direction we're headed in and as long as there's a program for relocation, I think there's a lot of support among businessmen for this sort of thing."

"I was favorably impressed," said Jack Kerrigan of Baskin Robbins. "I feel they have the expertise to put this together and I feel they have the contacts."

"I feel there's an awful lot of support for it but when it comes to the money, who's got the money? If it's going to come to fruition there's going to have to be a lot of discussion."

"That mall looked like something downtown Quincy could use," said Austin Wickins, executive secretary of the QCBPA. "It's very impressive, well-built, well-designed."

"Mr. Weiner appears to be a top-notch builder and I think he's serious about building in downtown Quincy. It could be just what the doctor ordered."

"The reaction by the whole group was very positive," said Jayne Morovich, director of community development for the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

"I think Mr. Weiner allayed a lot of their fears about his commitment to the independent retailer."

Mayor Tobin said the possibility of a mall in downtown Quincy has been talked about for years.

"Downtown Quincy has been studied and talked to death," he said. "The time has come. Do they want something to happen or do funds," she said to Shea, "and you're talking about an appropriation order or a supplemental budget. I don't understand."

"It will have to be charged to the revenue of 1980-81," said Shea.

"The letter is incorrect, then," said Condon.

"Yes, it is," Shea agreed.

The letter was sent back to the they not want something to happen?"

Mayor for corrections. It will come back to the Council, perhaps at a special meeting during the summer, in the form of a supplemental budget or request.

"We made a hard and fast rule," said Mayor Tobin, "that there would be no supplemental budget requests entertained from any departments."

"Technically, the auditor should have called that a supplemental request. I don't want to confuse that with a supplemental budget and give anyone the idea I'm entertaining supplemental budgets."

"I am entertaining only these items that I feel would be in the best interests of the city."

Tobin conceded that it was the Mayor who cut the Civil Defense expense account from the budget.

but, he added, it was the Council that cut the legal expenses for CAAN and the Gestetner machine operator.

Talking It Out With Right Attitude

Harvard Prof. John T. Dunlop calls the recent agreement between Quincy and its firefighters "a symbol of what can happen constructively when parties who know the problems on both sides sit down in direct negotiations and work those problems out."

We couldn't agree more.

And we are happy to see that the spirit of negotiation that began with the firefighters has now apparently moved on to the policemen, who this past week settled their dispute with the city on essentially the same terms as the firefighters.

These are difficult financial times for Quincy. The burden of taxation on property owners has, in many cases, reached the breaking point. But, at the same time, the firefighters and policemen, as well as other city employees, have gone without a raise in pay for two years at a time of double digit inflation.

Under those conditions it is difficult indeed to look at, let alone recognize and appreciate, the problems on both sides.

Yet the firefighters were able to look at them and agree to forgo two months of retroactive wage increases and postpone a bonus granted by an arbitrator. The city, in turn, was able to put back on the payroll 13 firefighters due to be dismissed for reasons of economy.

And the policemen apparently recognizing the reason that was starting to prevail in Quincy's long-unsettled labor picture, patterned their pitch to a state mediator along the lines of the firefighters' settlement, which assured labor peace in Quincy at long last.

We congratulate all sides in the late dispute --- firefighters, policemen and Mayor Tobin. They may not have gotten all they wanted by negotiations, but it beats name-calling, picket lines and trips to the courthouse that have been going on for much too long.

Quincy Motor Co.

"This decision was not an easy one for me to make and was only arrived at after many months and sleepless nights," said Leo Darr. And with that he announced with obvious sadness that Quincy Motor Co. was closing its doors after 60 years and he was retiring after a half-century in the business.

We are saddened, too, that it had to happen. The Quincy Motor Co., Mr. Darr, his sons, Richard, and Stephen, and their staff added up to a classy operation.

It was a good firm to do business with. They treated you right. They were people of their word.

The automobile business isn't what it used to be. The economy isn't either. These are tough times and Quincy Motor Co. is a victim.

Quincy is losing a good friend—and good friends.

We are sorry to see them go.

The OTHER Time Lou Gehrig Wept

Old time baseball fans remember with deep affection Lou Gehrig's tearful farewell in a packed Yankee Stadium 41 years ago Friday.

He called himself "the luckiest person on the face of the earth" that July 4, 1939 even though he was dying of a rare paralytic disease then known to doctors as amyotrophic lateral sclerosis now commonly called "Lou Gehrig's Disease".

Some 61,808 fans jammed into Yankee Stadium and millions listening on radio listened to his every word and many fought back, or tried to, their own tears as one of the greatest baseball players of all time bid his farewell.

The disease earlier that year snapped at 2,130 his all-time record of most consecutive games played (starting in 1925) and on June 2, 1941 would take his life at age 38.

Now, former Quincy newsmen Ed Spargo of Sherman St. Wollaston, who vividly recalls that emotional scene at Yankee Stadium recalls the "other time" that Lou Gehrig wept.

"I doubt if anyone save the surviving members of the 1927 New York and Washington clubs is aware of the OTHER time Lou wept," he writes.

Ed was told of this incident by the late Foster (Babe) Ganzel who played for the Washington Senators that year. Ganzel, Ed notes, batted "a sensational .438" while playing on a part-time basis.

The Ganzel family, out of Wollaston, produced two other major leaguers: his father, Charley, and his uncle, John.

Shortly before Babe himself died of a terminal disease, he wrote to Ed, a long-time friend:

"First base at the old Washington, D.C. park was only 30 or 35 feet from our bench where I sat one sultry summer afternoon back in 1927. Suddenly, my mates in the dugout started riding gentlemanly Lou Gehrig something awful as he was stationed on first base for the Yankees.

"Ugly cuss words were fired at him and he was called a sissy—the supreme insult to a big, strapping gent like Gehrig. The verbal barrage continued unabated, getting progressively nastier, until good-natured and powerfully-built Lou walked over, tears streaming down his cheeks. He was mad enough to kill but said only, in a calm voice: 'Men, stop the personal abuse and ride me like gentlemen.' With that he strode off and returned to his position.

"Well, stop it did—pronto—as we all breathed a collective sigh of relief. Firpo Mayberry, our ace relief pitcher, aptly expressed our views with: 'Gee, I'm sure glad Lou decided to cry rather than resort to violence.'

Ganzel added:

"To which I murmured an 'amen'."

11% Pay Hike

Settlements Retain Police, Fire Parity

"There is a long tradition of parity between the Fire and Police Departments," explained Labor Negotiator Joseph P. McParland.

The tradition held up last week as members of the Quincy Police Betterment Association accepted an arbitrator's award that was modeled after the previous week's settlement with the firefighters.

The policemen will receive an 11 per cent pay hike March 1, 1980; 5 per cent July 1, 1980; and 3 per cent Jan. 1, 1981. They'll get bonuses of $800 on July 30, 1980, and again on July 30, 1981.

The award was the city's "last best offer," selected by mediator Marcia Greenbaum, who said that the union's "last best offer" was almost the same as the city's.

Last week, the firefighters, who received their award from the Dunlop Commission in April, agreed to forgo retroactive pay from Jan. 1 to March 1, 1980, and move their bonuses ahead to 1980 and 1981.

In return, the city cancelled the proposed layoff of nine firefighters and the reduction in rank of four lieutenants. Those Fire Department posts were restored to the budget by the City Council Monday night.

RON KAUFMAN, once of Quincy, now of Holbrook, has rebounded from George Bush's unsuccessful presidential campaign to the post of political director of the Republican State Committee, which is making another attempt to turn Massachusetts into a two-party state.

Bush may have failed in his attempt to land the GOP presidential nomination but Ron was a success, having had a hand in Bush primary victories in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Michigan.

And he and his wife, the former Allison Card, sister of Rep. Andrew Card (R-Holbrook) are expecting their second child along about the first of October.

150,000 Celebrate '4th' At Merrymount

More than 150,000 people thronged Merrymount Park to greet 2,000 holiday marchers at Fourth of July festivities and listen to speeches by Cong. Richard B. Wigglesworth (R-Milton) and State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley (D-Boston).

"Let the men and women of Quincy today," said Hurley, "bend their shoulders in loyalty and friendship to the great work of our day; the building up of the United States under our common leader, President Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Mayor Charles A. Ross touched off the midnight bonfire in the park, which had been guarded by police after Quincy Legion Post Cmdr. Lorimer F. Brown told them a "certain element" from Neponset planned to ignite it ahead of time so it wouldn't conflict with theirs.

The day before the Fourth, Quincy Legionnaires hosted some 5,000 children with merry go 'round and ferris wheel rides under the direction of Harry Ingalls, who also led the youngsters in a community sing.

The Red Men's band from Wollaston, under the direction of Douglas Haydock, gave concerts on two nights from the acoustic shell in the park and the New England Troubadors played for dancing in the pavilion on the pageant grounds.

A last minute sale of fireworks at the Quincy Fireworks Store, 1586 Hancock St., had Yankee Boy two-inch flash salutes, five boxes for 10 cents; Globe torpedoes, 10 cents a dozen; and a dozen packages of No. 1 sparklers for 35 cents.

Raymond Young, 13, of 77 School St., was taken to City Hospital with burns about the face and body from an exploding firecracker.

Tax Collector Edward G. Morris spoke at the celebration at Merrymount Beach, where Helen Gavaza and Paul Benzaquin won prizes for the best costumes in the Horribles parade.

This Will Be Squantum's 72nd Consecutive 4th Of July Celebrations

By GORDON F. NELSON

Squantum will hold its 72nd consecutive Fourth of July celebration tomorrow (Friday), an annual event that has evolved into sort of a Homecoming Day for peninsula residents, past and present.

It was in 1909 that Squantum, just then moving from summer colony and farm area to residential section, joined the long list of cities and towns throughout the nation in observance of Independence Day.

The Quincy Telegram of Saturday, July 3, 1909 recorded the following:

SQUANTUM TO CELEBRATE MONDAY

The residents of Squantum are preparing for one of the most spectacular exhibitions of fireworks ever seen in Quincy on July 4th. This exhibition will be held on Petersons Rocks, an island that juts out into Quincy Bay and maybe witnessed for miles along the water front. The money was raised entirely by popular subscription and the large amount raised shows how patriotic the citizens of Squantum are.

The following committee has the affair in charge: J.R. Nelson, T. Callahan, F. Harper, J. Jepson.

Squantum in 1909 was rural countryside.

Open fields, dirt roads and beautiful shade trees dotted the landscape. Many stone fences were in evidence, built by the early generation of farmers who endured the tedious task of clearing from the fields the rocks left by the last ice age.

Here in 1909 many residents still farmed the land but all depended on delivery wagons to bring in supplies which could not be obtained at the Watts Corner Store.

Such was Squantum on its first 4th of July celebration.

The holiday observance, which was held on July 5, started when many of the Squantum residents made a morning trek to nearby Atlantic to enjoy an early celebration. They returned to Squantum in time to participate in afternoon activities of their own.

The activities in Squantum began with athletic events held on Loughan Field, located between Harbor View and Bay Sts.

Free ice cream and soda pop were given to the children, followed by a costume parade which was routed by the homes of residents who were unable to attend the festivities because of sickness.

The evening's entertainment of vaudeville acts was held on the veranda of the Squantum Inn later known as the Wauetta House, located near the entrance to the Squantum Park.

A brilliant fireworks display climaxed the first July 4th celebration on the peninsula.

This year, Squantum's 72nd consecutive observance of Independence Day, also known as Homecoming Day, when former residents pay an annual visit to renew acquaintances and enjoy the festivities.

Through the years the spirit of the Fourth has prevailed in Squantum as the residents have worked together for the community to help it grow into a fine residential area.

Lincoln Hancock School Study

5th, 6th Graders Get Close Look At Government

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Several dozen students from Quincy schools recently completed a study of state and local government and published a newspaper on the subject containing some interesting findings.

One student wondered why the state House of Representatives can start its day with a prayer, but students can't.

Another compared the group's trips to Quincy and Boston City Halls, and decided he liked Quincy's better. Boston's "Isn't like a City Hall. It is more like a company," he wrote.

A third found out Mayor Arthur Tobin doesn't like to talk about his longtime rival, Councillor Joseph LaRaia.

The study was part of the students' participation in the Elementary Laboratory Center program at the Lincoln Hancock School.

About 160 "gifted and academically talented" fifth and sixth graders from throughout the school system attend ELC classes at Lincoln Hancock one day a week. They take part in regular classes at their home schools during the rest of the week.

Once a year, each ELC class spends a full week on an in-depth study of a topic, such as ecology, local history or, in this case, government.

In April and May, two groups totalling about 80 students spent five days on trips to places like the State House, Boston and Quincy City Halls, the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library and Quincy District Court. The groups were "team-taught" by teachers Lorraine Sholler, Mark Dempsey and Peter Smith, assisted by student teacher Elizabeth Kirby.

During their visits, the students were able to meet and interview officials like Tobin, state Rep. Robert Cerasoli and Sheriff Clifford Marshall, all of Quincy.

After the week of field trips and interviews, the students broke up into smaller groups to create projects based on their study of government.

One group of six students - Carolyn Keddy, Richard

Wilson, Danny Jenkins, Julie McCole, Lark McLaren and Steven Protasawicki - published the "Government Gazette" based on the week.

The 10-pages of mimeographed sheets tell how the students felt about their contact with local government.

Lark McLaren noted that the state House of Representatives starts each meeting with a prayer.

"If they can have prayer, why can't we pray in school?" he asked. "In school, which is also a public institution, we are not allowed to pray. This is an obvious contradiction."

Julie McCole discussed the process by which a bill becomes a law, created a "State House Quiz" and made drawings of the landmarks visited by the students.

In his article by Richard Wilson, he thought the mayor was contradicting himself by seeking an increased city budget, but opposing a supplementary budget for school employees. He also reported the following exchange with the mayor:

"When I asked him how he felt about Abe Itkin (Tobin's opponent in last year's mayoral election), he said, 'He's a nice gentleman.' I also asked him how he felt about Joe LaRaia. He said, 'next question, please.'"

Carolyn Keddy told about the group's meeting with Sheriff Marshall:

"While he was talking, his beeper went off. He made a phone call and told us two men had escaped from the jail. One man was charged with armed robbery, the other was charged with double murder!"

Steven Protasawicki reported on the trip to Quincy District Court, where the students watched several trials and met with a judge.

Danny Jenkins compared the City Halls of Quincy and Boston:

"Boston City Hall is much fancier than that of Quincy. Boston has big sculptures in the front of the building and inside it has four art galleries. It has things for pleasure that most city halls don't have, like the art galleries."

"I like Quincy City Hall because Boston City Hall is big and open. It isn't like a city hall. It is more like a company."

'Decision Not Easy'

Quincy Motor Co. Closing After 60 Years

"To all of you, thanks, and God bless you," said Quincy Motor Company owner Leo Darr in closing that firm's doors for the last time Friday.

Darr's surprise Friday afternoon announcement left about 50 persons jobless and eliminated the oldest Ford dealership on the South Shore.

It also ended the firm's 60-year history and Darr's own 50 years in the auto industry.

"This decision was not an easy one for me to make," said Darr in an advertisement, "and was only arrived at after many months and sleepless nights. My age was a contributing factor to this decision. I concluded in view of this and other factors, that further continuance in the business would not be in the best interests of my family, my friends, my customers or myself."

But the national slump in the economy in general and auto industry in particular were also blamed for the closing. Quincy Darr, 70, also thanked the firm's customers and employees for their support over the years.

He had been owner of Quincy Motor since 1957, and is the firm's chairman of the board. His sons Richard and Stephen had been president and vice president respectively.

One of the most unusual big league baseball managers of all-time was the man who managed the Braves in 1929. He was a judge, Emil Fuchs, who bought the club, and despite having no previous baseball experience - either as a player or manager - he decided to manage the team... Fuchs said they couldn't do any worse under him than they had the previous year when they finished next-to-last... But they did... Under Fuchs they wound up last, and he gave up his one-year managing career.

Did you know that the Houston Astros who play indoors in the Astrodome - amazingly once had a game called because of rain... It happened in 1976 when 10 inches of rain fell in the Houston area, flooding parts of the city... Stadium personnel and many fans were not to get to the Astrodome, so that indoor game was postponed because of the rain.

What are the most games any relief pitcher ever won in one season in major league baseball?... The record was set by Roy Face of the Pirates in 1959... Face, pitching exclusively in relief, won 18 games that season, and lost only one.

Mariners Host Weymouth After Rockland Explosion

The Quincy Bay Mariners, after an up and down week, will host league leading Weymouth tonight (Thursday) at 8 o'clock under the lights at Adams Field in a South Shore Coast League game.

Sunday the Mariners, with a 7-4-1 league record will play a doubleheader at Scituate at 1 o'clock.

Quincy absorbed its worst defeat of the season Sunday when Rockland, exploding for 11 runs in the first two innings, breezed to a 20-3 victory at Adams Field. The scheduled second game was rained out.

While Rockland's Ray Wells pitched eight-hit ball, Quincy's pitchers were mauled for 17 hits. Paul Vespaziani and Fran Donovan had two hits each for the Mariners.

Quincy and Whitman engaged in a wild game last Thursday which wound up in a 9-9 tie and will be replayed at a later date.

The Mariners poured out 14 hits but four errors enabled Rockland to score several unearned runs. Coach Bob Benn and Fran Donovan had a double and two singles each, Bob Mayo and Vespaziani had two singles each. Vin Todd pitched well enough to win but his defense let him down.

In its previous game Quincy dropped a 5-4 squeaker at Rockland after overcoming a 4-0 deficit and tying the game at 4-4. Rockland scored the winning run in the final inning.

Ron Donovan was Quincy's starting pitcher but was relieved in the second after two walks, two errors and a double by Woody Whitty. John Mazollia pitched shutout ball until the last inning.

The Mariners scored three runs in the third inning when Mike McCormack singled, Vespaziani walked, Joe Seckler singled home a run, Mark Giordani walked to fill the bases and Benn and Tom Perry walked to force home two runs. Quincy tied it in the top of the seventh when Fran Donovan was hit by a pitch, moved up on a passed ball and scored on Jim Maze's single.

The Mariners defeated Abington, 4-1, on Bob Padula's six-hitter. He pitched shutout ball after Bill Gratta had homered in the first inning for Abington's run. He had good control and issued his only walk in the seventh inning.

Quincy scored all its runs in the fifth. Todd Mills reached on an error, Benn walked and John Blackwell's bunt single loaded the bases. Fran Donovan singled home two runs, an infield out moved the runners along and Vespaziani's single drove in the final two runs.

Under Investigation

Suspicious Blaze Guts Harbor Marina Building

A suspicious three-alarm fire that gutted a vacant building at Boston Harbor Marina in Squantum Saturday night is under investigation.

Deputy Fire Chief Carl Valenti said the fire was apparently set on the second floor of the building, which had been the control tower of the former Squantum Naval Air Station.

Valenti could give no estimate of damages from the fire but said the building was a total loss. He expected the building to be demolished sometime this week.

The fire, reported about 9 p.m., took firefighters about two hours to extinguish. Firefighter David Cooper was treated at Quincy City Hospital for smoke inhalation. He was the only person injured.

The building, owned by Boston Edison and leased by the Boston Harbor Marina Corp., was used to store old plows, boats and other equipment.

WEEK OF JULY 3.

AQUARIUS—January 21-February 19

New month is off to light, bright start. Watch that you don't volunteer too often—you're in an extremely giving mood. Time is right for at least one major decision.

PISCES—February 20-March 20

Dig for the facts and understand what's expected of you. Red tape becomes more tangled by Tuesday. Loved ones are eager to give you advice—some of which may be more important than you'd think.

ARIES—March 21-April 20

Charming distractions make for a less than productive week, but morale soars with the news of advancement. If traveling, you could meet a kindred spirit along the route.

TAURUS—April 21-May 22

New tactics help you face recent challenges. Friendship with Aquarius or Gemini takes on new dimension. Weekend events feature a surprise personality. Don't resist spur-of-the-moment travel ideas.

GEMINI—May 23-June 21

Intellectual powers are strong, and your natural charm gleams. Use this high-powered week to carry out plans and make future arrangements. But find time, too, to let loved ones share ideas and affections.

CANCER—June 22-July 22

Fending friends ask you to play referee—proceed at your own risk. Postponements are a way of life, but worry not; a lot of behind-the-scenes activity is happening now—and good news awaits!

LEO—July 23-August 22

A conservative approach is favored—in relationships and on the job. Neighborhood project is more exciting than you might think. Conflict with relative ends as of Monday.

VIRGO—August 23-September 22

The love of your life can be a little mysterious—but don't press. Reputation is on the upswing. If making a major purchase, check that guarantee if foolproof. Watch out for practical jokers on weekend.

LIBRA—September 23-October 22

A good period for strengthening family ties: write to overseas relatives, host an impromptu reunion. Be extra-alert to your own good ideas—and follow them up before someone else has the chance.

SCORPIO—October 23-November 21

Social plans are rearranged—and usually for the best. Travel has surprise twists—which may lead to spending. Loved ones are more relaxed than they've been. Gloomy types become surprisingly perky.

SAGITTARIUS—November 22-December 22

Small financial setback—and then money matters improve significantly. Great week for holidays and holiday planning. Bidding relationships can grow—but don't force anything just now.

CAPRICORN—December 23-January 20

Play up action, play down chatter. Minor financial setback is offset by major romantic gain. Put creative talent to work—enjoy a ballet with a loved one, pen a sonnet or paint a portrait.

BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK

Your famous persistence pays off by November—notably in the realms of career and finance. Try to overcome shyness by being less subtle in your demands. Intuitive gifts prove more remarkable than ever in coming months. Diplomacy becomes more important than ever.

BORN THIS WEEK

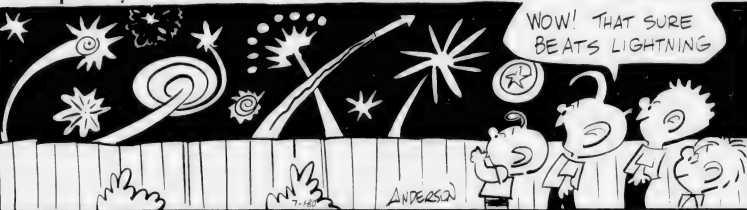

July 3rd, director Ken Russell; 4th, jazz great Louis Armstrong; 5th, showman P.T. Barnum; 6th, singer Della Reese; 7th, musician Ringo Starr; 8th, singer Steve Lawrence; 9th, actor Richard Roundtree.

NOW FOR NOW

(or payment by check
is coming back in style.)

In this topsy-turvy economic period, there is one stable, safe way to handle your money—open a NOW account at our Bank.

What can a NOW account do for you and your money management?

Well, as the use of credit cards becomes more and more restricted, a NOW account lets you switch to a cash operating basis, thus avoiding interest charges for time payments. And your money in your NOW account is earning 5% interest per annum. Thus you get the best of both worlds—you avoid interest charges while collecting interest for yourself.

But, you say, going on a cash basis means I can't make larger or more costly purchases and spread the payments. In this economy with interest charges going up almost daily, maybe that is not all bad.

It depends on how much you need a "big ticket" item. If you have a wife and five youngsters and your washing machine breaks down hopelessly, you need a washer, of course. If you don't have the cash, you charge it. But if you can switch to a cash only (or check) basis for most items, you will save money.

The trouble with cash itself is that cash is dangerous. You can be robbed or you run the risk of losing it. NOW account checks are safe and you have an ongoing record of your expenditures.

Think about it.

Should your household budget be keyed into a NOW account?

Will it save substantial interest payments?

Will it be safe and convenient for you?

If you don't have a NOW account and want to open one (for as little as $10.00) come in to our main office or one of our branches.

We think a NOW account is the simplest and best way you have to help fight inflation.

Are "Free" NOW Accounts Really Free?

You will notice in this advertisement we did not use the term "free NOW account." That's because we want no confusion about our NOW accounts even though we feel that we come as close as anyone in offering NOW accounts at a basic minimum cost with no hidden charges.

Here is the way we work our NOW accounts:
You can open an account for $10.00.

As long as you maintain a balance of $10.00 or more you will get interest credited monthly at 5% per annum.

Overdraft charges are $5.00 each, which covers the paperwork in notifying the customer.

Stop payment fees are $5.00 for the same reason.

And the only other charge is $3.85 for each book of 200 plain checks imprinted with your name, address and account number.

What about those which claim to have "free" NOW accounts? They can demand a $300 monthly balance—or $500.00. The only minimum at our bank is $10.00 if you want to earn interest.

The thing to think about when someone says "totally free NOW account" is this: if you don't keep your balance at $300.00 all month long, you can be charged 20 cents for every check you write that month even if you bring your account up to $300.00 within 24 hours. Nothing like that at Quincy Cooperative!

We remind our customers that nothing in life is really free.....but the cost of a NOW account at our bank is very much less than for most other banking institutions.

City Of Quincy

Office of The Mayor

Welcome To Historic Quincy

Welcome to Historic Quincy, a city rich in history and tradition.

It is difficult for residents and visitors alike to walk the streets and pathways of our city without feeling the spiritual presence of the great men and women of our glorious past.

These are the same streets that once felt the tread of John and John Quincy Adams, the second and sixth presidents of the United States. Born in farmhouses side by side, they remain the only father and son to occupy the presidency.

John Hancock walked here, too, wooing and winning the beautiful Dorothy Quincy in the days before he signed the Declaration of Independence in a bold hand so large that King George III could read it without his glasses.

It was here that the Massachusetts Constitution --- the model for the United States Constitution --- was drafted by John Adams, his firebrand cousin Samuel, and James Bowdoin in the very house where John Quincy Adams was born.

Rails for the first commercial railroad in the country were laid here to transport Quincy granite for the construction of the Bunker Hill Monument and the first ironworks operated here, modest forerunner of the great American steel industry of today.

The list of Quincy people and places that played such important roles in the development of our country is endless . . .

I am proud to be mayor of a city with such rich heritage and to hold the same office once occupied by Charles Francis Adams of that noble family line.

Again, welcome to Historic Quincy.

May your visit be a pleasant and inspirational one.

Sincerely yours,

ARTHUR H. TOBIN
Mayor

The Adams Cottages

Birthplaces Of Our Only Father-Son Presidents

It was the North Precinct of Braintree then, a sprawling tract of woods and farmlands on the gently rolling hills some 10 miles south of the Boston Stone along the winding Coast Road to Plymouth.

Something less than 1,500 people lived in the North, Middle and South Precincts of Braintree in the year 1735 and two of them were Deacon John Adams, 44, farmer and cordwainer, and his wife, Susanna, 26.

Their home was a weathered gray farmhouse with a high peaked roof and attached lean-to kitchen set on seven acres of farmland at roughly Milepost 11 of the Coast Road, just where it turned up the wooded slopes of Penn's Hill toward the Monaquot River ford.

He was a pillar of his rural community, Mr. Adams was, a deacon in the First Parish Church, a lieutenant in the Braintree militia and a town constable with a forceful personality and tact that enabled him to collect taxes from his neighbors.

He was a hard-working farmer whose cider was acknowledged best in town; he worked in leather during the winter months; and he had an eye on an adjoining piece of farmland, 9½ acres owned by the Billings brothers, complete with a farmhouse similar to his own.

Susanna Adams was a Boylston of Brookline, socially a cut above her husband, and perhaps there were moments in the simple house at the foot of Penn's Hill when she thought of the home of her uncle, the noted Dr. Zabdiel Boylston of Brookline, whose furniture came all the way from London.

Their first child, a son who was named John for his father, was born in the southeast bedroom of the farmhouse on Oct. 19, 1735 (Old Style). He would become the second president of the United States.

Deacon John purchased the house next door for 500 pounds in 1744 and it was ready 20 years later when young John moved in with his brand new bride, the former Abigail Smith, the preacher's sparkling daughter from the next town of Weymouth.

Their second child, a son who was named John Quincy Adams after his great grandfather, Col. John Quincy, was born there on July 11, 1767. He would become the sixth president of the United States.

The junction of Franklin St., Independence Ave. and President Ave. in South Quincy is the only place in the country where the birthplaces of two presidents who are father and son stand side by side in the same city.

The precise age of the two cottages, now painted red, at the foot of Penn's Hill is not known.

When the John Adams Birthplace was restored by the Daughters of Revolution in 1897, a brick bearing the date 1681 was discovered under the southeast corner, and the house was known to have been occupied by one Joseph Penniman in that year.

And a man named Samuel Belcher was living in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace as early as 1663, when it was little more than a one-room shack with fireplace. It was built to its present size in 1716, as evidenced by a date brick found in the new fireplace.

According to Henry Adams, a grandson of President John Quincy Adams, no member of the family lived in the cottages after 1818, although ownership remained in the Adams family until 1940.

Both houses were restored by the Adams Realty Trust, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 1896 at a cost of $1,650 and the John Adams Birthplace a year later at an expense of $515.49.

They were presented to the city of Quincy in 1940 and supervised by the Quincy Historical Society until they were turned over to the U.S. National Parks Service in 1979.

The Adams Birthplaces at 133 and 141 Franklin St. are currently being restored by the USNPS to the style of the early 1800s and are closed to the public while rehabilitation work is going on. An interpretive program is given on the grounds free of charge, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., April 19 to Oct. 15.

ADAMS MANSION NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE

The Adams Mansion

Home And Summer White House Of 2 Presidents

Josiah Quincy, the one who built railroads around New England and founded the cooperative bank movement in Massachusetts, was in his boyhood a frequent visitor to the mansion where John Adams, the second president of the United States, lived in retirement.

Later, he wrote with wry amusement about Sunday dinner with the aging patriarch of the Adams clan and his wife, Abigail, a dinner that inevitably began with a thick pudding made from boiled corn meal.

"... it being thought desirable to take the edge off one's hunger before reaching the joint," wrote Quincy.

"Indeed, it was considered wise to stimulate the young to fill themselves with pudding, by the assurance that the boy who managed to eat the most of it should be helped most abundantly to the meat, which was to follow.

"It need not be said that neither the winner nor his competitors found much room for meat at the close of their contest; and so the domestic economy of the arrangement was very apparent."

Quincy, as a young Harvard law student, stopped by several times a week in summer to talk and read to the former President. He found the visits delightful. Indeed, the Adams of the cold and austere public mien was never more relaxed and warm than he was at his country home in Quincy.

The original house, a small part of the present building, was built probably in 1731 by Major Leonard Vassall, a wealthy West Indian sugar planter who lived in Cambridge and apparently used it for a summer place.

His daughter, Mrs. Anna Borland, who was a Loyalist during the Revolution, abandoned the house to leave with the British forces when they evacuated Boston in 1776. For a while it was used as a haven for rebel refugees fleeing the war zones.

Mrs. Borland returned to reclaim the house after the Revolution and John Adams, then in Europe as the first American ambassador to London, purchased it for 600 pounds through the good offices of one Cotton Tufts of Weymouth, his wife Abigail's cousin.

The Adamses were about to return to the United States after seven years abroad and Abigail was concerned that John's books and papers and the furnishings they had acquired in Europe would not fit into their old farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill where they lived before.

The deal was closed on Sept. 26, 1787, and the deed is still on file in the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in which the Adams purchase is specified as a house, barn and other buildings on seven acres of land with some 76 acres more scattered around the North Precinct of Braintree.

There are indications that Abigail was at first disappointed with her purchase. It was a lot smaller than she remembered it.

"In height and breadth it feels like a wren's house," she wrote to her daughter, Abigail, the wife of Col. William S. Smith. "Let Col. Smith come without heels to his shoes or he will not be able to walk upright."

Abigail and John Adams moved into the house, which they named "Peacefield," after his retirement from the presidency in 1801 and lived there until they died.

It was from the "Old House," as the family called it, that John Adams carried on his long and increasingly warm correspondence with his old rival, Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, who had succeeded him in the presidency. In retirement, they became firm friends as they outlasted their contemporaries.

"Thomas Jefferson lives," whispered John Adams as he lay dying in the Old House. He was wrong. Jefferson, in far away Monticello, Va., had preceded him in death by a few hours on the same day.

It was July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

The Old House, which served as summer White House for two generations, was home to four generations of the Adams family, the last, Brooks Adams, dying in February, 1927. It was taken over by the U.S. National Parks Service in 1946 to become the Adams Mansion National Historic Site.

The site, located at 135 Adams St., is open to the public from April 19 to Nov. 10 daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is 50 cents with children under 16 admitted free.

FIRST PARISH CHURCH

First Parish Church

Only Church Where 2 Presidents Are Buried

In 1949, when the present First Parish Church building, the Old Stone Temple, was 121 years old, it was ruled officially that the church is older than the city itself and the town before it.

It was then that the late historian William Churchill Edwards was called upon to resolve a minor dispute that involved the rounding of the corners of the church lot in downtown Quincy.

"Almost the first subject to which the minds of the early settlers of our country were turned after they landed here was the formation of a church," said Edwards.

The first church in these parts was established as a branch of the Church of Boston in 1636. It became a church in its own right in 1639. The Mount Wollaston section of Boston was incorporated as the town of Braintree on May 23, 1640. Ergo, the church came first!

Quincy's first house of worship, the branch of the Church of Boston, was called the "Chapel of Ease," and if it was neglected by early historians it was because its first pastor, the Rev. John Wheelwright, his sister-in-law, Anne Hutchinson, and others were banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony for heresy.

The new church, the one that lasted, was gathered by covenant on Sept. 26, 1639, and it was holding services in its third meeting house in 1732 when its pastor was the Rev. John Hancock, father of the bold first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Son John also was a member.

The affairs of the church and the town of Quincy were one and the same until 1824 when church and state were separated in Massachusetts and the Congregational Society was established to handle parochial matters.

The old Hancock meeting house was still standing, although a little run down, on the south lawn of the present church lot in 1822 when former President John Adams deeded the interest from certain of his lands and granite from his pastures to build a stone temple.

It was completed in Greek revival style at a cost of $30,488.56 — which was some $3,000 less than architect Alexander Parrish's estimate — and dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, with John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, holding Pew No. 1.

Even before the church was dedicated, the mortal remains of its benefactors, John and Abigail Adams, were transferred to tombs in the crypt of the church and, in 1852, the bodies of John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa, joined them.

It is the only church in the United States in which two Presidents are buried. The only other church in which a President is buried is the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington D.C., where President Woodrow Wilson is entombed.

The First Parish Church at 1306 Hancock St., also known as the Church of the Presidents, was accorded the status of a national landmark by the U.S. government in 1971 and placed on the National Register of Historic Places as a building that has "historic value to the nation."

Still an active Unitarian church, it is open to the public for tours from mid-May through mid-September, Monday through Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Donations are accepted. There is a charge of 50 cents per adult for organized tour groups, which should make an appointment at least one week in advance. Tours of the church at other times during the year may also be made by appointment.

Quincy is French

The Quincy family name is actually French, probably deriving from an ancestor who crossed the English Channel from Normandy to fight with William the Conqueror at the Battle of Hastings in 1066.

A Saer de Quincy was among the English nobles who signed the Magna Carta in 1215 after wresting their rights from King John.

Origin Of Germantown

A glass factory flourished briefly in the Germantown section of Quincy in the mid-18th Century, importing much of its expert labor from Germany, hence the name Germantown.

Business is soaring in The Sea Belt.

The South Shore of Massachusetts

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce firmly believes that our area offers great advantages to business and industry. Hence, we have created the term we call "The Sea Belt" (trademark). The "Sea Belt" of New England, the South Shore of Massachusetts running from Boston to Plymouth, offers a rather unique geographic, social, and recreational opportunity for businesses to expand and relocate.

Through our affiliate, The South Shore Economic Development Corporation, we are helping individual businesses grow through business loans — with a special loan program for Quincy Center.

The tourism industry in the coastal South Shore Communities needs not only individual but also collective action with creative regional approaches. Quincy has recognized this need.

QUINCY YESTERDAY - with America's historical roots of democracy and industry, makes it potentially one of the most exciting historical cities in the United States.

QUINCY TODAY - where pride in our city has led to planned economic development where tourism play a part and the past and present blend through a sense of dedication and tradition.

QUINCY TOMORROW - a city that is broadening its scope for the future. Tourism is a viable economic industry and defines the Chamber's objectives of creating jobs and promoting business. The "Sea Belt" of New England, the South Shore of Massachusetts, will not be a short-lived phenomenon. We can say, to all concerned, that we are justifiably proud of our past and very confident of our future. Call on us:

Hancock Cemetery

Patriots, Early Settlers, Intrigue Buried Here

Henry, the first Adams in Quincy, is buried there. So is the Rev. John Hancock, father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. And Col. John Quincy, for whom the city is named.

But of all the 800 graves in the Hancock Cemetery, the Old Burying Ground of Colonial Quincy, most intriguing is one marked by a tombstone bearing this cryptic epitaph:

"Erected to the memory of John R. Grieve: Died Nov. 12, 1850, age 22 years, and Hannah Banks, his wife, died Nov. 12, 1850, age 15 years. Both of Zanesville, Ohio. Deluded by the writings of A.J. Davis."

The mystery of John and Hannah has never been fully solved.

They came to Quincy in 1850, not as man and wife, but as male cousins. John Green and George Sands. They obtained work in a shoe factory but rarely left their lodgings on Elm St., spending long hours reading books on spiritualism.

Co-workers thought that George Sands looked frail, almost effeminate. It was widely suspected that "he" was a girl. A scheme was devised to test the theory.

One day at lunch one of the shoe workers tossed George an apple. A man would catch it by closing his legs; a woman by spreading her skirt. Guess what "George" did!

Humiliated, John and Hannah never went back to the factory. Nor did they ever return to the house on Elm St. Their frozen bodies were found next spring by rabbit hunters on Penn's Hill, locked in a loving embrace.

Several months later, the father of John Grieve arrived from Ohio to bury the young couple. It was he who directed the words to be chiselled on the headstone. He explained no further.

A. J. Davis was never identified for sure. But Andrew Jackson Davis, a spiritualist, hypnotist and faith healer, was then practicing in Boston.

Among the belongings found in the Elm St. lodging house were these words, written by 15-year-old Hannah Banks:

"To the oppressed and downtrodden, to the suffering and afflicted, I would cry out . . . Death is only an event, only a circumstance in the eternal life experience of the human soul. Death is simply a birth into a new and perfect state of existence."

Not far from the grave of John and Hannah is a tomb bearing words that cry out of an earlier injustice:

"Three precious friends under this tombstone lie

HANCOCK CEMETERY

"Patterns to aged, youth and infancy.

"A great mother, her learned son, with child.

"The first and least went free. He was exiled.

"In love to Christ, this country, and dear friends

"He left his own, cross'd seas and for amends

"Was here extoll'd, and envy'd, all in a breath.

"His noble consort leaves, is drawn to death.

"Stranger changes may befall us ere we die.

"Blest they who will arrive eternity.

"God grant some names, O thou New England's friend.

"Don't sooner fade than thine, if times don't mend.

The tomb with its hidden message contains the family of the Rev. Leonard Hoar, third president of Harvard College, a man too liberal for his times.

He was forced by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to resign at the instigation of religious opponents and jealous colleagues for permitting Harvard to "languish and decay." Eight months later, in November, 1675, he was dead at 45.

In 1975, the same General Court, now of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, righted the 300-year-old wrong done to the Rev. Mr. Hoar by "proclaiming and confirming his innocence of any misdeeds, while president of Harvard College."

The cemetery, on Hancock St., Quincy Sq., next to City Hall, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

Dorothy Quincy Homestead

John Hancock: 'You I Love And You Alone'

An aura of romance surrounds the stately old house that is set back in the trees from the corner of Hancock St. and Butler Rd. on the banks of Furnace Brook.

There is the wallpaper with its blue cupids and pink flowers that was imported from France for the wedding of Dorothy Quincy, the vivacious daughter of the house, to Quincy-born John Hancock, a patriot on the run with a price on his head.

There are the words "You I Love and You alone," addressed by Hancock to his beloved Dorothy and scratched on a window pane with his diamond ring just before he fled to Lexington on the eve of the Revolution.

And there are the secret chambers and passageways, used, it was said, to hide fugitive patriots during the Revolution and, at an earlier date, even certain Englishmen fleeing a charge of regicide in the death of King Charles I.

Parts of the house were built in 1685 by Col. Edmund Quincy, the second of the name, on land that was granted to an earlier Edmund in 1638. The major part was built in 1706 by Edmund the third. (There were six Edmunds in all, four in a direct line; two nephews.)

The house was the social center of old Braintree during the regime of the fourth Edmund, largely because he sired five beautiful daughters around whom swirled a whole future generation of judges, generals and merchant kings.

The undisputed belle of the household was Dorothy, the coquettish youngest of the eight Quincy children, whose troth was soon plighted to John Hancock, the wealthy young businessman from Boston who was already becoming known as a leader of the rebels.

Tradition has it that they were to have been married in the north parlor of the Quincy homestead with its French cupid wallpaper when Revolution intervened and John had to flee with the British on his heels.

Eventually, they were wed Aug. 28, 1775, at the home of Thaddeus Burr, uncle of Aaron Burr (later vice president of the United States) in Fairfield, Conn.

After the Revolution and the death of Edmund the fourth in 1788 the old house passed from the Quincy family. The Hancocks wanted nothing to do with it. Their only son, John George Washington Hancock, was killed in a skating accident at age 9 while on a visit in 1787.

The house was acquired in 1904 by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames, who restored it with vintage furniture, utensils and clothing, and gave it to the state with the proviso that the Dames continue to run it.

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead is open to the public May through October, Tuesday through Sunday, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. (last tour at 4:30 p.m.). There is a $1 admission charge for adults, 25 cents for children.

A fitting memorial . . .

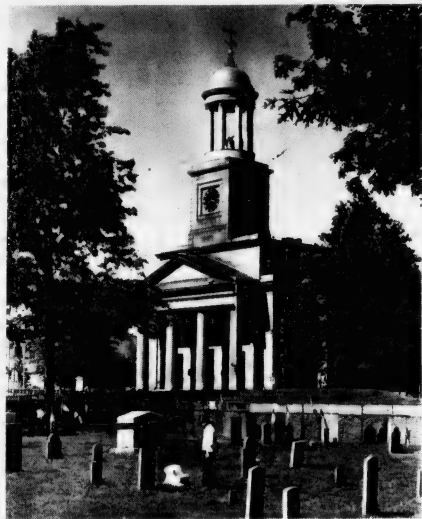

John Quincy Adams occupied the White House in 1828 when United First Parish Church, the Stone Temple, was built of Quincy granite, a fitting memorial to the enduring work of the men who founded the state and the nation.

Two presidents of the United States, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, and their wives, are buried side by side in vaults in the grotto of the Church.

The cornerstone of the Stone Temple was laid on June 11, 1827, and in it was placed a silver plate with the inscription: 'A temple for the worship of God, and for public instruction in the doctrines and duties of the Christian religion.'

Historic Hancock Cemetery in the foreground is the final resting place of early Quincy settlers and patriots among them Col. John Quincy for whom Quincy was named and Rev. John Hancock, a minister of First Parish Church and father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Abigail Adams Wife, Mother Of Presidents

Mrs. John Adams, the former Abigail Smith of Weymouth, is the only woman to be wife of one president and mother of another... and she could have been grandmother of a vice president.

Husband John was chief executive from 1797 to 1801; son John Quincy occupied the White House from 1825 to 1829; and grandson Charles Francis Adams ran for vice president on the Free Soil ticket in 1848.

An early advocate of women's rights, Abigail Adams once wrote to her husband, John:

"In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make, I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors.

"Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of the husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could."

ABIGAIL ADAMS

It Was Richard

For years, the first name of Capt. Wollaston, the leader of the original settlers of Quincy in 1625, was lost to history.

Only recently did the researches of H. Hobart Holly, historian of the Quincy Historical Society, turn up the information that it probably was Richard.

Adams Academy

On Site Of John Hancock's Birthplace

By modern standards, the boarding house at the corner of Hancock and Depot Sts. had all the aspects of a genteel prison.

Residents were forbidden to leave between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. They could not enter or leave at any time except by the hall door. They were banned from pool halls and bars. Smoking materials also were forbidden to them.

In exchange for good behavior, plus tuition ranging from $75 to $150 a year, they were given the best prep school education of the day for they were students at Adams Academy, which flourished from 1872 to 1907 in Quincy.

The academy was a gift of John Adams, the second president of the United States, who always had his checkbook ready to fill the spiritual and educational needs of the citizens of his beloved Quincy.

The trust fund, nourished by "rents, profits and emoluments" from certain Adams-owned properties, was set up in the Adams will of 1822, but it was not until 1869 that the fund was deemed large enough to start construction.

The location was specified by Adams himself as the corner of Adams and Hancock Sts., site of the birthplace of his childhood friend, John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The doors opened to the first students, 24 of them, on Sept. 4, 1872. Five years later, the academy reached a peak enrollment of 154 with an international student body ... 25 from Quincy, four from Washington, D.C., 125 from 14 states, two from England and one from Chile.

It had one of the earliest prep school football teams, too, recording a tie with the resolute of Boston on Oct. 21, 1876, a scant seven years after Princeton and Rutgers played the first college game. It whipped Andover three times from 1877-79.

The admissions catalogue specified that applicants be "well prepared in the usual studies of good grammar schools" and warned that "no pupils are desired whose parents do not intend to give them a collegiate education."

The best known headmaster was ADAMS ACADEMY, now home of the Quincy Historical Society.

Dr. William Everett, once acclaimed as one of the seven smartest men in the world. He ran the academy with a firm hand from 1878 to 1893 and again from 1897 to 1907. From 1893 to 1897, he was a U.S. congressman from Lynn.

Dr. Everett, an aimable if sometimes waspish eccentric, was widely known as the man who hated Abraham Lincoln. He had reason. His father was Edward Everett, whose masterful oration at Gettysburg was over-shadowed by Lincoln's notes scribbled on the back of an envelope.

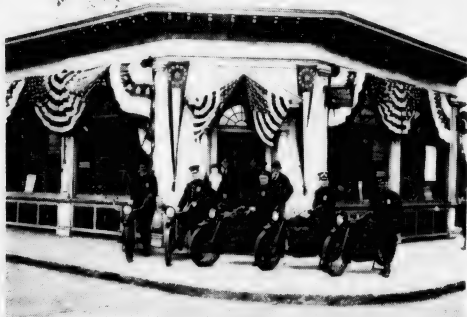

It was Dr. Everett who signaled the passing of Adams Academy ... and many other 19th Century classical prep schools ... at graduation exercises in 1907 when he said that "unless someone came forward and planked down $50,000, the academy will be closed."

Nobody did and on June 22, 1907, the Adams Academy officially closed its doors.

The building today is occupied by the Quincy Historical Society, which maintains a museum and research library in the old classrooms. The museum is open all year, Tuesday through Saturday, from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.; the library Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Abigail Adams Cairn

The Smoke Could Be Seen Over Bunker Hill

Abigail Adams was awakened at dawn in the farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill by the sound of faroff guns. All through the sweltering morning of June 17, 1775, as she hustled about with the chores, the dull boom of cannon intruded on her consciousness.

Riders on the Coast Road to Plymouth, stopping at the farmhouse for a drink of water, told her of a great battle underway on Breed's Hill in Charlestown.

One of them brought word that Dr. Joseph Warren had been killed in the fighting and little Abby, age 10, burst into tears, and John Quincy, nearly 8, felt bewildered and sad for Dr. Warren was the Adams family doctor in Boston.

In the afternoon, Abigail could stand it no longer. Taking Abby and John Quincy by the hand, she walked up the Coast Road to the top of Penn's Hill and climbed up on the rocks for a better view.

The panorama of the Bay, a shimmering blue in the sunshine, spread out before them, the tiny houses on the three hills of Boston and, beyond, the black smoke rising in billows.

"Good God," exclaimed Abigail, "they are burning Charlestown!"

The scene etched itself forever in John Quincy's memory.

The early days of the Revolution were times of turmoil in Old Braintree and its North Precinct, which was later called Quincy.

Her husband, John, was away most of the time at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, leaving 31-year-old Abigail to manage the farm and look to the needs of four small children, Abigail, John Quincy, Charles 5, and Thomas Boylston 3.

There were days of alarm as the British, penned up in Boston by the brand new Continental Army, foraged up and down the coast for supplies. Refugees from occupied Boston and the inner towns of Dorchester and Roxbury sometimes slept in the kitchen and in the fields.

As the wife of a member of Congress, Abigail was a center of attention. The house on the Coast Road was a favorite stopping place for travelers to Plymouth. Politicians up from Philadelphia made it a point to stop by for a visit with John Adams' wife.

Abigail was invited to visit Gen. George Washington's headquarters at Winter Hill. The aristocratic Washington was suspect among New Englanders. He was a Virginian; he was an Anglican; and, it was said, he held slaves. But John Adams liked him and Abigail was soon charmed.

One day, young John Quincy

came home to find his Uncle Elihu melting down Abigail's pewter spoons in the kitchen to make bullet molds. He looked at his mother and she looked back at him and something indefinable passed between them.

"Do you wonder," wrote the sixth president of the United States some 68 years later, "that a boy of 7 who witnessed this scene should be a patriot."

In 1896, where the old Coast Road (now Franklin St.) meets Viden Rd. atop Penn's Hill a stone cairn was built to mark the spot where Abigail and young John Quincy watched the Battle of Bunker Hill. It is open to the public free of charge.

The Granite Railway

First Commercial Railroad In U.S.

It was the darndest looking contraption that many among the distinguished gathering had ever seen.

Each of the three wagons had four wheels, 6 1/2 feet in diameter, surmounted by a smaller gear wheel which was used to raise and lower the cargo platform that was slung low between the wheels.

It rode on foot-high wooden rails, topped by iron plate, which rested on stone sleepers or cross ties, placed eight feet apart and firmly supported on crushed granite to a depth beyond the frost line.

On Saturday, Oct. 7, 1826, the wagons were laden with 16 tons of the finest Quincy granite and the opening day guests were properly amazed when a single horse moved the whole thing with ease more than three miles to a special wharf on the Neponset River.

The granite blocks, a particularly hard and weather-resistant stone capable of taking a brilliant polish, were en route to Charlestown, where they were building a monument to the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The Granite Railway, the first such commercial venture in the United States, was built specifically to transport stone for the Bunker Hill Monument.

That it became successful, and a model for others around the country, is a tribute to three vastly dissimilar men, the engineer Gridley Bryant, the architect Solomon Willard and the financier, Col. Thomas Handasyd Perkins.

Bryant was 37 at the time but already an engineer of note. He invented the eight wheeled railroad car and, when a fellow named Ross Winans of Baltimore sued to establish a patent on it, Bryant was able to prove his claim to the satisfaction of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Willard, then 43, was a great bear of a man, gentle, obliging, industrious. Frivolity, it was said, was alien to him and he was never known to run. He could be crotchety, too. He was a carpenter turned wood-carver, turned stone carver and, finally, architect.

Perkins was the autocratic, 52-year-old merchant king of Boston who was said to have been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy by President Washington and turned it down with the observation that he owned more ships than the Navy.

It was Perkins who lobbied the Railway's charter through a puzzled and obstinate State Legislature, which had never been called upon to incorporate a commercial railroad before. It was Perkins who financed it, too, largely with his own money.

THE GRANITE RAILWAY

Even in its early days, the Granite Railway was a tourist attraction of some magnitude.

Daniel Webster, who used to stop off for a pick-me-up in Quincy en route from Boston and Washington to his home in Marshfield, viewed it and decided that it would never succeed because of the frost that would form on the rails in the winter.

The President of the United States, a local boy named John Quincy Adams, visited in August, 1827, got caught in a thunderstorm and took shelter in a shed where Willard's stone-cutters were hacking away at monument granite.

A group of visitors were riding up the Railway's incline in an empty car on July 25, 1832, when the chain broke and catapulted them over a 40-foot cliff. One was killed in what may have been the first railroad fatality in the United States.

The Granite Railway Co. survived until 1870, some 27 years after the Bunker Hill Monument was finished, when most of its track was taken over by the Old Colony Railroad, which in turn became a division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Today much of the roadbed, over which freight moved commercially on rails for the first time in America, is buried under the macadam of the Southeast Expressway.

The incline of the old Railway has been restored and is located at the dead end of Mullin Ave. in West Quincy. It is open to the public year around 24 hours a day. There is no admission charge.

The key to access

We call it a REDi-CASH card. More than 10,000 Quincy Savings Bank customers already use the card for our Plus/24 machines, to make deposits, withdrawals, or loan payments, or to transfer money from one account to another.

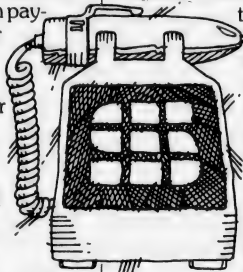

One of the further advantages of our REDi-CASH/VEC card is being able to cash checks both at our offices and 23 other banks, as well as at more than 100 supermarket locations. Think how convenient that is, when you're away from home!

Checking: with or without checks

Quincy Savings has a way to help you reduce the number of hours you spend paying bills each month. We call it The Bill System. It's simply a REDi-NOW Account, which pays 5% interest, with a Pay-by-Phone feature. The combination gives you the choice of writing and mailing out checks, or using Pay-by-Phone to take care of paying some of those bills for you, at only 13¢ per transaction, which saves you time and postage. Take advantage of Pay-by-Phone as thousands of our customers have since it was first introduced.

City Hall

Seat Of Government For 136 Years

Daniel and Hannah French deeded the land to the town of Quincy for $1,000 with the stipulation that it "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House for the said Inhabitants."

And, with a few minor transgressions of that vow, the solid structure of Quincy granite in Quincy Square has been just that for the past 136 years, the nerve center of government for first the town and then the city.

It was in the great hall on the second floor that the popular John Quincy Adams II, grandson of a president of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years and, with his brother, Charles Francis Adams Jr., gave informal direction to town affairs.

One of the earliest ordinances passed by the first City Council on March 8, 1889 was the adoption of the City Seal emblazoned with the four most significant dates in Quincy's history:

1625, for the first settlement on Mount Wollaston; 1640, for its separation from Boston as the town of Braintree; 1792, for its separation from Braintree as the town of Quincy; and 1888, for its incorporation as a city.

CITY HALL

Designed by the architect Solomon Willard ... who received $280 for drawing up the plans and superintending construction for five months ... the City Hall was completed and occupied for the first time on Nov. 1, 1844.

It cost exactly $19,115.93 to build, including 88 cents to John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

In 1979, when a 3 1/2-story reflective glass addition was built behind the old City Hall, the cost was $1.9 million.

9 BILLINGS ROAD, NORTH QUINCY

'Birthplace Of Massachusetts'

The Indians saw it as a hill (wetuset) shaped like an arrowhead (mos) so they called it "Moswetuset" and when English tongues got through mangling the word it came out "Massachusetts," which became the name of the bay and then the state.

The little wooded hillock near the junction of East Squantum St. and Quincy Shore Drive was once the seat of the sachem Chickatabot, who comes down through the pages of Quincy history as a rather pathetic figure.

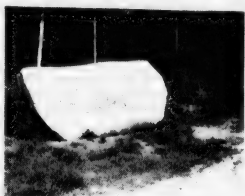

He was the chief of the Moswetuset Indians, a once great tribe that occupied the coast north of Plymouth.

A few years before, under the great sachem Nanepashemet, the Moswetuset had been able to field some 3,000 warriors for a war with the Taratines of Maine, a war in which Nanepashemet was killed.

Then came the plague.

In two years the mighty Moswetuset were all but wiped out. No more than 60 of them were left to till their fields on the banks of the Neponset River. Sachem Chickatabot fled his home on the hill in Wollaston and took refuge on Moswetuset Hummock.

That was the situation in 1621 when Capt. Myles Standish landed from a shallop with an exploring party of Plymouth Pilgrims that included the Indian guide Squanto (or Tsquantum), whose name was given to the peninsula that stuck out in the bay.

The tragic Chickatabot died not long after the Pilgrims' visit and he was succeeded as sachem by his son, Josiah Wampatuck, a boy who knew a good deal when he saw one.

Wampatuck sold what was left of his virtually deserted tribal lands to a group of whites for 12 pounds, 10 shillings. The lands included most of what is today the city of Quincy and the towns of Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook.

Moswetuset Hummock, identified by a marker stone and maintained in its natural state, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

Josiah Quincy Homestead

Lookout For Spying On British Ships

Abigail Adams stood with her great uncle, Col. Josiah Quincy, in a window of his mansion overlooking Wollaston Beach and watched the tall mast of 170 ships stand slowly out to sea. It was March 17, 1776. The British were evacuating Boston.

But even in triumph there was tragedy.

Aboard the departing ships were more than 1,000 Loyalists, Americans who had chosen King above country, and one of them was Abigail's cousin, Samuel Quincy, the Colonel's only remaining son, an avowed Tory.

"I take a long farewell," his sister, Hannah, wrote to him for one last time. "Let it not be published that a brother of such brothers fled from his country. Can you expect to walk uprightly now? Can you take fire in your bosom and not be burned?"

Two of Col. Josiah Quincy's sons had died young. Now he had no more.

But there was no time for regrets. The work of revolution had begun. The second floor of the house at what is now 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, was a lookout from which the 66-year-old Colonel spied on British ship movements for his friend, Gen. George Washington.

A few months before, Col. Quincy watched the Royal Governor, Gen.

Thomas Gage depart and he scratched on a pane of window glass the reminder: "Oct. 10, 1775. General Gage sailed for England with a fair wind."

This time he remained in the window for three days as the British tall ships moved restlessly about the Harbor as if reluctant to leave. Finally, on March 20, the last of them passed through the roadstead and out to sea.

The mansion in Wollaston reached full social flower under the aegis of the Colonel's grandson, the third Josiah, the "Great Mayor" of Boston, president of Harvard and Congressman, who called it "Tranquilla" and used it as his summer home.

It was there that the Marquis de Lafayette visited one Sunday afternoon after dinner with his friend, ex-President John Adams at the Adams Mansion. He carried flowers from the Adams garden for Mrs. Eliza Susan Quincy and her five attractive daughters.

The house was built in 1770 by the old Colonel himself, the first in a line of six Josiahs. It was said that, while most families passed their line from sire to son, the Quincys went from 'Siah to 'Siah.

But, while there were six Josiahs and innumerable Edmunds, the city was named for yet another member of the prolific family — Col. John Quincy, the great grandfather of John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States.

The Josiah Quincy Homestead is open to the public from May 1 to Oct. 15, Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday from 12 noon to 5 p.m. Visits may be made at other times by appointment. Admission is $1 for adults and 50 cents for children.

How Many Miles From Boston?

Stone mile markers across Hancock Street from each other indicate that the traveler is both 7½ and 10 miles from Boston. And both are correct.

The 10-mile marker was placed on the Old Coast Road, one of the oldest highways in the United States still in existence, which went from Boston to Plymouth in 1639 by way of inland Milton.

The 7½-mile marker was raised after the first bridge over the Neponset River was built in 1803, creating the Neponset Turnpike, which is today Hancock St in North Quincy and Wollaston.

John Winthrop, Jr. Blast Furnace First Productive Iron Works In U.S.

It failed after nine years of effort and, since failure was anathema in a growing America, perhaps that is why the site and even the memory of the first commercial iron blast furnace in the United States was lost for so long.

It flourished, if that is the word, from 1644 to 1653 on the banks of the Mount Wollaston River (now Furnace Brook) in a section of Old Braintree called "the Woods."

Iron was an important commodity in Colonial Massachusetts, particularly for nails and pots and pans. Iron utensils had to be imported from England, a costly process for the penny-wise colonists.

With this in mind, John Winthrop Jr., son of the governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, went to London and formed the "Company of Undertakers for the Ironworks in New England."

The first iron was turned out in 1644 but young Winthrop was fired from his 100 pounds a year job the next year, to be succeeded by Richard Leader. The ironworks itself didn't last much longer.

The ore from which the iron was blasted on the banks of Furnace Brook was not a high quality product. It was bog iron from the nearby swamps. Making it proved to be more expensive than the imported kind.

The Company of Undertakers appealed for fresh money in 1646 and apparently there were enough investors ready to send good money after bad because the furnace was still in operation in 1650 when the Scotch Prisoners arrived.

The Scots were rugged Highlanders, soldiers in the army of the future King Charles II who were captured by Oliver Cromwell at the Battle of Dunbar. Cromwell shipped 272 of them to New England as cheap labor in an effort to make the Quincy ironworks a paying proposition. It didn't work.

The Company of Undertakers went bankrupt in 1653 and "the Woods" went back to the bear and the deer.

Meanwhile, with the same Richard Leader as agent, construction began on a second iron works north of Boston in Saugus in 1646. When it was completed in 1650, it was recognized as the first integrated iron industry in America.

The foundation of ironworks in Quincy has been restored on Crescent St., next to St. Mary's Cemetery in West Quincy. It is open to the public year around 24 hours a day. There is no admission charge.

6 Suspicious Fires Under Investigation

By TOM HENSHAW

Six suspicious fires, four of them major conflagrations, in the past two weeks in Quincy are under investigation by city officials and the State Fire Marshal's Office.

Deputy Chief Carl Valenti, head of the Fire Prevention Bureau, said there is little doubt that all six of them were set, although there is no apparent relationship between them.

The latest of the fires occurred Monday night, one in West Quincy and one in Atlantic.

A two-story converted house at 406 Willard St., West Quincy, housing the RJB Management Corp., was a total loss with damage estimated by fire officials at $25,000 for the building and $20,000 for contents.

Valenti said a can of lacquer thinner "that wasn't there when the building was locked up" was found on the first floor. Valenti said fire officials had a lead on that fire.

Meanwhile, smoke from a fire in the cellar touched off an alarm on the second floor at 176 Billings St., Atlantic, and alerted James Porter, the owner, who extinguished the blaze with water. No alarm was sounded.

Valenti said a flammable fluid was found on the cellar stairs and was sent to the laboratory for examination.

Previous fires of suspicious origin included:

- The old Gerber building at 95

Parkway on June 25 and the old Navy tower at Boston Harbor Marina on June 28. Valenti said both had the earmarks of a professional arsonist although there was no apparent gain involved.

Valenti said the Gerber building was not insured.

He said damage at the Gerber building fire could be as high as over $100,000 and at the Marina up to $100,000.

- A fire in a trailer that was parked in the driveway at 308 Atlantic St., Atlantic, which resulted in a $2,500 loss to the trailer and $1,500 damage to the house. Valenti said it was "positively set."

- An old unoccupied stone shed owned by William Scott at 75 Intervale St., South Quincy, burned down July 6 with a loss estimated by Valenti at $75,000. He said the building was uninsured.

Valenti said investigators have leads on the Marina and Billings St. fires.

He said that, with the possible exceptions of the Gerber building and the Marina, all appear to be the work of vandals, although not necessarily the same ones.

Heron Beach, Pageant Field Hit

Vandalism Wave Continues In City's Parks

Vandalism in city parks and elsewhere mounted over the July 4 weekend, with $1,000 damage reported in two park incidents.

A variety of lesser offenses were also reported over the weekend, according to Quincy Police.

The two major incidents reported in Quincy parks will cost the city about $1,000 in materials and labor, according to Richard Koch, executive secretary of the parks and recreation board.

That puts the park vandalism total for 1980 over $11,000 - the highest total ever, Koch said.

Friday night at Heron Beach, Adams Shore, vandals burned 11 tables which had been loaned to the Adams Shore Community Association for its July 4 celebration. Two lights at the combination park and beach were also smashed, Koch said.

Another bonfire was started

Saturday night at Pageant Field, Merrymount, the third major incident of vandalism there this spring. To fuel the bonfire, vandals used wooden panels and shingles from park pavilions. The pavilions had been recently repaired, Koch said.

Koch added that he hopes recreation programs won't have to be curtailed as a result of the vandalism increase.

"The key is apprehension," Koch said. "If we can alert the public and the youth who use the facilities for the right purpose, if they see something to notify the police, if we catch them in the act we can get restitution."

The police blotter reported about a dozen other lesser incidents of vandalism between Thursday night and Monday morning.

They included:

- A Monroe Rd., Quincy Center

resident reported tire tracks in his lawn.

- Damaged drainage pipes at Wollaston Lutheran Church and the Patriot Ledger, Quincy Center.

- A street sign at Randlett and Copley Streets, Wollaston, which had been pulled down.

- A pellet apparently fired through a Washington St., Quincy Point, home Sunday night.

- Reports of damage and gas siphoning to two Lawrence St., Quincy Point cars.

- Two tires slashed on a car parked on Canton Rd., North Quincy.

The Parks and Recreation Board voted Monday night to invite a member of the Quincy Police Department to its August meeting to discuss methods of curbing the vandalism wave.

McCauley Pleased

30-Day Notice Planned On Assessment Boosts

Mayor Tobin has directed Chief Assessor John P. Comer to institute a policy of notifying property owners 30 days in advance if their assessments are to be raised.

The policy is essentially what City Councillor Francis X. McCauley sought in a home rule petition that died between the Senate and the House as the State Legislature wound up its 1980 session.

McCauley said he was "very pleased that the Mayor saw fit to put my suggestion into practice. It was a good idea. I commend him for it."

Nevertheless, said McCauley, he plans to file the same home rule petition in next year's legislature to make it law rather than a matter of administration policy.

Tobin indicated that he would have started the 30-day notice policy earlier if McCauley had come to him and asked if it could be done.

"Politically, the councillor saw this as a way to get publicity," he said. "I signed the home rule petition because I agreed with it in principle. The bill died."

"All the publicity and all the political statements didn't amount to a hill of beans. They didn't have anyone who knew how to get a bill through the Legislature."

One the other hand, McCauley commended Sen. Paul D. Harold (D-Quincy) for getting the bill through the Senate.

"He did his job," said McCauley. "It got lost in the House in the confusion of prorogation."

The June, 1980, list included two one-family dwellings valued at $65,000, one storage building at $8,000 and one garage estimated to cost $3,000.

In addition there were $235,888 worth of residential alterations, $231,050 in other alterations, three removals at $1,025, six signs at $5,600 and 16 miscellaneous permits at $286,275.

Open House At Homestead

Quincy Family Reunion Set For Sept. 5

Quincy is planning a little get-together for the Quincys.

Part of the city's second annual Constitution Celebration will be a reunion of the Quincy family - the descendants of the distinguished citizens of the 17th and 18th century, including Colonel John Quincy, for whom the city is named.

An open house is scheduled for Friday, Sept. 5 from 7-9 p.m. at the Dorothy Quincy Homestead, announces Mayor Arthur Tobin and Mrs. John Quincy of Lynn and Mrs. John Quincy of Milton, who are helping to coordinate the reunion.

Invitations will be sent to about 200 descendants of the Quincy clan, scattered throughout New England and New York.

A result of the reunion will be the formation of "an organization of the Quincy family who will gather together and share their common lineage for social and historic reasons," said Frank Quincy, a Lynn resident.

Tobin noted that, ironically, the city was inviting the Quincys to their own family homestead.

"It's our way of calling attention to this showplace and in a small way thanking the Quincy family for its contribution to our history."

Persons with information about the whereabouts of Quincy family descendants are asked to contact the Mayor's office at City Hall. Other features of the Sept. 5-7 Constitution Celebration will be concerts, the dedication of a monument celebrating the drafting of the state Constitution in Quincy, a sky-diving demonstration at City Hall and the first City of Presidents Marathon.

$5.8-M State Aid For Germantown

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Among the actions taken by the state legislature during its final weekend was a bond issue including $5.8 million for repairs and renovations of state housing in Germantown.

The $5.8 million, to be used for 400 units, comes to about $14,500 per unit a figure some might think is high.

"It isn't," said state Rep. Thomas Brownell, who announced the bond passage Monday morning. "Not when you consider that they'll be doing all the units over completely."

The $5.8 million is part of a $75 million bond passed by the legislature during its hectic Fourth of July weekend. About $35 million of that money was targeted to "rescue deteriorating housing," like that in Germantown, Brownell said.

The money will be used for such items as insulation, changing the units from oil to gas heat and renovating apartments, he added.

Brownell said the $5.8 million figure was arrived at in a survey taken by the state Executive Office of Communities and Development, which oversees the state-run housing.

"I really don't know anything about it," said Quincy Housing Authority Administrator Clement O'Brien Monday morning.

All of the QHA's modernization programs now on the drawing boards - the oil-to-gas conversion, insulation, new roofs, new siding - total about $2 million, he said.

"I don't know what they had in mind," O'Brien said of the $5.8 million figure. "I don't see that right now."

One renovation now sure to take place, O'Brien said, is the changeover from oil-fired heat to gas heat. A study by an independent consultant placed the cost for converting all 400 units at about $900,000 and suggested that the energy savings would "pay back" the conversion cost in less than four years.

The bond issue was the work of the House Committee on Urban Affairs, of which Rep. Michael Morrissey is vice chairman.

Morrissey noted it was the largest bond issue passed since 1965 and called it "the most comprehensive housing package ever."

"The City of Quincy will definitely receive some assistance in helping to modernize our existing state-owned housing," Morrissey said.

Brownell Parking Bill Passes House

Legislation filed by Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D-Quincy) that would offer state financing for up to 70 per cent of the cost of construction of off-street parking facilities has passed the House of Representatives.

"The legislation is vital to communities like the city of Quincy which has a severe off-street parking problem in its commercial areas," said Brownell.

"The most important provision of the bill makes available $12.5 million in state grants for cities and towns which have off-street parking problems.

"When the bill becomes law it will be a major catalyst and stimulant for the revitalization of Quincy's downtown and commercial areas."

Dr. McKeogh Offers Aid In Eliminating Store Odor

Public Health Commissioner Dr. Robert P. McKeogh has recommended the use of a steam generating unit to help eliminate an odor problem at the Dairy Freeze, 635 Adams St., West Quincy.

Odors apparently emanating from the exhaust system at the Dairy Freeze have drawn complaints from neighbors to the Licensing Board.

Dr. McKeogh, who inspected the premises June 28, suggested purchase and use on a weekly basis of a portable steam generating unit to clean the interior and exterior of the system.

Lt. Rowell To Head Police Detective Bureau

Lt. David F. Rowell, who already heads two police units, has been named chief of the Quincy Police Detective Bureau, succeeding Capt. Frederick Tighe, who retired June 30 at the age of 65.

Police Chief Francis X. Finn described it as "a temporary appointment and a more permanent solution will be worked out in the near future when some of our budgetary problems are resolved."

Rowell will continue to direct the organized crime unit and the narcotics bureau but Finn directed him to transfer his office immediately to the detective bureau.

He has been operating out of a

North Quincy substation.

Finn's order, dated July 1, said that "present superior officers in all units will retain their present assignments under Lt. Rowell's directions."

Deborah Ormon Elected

Women's Commission Chairwoman

Deborah Ormon, North Quincy branch librarian, was elected 1980-81 chairwoman of the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women at the organization's final meeting of the season recently.

Other elected officers are: Harriet Goldman, Holbrook school teacher, co-chairwoman; Elizabeth Van Twyver, software engineer, Digital Equipment Corp.; recorder, and Dorothy Poutree, North Quincy High School secretary, corresponding secretary.

The commission was established in 1974 and members are appointed annually by the Mayor and City Council. Its purpose is to "address itself to the needs of women and to encourage them to participate more fully in the civic activities of the City of Quincy and also to lend support to other women's issues such as legislation or movements."

To fulfill this purpose, members divide themselves into task forces such as the Education Task Force which this year put together a year long program of seminars.

The fall seminar had Quincy Police Officer Barbara DiNatale speaking on "Violence Against Women". Officer DiNatale discussed the legal, medical and emotional aspects of street violence against women and ways to handle mugging, rape and physical attacks.

Toby Felton, administrative assistant to the president of Quincy Junior College, led a program on "Returning to School". The program included courses available in the area, applying for financial aid, career goals and objectives, and other aspects encountered by women deciding to return to school.

"Women and the Law" was the title of a February seminar led by Atty. Danielle de Benedictis and Atty. Ed Webby. The attorneys presented a historical and present day discussion of divorce, separation, child custody, probate and other aspects of the law that affect women.

Assistant Attorney General Paula Gold discussed "Consumer Rights" at a March seminar. The seminar covered the role of the attorney general's office, the consumer's bureau, rights and obligations of consumers and business.

The annual "Woman to Woman Day" conference included workshops on finance, lifestyles, stress, personal growth, divorce and employment. Journalist and co-author of "Beyond Sugar and Spice", professor Carl Rivers was keynote speaker, addressing over 200 women. The event, one of the few of its kind on the South Shore, was co-sponsored by the commission and the Quincy Junior College Women's Center.

The commission also published the second edition of its booklet, "Where Do I Turn?", published by the Quincy Public Schools and available through the commission. Members of the commission also continued their involvement with DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended), a shelter for battered women and their children.

For more information on becoming a member of the commission, which this year had 37 members, contact Deborah Ormon, North Quincy Branch Library, Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy, tel. 471-2400, ext. 53.

Alison Sheridan Receives M.D. Degree At B.U. School Of Medicine

Alison M. Sheridan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester R. Sheridan of Pine St., Wollaston, was recently awarded her M.D. degree by Boston University School of Medicine.

A 1974 graduate of North Quincy High School, Dr. Sheridan received her undergraduate degree from Boston University. She will soon begin a residency in psychiatry at Tripler Army Medical Center, Honolulu, Hawaii.

Dr. Sheridan was one of 40 medical students in a class of 133 to participate in Boston University's accelerated Six-Year B.A.-M.D. Program, which combines two intensive years of liberal arts education with four years of medical school.

Seventy-eight men and 55 women from 19 states received their medical degrees at the School's 106th commencement. This represents the highest number of female graduates from the School at one time since it became part of Boston University in 1873.

RABIES PROGRESS

Rabies is on the rise, but fewer people are dying from it than formerly, perhaps because more people that get bitten are being vaccinated. Skunks are the principle source of rabies infection from wild animals in America. In Europe and Canada, the main culprit is the fox. Dogs and cats are the leading source of rabies contracted from domestic animals.

A report to the World Health Organization, in Belgium, Luxembourg, and Switzerland, "cattle represent the main source of rabies."

Another new trend in rabies vaccine is the single shot treatment which may be in the offing. Experiments have shown that animals infected with rabies have been successfully prevented from dying after only a single injection of the new drug. At present, human beings treated for rabies must undergo an uncomfortable series of 14 daily injections.

HLPE Charge Rejected

City Wins Labor Dispute Before State Board

The State Labor Relations Commission has rejected a charge that the city acted in bad faith when it withdrew a conditional wage offer to city employees while their contract dispute was in fact-finding.

The SLRB decision ruled that the Hospital, Library and Public Employees Union "failed to pinpoint any evidence in the record indicating actual bad faith on the part of the city."

It also failed to "contradict the city's proffered reason that it withdrew the wage offer, as it had retained the option of doing, because the tax cap restricted its ability to fund the proposed increases."

The ruling reversed a decision made by Hearing Officer Robert B. McCormack last December in which he found that the city had refused to bargain in good faith. The city appealed.

The facts in the case, as determined by the commission, are these:

During negotiations in April, 1979, the city offered HLPE an across-the-board salary increase for all employees with the condition that if a tax cap passed the Legislature negotiations could be reopened.

The union rejected the offer and petitioned for mediation and fact-finding.

Meanwhile, in May, the Legislature enacted the 4 per cent tax cap and, after one fact-finding session had been held, the city withdrew the offer on Sept. 14. Two more fact-finding sessions were held.

In the commission's opinion: "the record does not support a finding that the city engaged in bad faith bargaining by withdrawing its wage offer."

"The fact is that the union had already rejected the wage proposal because of the condition attached to it back in April when the city first offered it."

"The only troubling aspect of this case is why, if passage of the tax cap legislation in May would have triggered the condition, the city left the offer on the table during mediation and only withdrew it in September after the parties had commenced fact-finding."

The commission concluded that the effect of the tax cap could not have been immediately known and financial reverses in the cherry sheet compounded the problem.

"We think," said the commission, "that a reasonable inference can be drawn that it was not until the cherry sheets were distributed in September that the city realized, in good faith, that it would have to exercise the condition attached to the wage increases."

Senseless Vandalism

Senseless vandalism may be on the verge of destroying or at least curtailing sharply Quincy's recreation program, which has been built up over the years into one of the finest in the nation.

Richard J. Koch, executive secretary of the Park and Recreation Board, said last week that vandalism caused $10,000 worth of damage to Quincy since March 1, making 1980 already the worst year ever for vandalism in the city.

The words were scarcely out of his mouth when vandals with a perverted sense of the holiday set fire to 11 tables and 36 wooden horses at the Heron Rd. Playground which were to have been used for the Adams Shore Fourth of July Festivities.

And two nights later other vandals stripped boards and shingles from the newly refurbished pavilion at Pageant Field, piled them up on the cement floor of the pavilion and touched them on fire.

The Park and Recreation Board, hampered by recent budget cuts, simply doesn't have the money to keep up with these savage acts of inane destruction.

The vandals suffer only when they get caught. The decent people of Quincy, young and old, who use the park facilities suffer when vandalism goes unchecked.

The Police have instituted "Neighborhood Watch" to help check crime in the city. Perhaps it is time to organize a "Park and Playground Watch" to help check vandalism in the recreation areas.

Let those who use the parks and playgrounds for constructive purposes report those who don't to the police. It's not "squealing." It's a matter of self-defense, a matter of preserving that which is yours to share with others who enjoy it.

Let's not permit the vicious few to destroy what has taken so many people so many years to build into one of the finest park and recreation programs in the country.

Lifting The Veil Of Secrecy

The U.S. Supreme Court has lifted a corner of the veil of secrecy that has been gradually dropping around criminal proceedings.

The court ruled that criminal trials must be open to the press and public unless there is an "overriding reason" for conducting them in secret.

The ruling came in a case where a judge in Virginia arbitrarily excluded two reporters from a murder trial on grounds their presence would "impair the conduct of a fair trial."

Recent decisions of the court, led by Chief Justice Warren Burger, have not been kind to the public's right to know.

But apparently even the Burger court couldn't accept the provocative theory that a fair trial --- and that means one that is fair to both the defendant and the people --- can ever be conducted in an atmosphere of secrecy.

Perhaps now the court can turn its attention to another one of our pet judicial peevs --- the sealing of criminal records once the offender's sentence, or more likely his probation, has been served.

We can understand a sealed record in the case of a young first offender who deserved a second chance.

But the protection of such secrecy in the case of a two or three-time loser is certainly not in the best interests of those who deserve an equal amount of protection, the public at large.

They're Not Smoking

Here's a set of figures you won't find the tobacco industry quoting.

An overwhelming majority of seventh graders at Central Junior High School believe smoking is bad for their health and have no intention of doing it.

Ninety six percent of the students recently surveyed said they believe smoking to be bad for their health and 97 per cent said they intend never to take up smoking.

The youngsters made known their beliefs and intentions in a survey taken following a spring lecture by Dr. Allen J. Togut, a Brockton lung specialist.

Some other interesting figures: Thirty five per cent conceded they had smoked cigarettes before listening to Dr. Togut but 89 per cent said they had not smoked since his visit. Sixty eight per cent said Dr. Togut's talk influenced them not to smoke.

Sixty nine percent of those in the poll said at least one of their parents smokes; 72 per cent said being in the presence of a smoker bothers them; and 68 per cent said they would tell the smoker to stop.

It was Dr. Togut's second annual visit to the school in conjunction with the American Cancer Society and the Central Guidance staff.

First year students at the junior high school were chosen for the talk because it would have the greatest impact on them, said Dr. Togut.

The post-lecture survey was taken by Thomas Donnelly and Robert Scheiss, science teachers.

THIS HAS BEEN a special publications week.

Within a period of some seven days there arrived at The Sun office (1) the city's annual report for 1978-79, which brings us almost up to date; (2) Quincy History, the brand new bulletin of the Quincy Historical Society; and (3) Safety Tips, published by the Quincy Auxiliary Police Association to show kids how to survive in an adult world.

The City Report, the work of John Capavella, the Mayor's information officer, is the most elaborate production of its kind in recent years with a two-page spread of pictures from the Constitution Bicentennial celebration of last September.

It is dedicated to the memory of William J. Callahan, who was a Quincy assessor for 28 years and came out of retirement in 1978 to act as Mayor Tobin's financial adviser. He died Nov. 6, 1979 at the age of 77.

Revaluation Visits At Halfway Point

The first phase in the revaluation of real estate in the city is approaching the halfway mark, according to Daniel Harris, of the assessing firm PRC Jacobs.

Data collectors, who are visiting every building in the city, have completed work in Wards 6 and 5 and will soon finish Ward 4. Still to come are Wards 3, 2 and 1.

The home visits, which began in March, are expected to be completed in early fall.

The revaluation was ordered by the state Supreme Judicial Court, which ordered all communities to assess all property at full market value.

Harris offered the following information to homeowners concerning the data collectors' visits:

- Data collectors list site characteristics and measure building perimeters. "Interior residential inspections are performed in a timely fashion with little inconvenience to the homeowner."

- All representatives of PRC Jacobs carry proper identification badges, issued by the city which include a photograph and other descriptive information.

- Should no one be at home during the first inspection attempt, exterior site characteristics and building measurements will be recorded on the data collection form. At this time, door hangers will be left describing procedures for an appointment for interior inspection. If the homeowner does not respond to the door hanger, a second inspection will be made during early evening hours or Saturday. If no interior inspection is possible during the visit, due to a refusal for inspection or a resident not being available, interior inspection will be estimated and this estimation will be noted on the data collection

The cover of the City Report is an artist's conception of the Stop and Shop Company Office Tower that is planned by Campanelli Brothers, Inc., for the Della Chiesa Parking Area. It is expected to be open in the fall of 1981.

Only 250 copies of the report were printed.

the QHS's historian.

Most striking feature: A 1925 photo of a Quincy granite quarry in operation, with workmen the size of ants hacking away at the stone at the bottom.

There are also two columns of "do-it-yourself" tips on research for budding historians by Dr. James R. Cameron, new president of the QHS and head of the history department at Eastern Nazarene College. Tip No. 1: Pick a subject that interests you.

Safety Tips, put together by the QAPA's Sgt. Frank Davis, recently was distributed to 6,500 Quincy school kids from Kindergarten to Grade 6 and the tips are so up to date that they include sections of minibikes and roller skates.

One safety tip not often seen in print involves the handling of a potentially hostile dog: "If a strange dog comes up to you, stand still, and be sure to face the dog at all times. Slowly walk around the dog and away from him. Remember, running by dogs excites them."

GEORGE MATHIESON financial specialist in the City Planning Department, figures he's a pretty lucky man. His car was sideswiped by a truck on the Southeast Expressway the other day, spun around in heavy traffic -- and demolished. George escaped with a shaking up and a black eye. The truck kept going -- a hit-run.

form.

- All parcels where interior data collection is not possible (due to either refusal or the property being unattended) will receive a letter requesting interior inspection. At the conclusion of data collection, the Board of Assessors will attempt to arrange parcel entry of all remaining residences without actual interior inspection, by means of a certified letter requesting an appointment.

"With the cooperation of city property owners, the data collection portion of the tax equalization program will be completed in a timely fashion and will help to create full and fair market values throughout the city of Quincy," Harris said.

Persons with questions pertaining to the tax equalization program may call PRC Jacobs at 471-7503.

Brownell Would Halt MBTA Pass Price Boost

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D-Quincy) has co-sponsored a late filed bill in the State Legislature to prevent the MBTA from increasing the cost of its passes. He called for a freeze on the price of passes.

"If the 'T' is going to raise fares in general, it should consider maintaining the current price of its passes," he said.

"This could be the best way to attract more regular commuters and at the same time encourage energy conservation."

Rapid transit fares on the MBTA went up Monday, from 50 to 75 cents at the three Quincy stations, and the price of passes is scheduled to rise in September.

Brownell said that Red Line

ridership still has not reached projected figures.

"A low-cost pass program," he said, "would attract more commuters and in the long run generate more revenue."

"Freezing the price of passes while allowing the increase in general fares would be a good compromise for the public and the authority."

Della Chiesa Passes Up Congress To Run For State Rep Post chance at the Republican nomination for the U.S. Congress and run for re-election to the State Legislature.

Della Chiesa said he had consulted with friends and, although some urged him to run for Congress, most of them felt he would be of greater service to Quincy as state rep and mayor.

Besides, he said, City Clerk John Gillis had informed him that it would cost the city of Quincy about $30,000 to hold a special election for mayor if he should go to Washington.

Della Chiesa's withdrawal left Charles J. Gabriel of Quincy as the leading Republican candidate to oppose incumbent Democrat James A. Burke of Milton for the 13th District congressional seat.

HOSPITAL DILEMMA

City Hospital officials were faced with a dilemma in the construction of a new nursery.

They were told that unless the city goes ahead with the project the federal government will withhold the $35,353 balance of $250,000 used to build the new wing that opened in February.

Architect Paul A. Coletti estimated that the nursery would cost between $80,000 and $100,000 and City Auditor Alexander Smith said the city has only $40,000 available.

Meanwhile, Mayor Della Chiesa estimated that hospital receipts will run a half million dollars more than last year, thanks to the opening of the new wing.

WOLLASTON WINS

Dan Connelly collected four hits and Joe Killion, Bill Hay, Jay Spillane and Bill Bennett had three each as Wollaston defeated Quincy 16-11 in Junior Legion baseball play.

Wollaston smashed out 19 hits and Quincy had 10, including a triple and a double by John Tusini and a triple and a single by Jackie Walsh. Quincy remained 0-7 in Zone Six competition.

BRICKLAYERS SETTLE

The Quincy Bricklayers Union voted to accept a new three-year contract from the Quincy Master Builders Association, thus avoiding the threatened strike that had tied up work in Boston for six weeks.

The Quincy men won wage increases of 52 cents an hour in three installments over the life of the contract.

Dismayed Over Library Situation

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I can't think of a better way than I decided to you to register my dismay and concern about our present Quincy Library situation. One recent rainy Saturday I visited Milton Library. Every section of the library was being used. As I checked out some books at the Circulation Desk my attention was drawn to a large sign: "America's Greatest Bargain, Your Public Library, Free."

Searching for a particular book I decided to stop by our own Quincy Library. There a large sign greeted me: Closed On Saturday June, July, August.

On Monday I returned to discover several branches were being closed down and books sold off. As a Friend of the Quincy Library I spoke with several staff members about it. There are problems. It costs money to heat, staff and operate libraries. Our taxes support our libraries. Sometime ago our local newspapers reported the City Council had cut the library budget drastically. With all due respect, what does this say about our City Council? What does this say about the future of our city. Moreover, what does it say about us that on weekends during June, July and August there are NO libraries available to anyone in this whole city. We may be a beach community but it rains many weekends as we well know. Furthermore, Quincy has a large senior citizen population. Wouldn't it be thoughtful of us to provide shuttle busses on a Sunday or Saturday afternoon from some of the public housing units to give the folks a place to go and enjoy a free movie or music or just catch up on all those periodicals too expensive to subscribe for? With the prices of books today, the free public library is doing a tremendous service for our community. The next question is, are we appreciating it.

With the number of teenage problems in our community coupled with the great need for Johnny and Mary to read better and more, plus the current economic problems we're all facing, our libraries should be increasing their activities rather than cutting back. I understand a few years ago, Sunday afternoon library opening was a phenomenal success. Why not think up innovative ideas on how to stimulate greater use of our free public libraries and branches throughout our city.

Ever since childhood whenever anyone asked me what I'd like for Christmas or birthday gifts, my response has always been: a BOOK. I love books. I can think of no greater gift for lifetime enjoyment than books. Let's treasure our books and our freedom to read them. Ever think of certain countries who prohibit the freedom to read or write freely? In all my travels with my husband throughout these United States, the first place we always visited was the Public Library in the city or town. The library tells alot about the quality of a city. It reveals the intellectual level of a community and the mutual reciprocity of interests and provisions by that city for its people. I've always been grateful for our Thomas Crane Public Library freely available to its large population with many accommodating services - films, music, story hour for children, Great Books Discussions, art exhibits and (hopefully) the best literature of the ages. Citizens of Quincy, remember, we are an historic city, the birthplace of 2 United States Presidents. Let's not permit the erosion of yet another basic value in our lives. One final note may I extend many thanks to all members of our library staff and our enterprising director.

Sincerely,

(Mrs.) Irene M. Larrington

Quincy Cancer Crusade Reaches $26,000 Mark

The Quincy Cancer Crusade has reached the $26,000 mark and is only $475 short of its 1980 goal announces Richard J. Koch, Cancer Crusade Chairman of the Quincy unit.

The house-to-house canvas has realized $11,500 to date exceeding its quota by $3,000.

Koch praised the dedication of the 1,500 crusaders who volunteered to solicit their neighbors and the generosity of the thousands of persons who were visited with educational material and donation envelopes.

Two hundred kits have not been returned and those Crusaders are requested to complete their assignments as soon as possible and make returns to the Hancock Bank, 1495 Hancock St., Quincy or any of its branches.

The fiscal year of the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society closes August 31. All returns must be received by then to be included in the 1980 Crusade.

Persons wishing to donate and not visited to date may make checks payable to the American Cancer Society or enclose whatever amount desired in an envelope and mail or leave at any of the Hancock Bank Branches.

The largest source of funds received by the American Cancer Society for its research, public and professional education and patients services programs are derived from memorials, the house to house crusade and special gifts.

The American Cancer Society does not receive money from the United Fund nor is it government-funded. The Society depends upon voluntary gifts to support its Cancer Control Program.

Your Dental HEALTH

by Daniel P. Sweeney, D.D.S.

It is a good idea for you and your children to get to know your dentist. Although dental treatment is hardly ever painful or uncomfortable, many people, adults as well as children, are afraid of going to the dentist. They should really be afraid of the consequences of not going to the dentist. However, you can develop a good relationship with your dentist. Ask questions, take care of your teeth at home and come in for regular check-ups. Dental and mental health will improve.

The right choice of a family dentist is often the beginning of a good dental experience. Visit the office of DANIEL P. SWEENEY, D.D.S. at 539 Adams St., East Milton Sq., 698-3636. If you're new to the neighborhood, drop in and get a routine check-up. Have your x-rays updated and establish a routine with our office. Don't wait for an emergency to try to find a dentist. Have your records forwarded too. It's important to keep your records and x-rays up to date so we know how best to treat your teeth. Don't let life's hectic times allow you to put off a visit to the dentist. It's a costly gamble with your precious teeth.

DENTAL TIP:
Instead of eating foods with refined sugar between meals, try eating fruit.

City Selected For Neighborhood Revitalization Program

Mayor Arthur Tobin announces Quincy has been selected to participate in the Neighborhood Housing Service Program, a nationwide program to revitalize neighborhoods.

Early this year, Quincy's Department of Planning and Community Development applied to the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation for N.H.S. consideration. After an assessment visit by Task Force staff members, Quincy was selected as the first city in New England for neighborhood development this year. There are approximately 120 N.H.S. programs nationwide.

The Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation is a public corporation with direct congressional appropriation and represents a partnership of the federal financial regulatory agencies. On the state level, N.R.C. has the support and involvement of the State Department of Banking.

Neighborhood Housing Services began in Pittsburgh in 1968. As developed by the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation, N.H.S. programs are private, locally controlled, non-profit N.H.S. corporations. The programs work to stem further decline in locally selected neighborhoods through a sensitive, systematic housing inspection program, rehabilitation counseling, construction monitoring and financial services.

N.H.S. is a program involving a partnership of neighborhood residents, representatives of local financial institutions and local government working together through a professionally staffed, neighborhood-based, non-profit corporation to revitalize and rehabilitate declining urban neighborhoods.

The Mayor stressed that in order for this program to succeed, each element of the partnership must make some solid commitments:

- Residents of the chosen target area must want to preserve their neighborhood and improve their homes.

- The city government must invest its resources in the neighborhood by improving public services, by making necessary capital improvements such as curbing, street repairs, better lighting, as well as conducting a sensitive housing inspection program coordinated with N.H.S. activity.

- Local financial institutions must agree to make all loans in the neighborhood which meet their normal underwriting criteria, to assist in the development of the program, to remain involved once N.H.S. becomes operational, and to assist in raising the N.H.S. operating budget.

The two additional key elements in the N.H.S. program are a high risk loan fund to provide rehab loans at flexible rates and terms to target area homeowners who do not meet commercial credit standards, and a highly professional three-person staff to administer the program in the neighborhood.

The Mayor stressed that the targeted neighborhood has not been selected yet and site selection will be an open process with the final decision being made by the local partnership.

The city, through its federal

Community Development Block Grant funds, will contribute a total of $250,000 over a three-year period to N.H.S. to capitalize its loan funds. N.R.C. will contribute $50,000.

$86,793 In Wiring Work Approved In June

The city Wire Department issued 88 permits for work costing an estimated $86,793 in June, according to Wire Inspector William Pitts.

In 164 total inspections, the department also noted 22 defects, issued 32 Mass. Electric Co. Certificates of Approval and collected $949.25 in fees, Pitts said. Two fire calls and 18 reinspections were also made.

The day began with the doll, bicycle and costume parade which saw Jennifer and Michelle George win the $5 first prize with their decorated carriage. Michael Dupill took the "most original prize" with his recreation of Old Ironsides.

The winners of the various events:

Boys 5-7: Dash - Gerry Pratt; Spider - Billy Warren; Wheelbarrow - Mike Murray and Brendan Toland.

Girls 5-7: Dash - Melanie Brooks; Spider - Melanie Brooks; Wheelbarrow - Kathy and Christine Sullivan.

Boys 8-10: Dash - Bobby McDonald; Spider - Eddie Herman; Wheelbarrow - Eric Sherman and Kevin Duffy.

Girls 8-10: Dash - Carolyn Morash; Spider - Alice Tremblay; Wheelbarrow - Ann Christopher and Karen Frederick.

Boys 13: Dash - Paul Ryan; Long Distance - George Wilson.

Girls 13: Dash - Donna Berry; Long Distance - Diane Callow.

While the races were being held, clown faces were being applied to the children's faces by Kay Borek, Karen Ahearn, Gloria George and Eileen McMahon. The committee estimated that they made up between 200 and 250 faces.

As the day progressed many events were held including the water balloon toss organized by Mike Borek, blueberry pie eating contest arranged by Dottie Blyth and Mary Colleary and entertainment by Ziggy the Clown (Charlie Vitum of Vitum Real Estate) and Uncle Sam (Gerry Danna).

Awards were handed out to every child participating by Pat Danna and Jim Cosseboom. Over 1,500 cold drinks were distributed by Steve Roberts, Mike Borek and John Malfy. The day ended with free ice cream for everyone.

Chairman of the event was Ed Danna, of Merry Mount Ave.

Norfolk County Receives Record 4th National Achievement Award

James J. Collins, chairman Norfolk County Commissioners, announces Norfolk County has received an unprecedented fourth national association of counties (NACO) achievement award in the last five years.

The award is for a new program of financial aid instituted by Norfolk County for the 28 communities of the county and a training economic development seminar program conducted jointly with the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

Bernard F. Hillenbrand, executive director of NACO said: "The program is designed to give national recognition to progressive county projects which demonstrate an improvement in county government's service to citizens. Norfolk County's program shows clearly a special sensitivity to citizen needs and their efforts to strengthen county government. The dynamic Norfolk County program will be distributed by NACO to other counties to serve as examples of innovative programs."

Collins said: "We are especially pleased that this program is receiving nation-wide recognition. Norfolk County's financial aid program designed to expand our economic base, offers our communities incentives to develop their resources and to hold on to existing businesses."

The county aid program is on a shared cost $1 for $1 basis and communities throughout the county have participated.

Successful projects include the North Quincy and Wollaston business district study.

"The second phase of the award-winning program," notes Martha Reardon, business manager of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, "was an in-depth economic development four-week seminar held at the South Shore Bank in Quincy."

"The seminar was in essence a training program conducted by Norfolk County Planning Director John C. Nourse for all town administrators and officials including selectmen, planning boards, IDC's and other part-time boards. It helped provide them with the expertise needed to carry out their economic development responsibilities and bring controlled growth to their communities."

"Experts in eight different areas of economic development volunteered to take part as discussion leaders."

Nourse said: "This seminar, first of its kind in Massachusetts, has received wide acclaim for its success. We never fully realized that the need for a basic program in economic development was so great. We had assumed that the various town boards were fairly expert in their field. We were wrong and this seminar filled a great void. Eighteen of the twenty-eight county communities participated. This development seminar will bear fruit in future controlled growth for years to come."

Quincy Babe Ruth All Stars Oust Weymouth Teams

Quincy's Babe Ruth League American League All-Stars last weekend won two games in the state tournament and eliminated both Weymouth entries.

Sunday Quincy defeated Weymouth North, 6-3, with Jim Kelly turning in an excellent relief performance to gain the win. He came on in the third inning with two on and no outs and allowed just one unearned run and one hit the rest of the game.

Mike Miller and Andy Eames had two hits each and John Balzano had a booming double, almost putting the ball out of Adams Field. Marty McLoughlin had an unbelievable game at shortstop, making five spectacular plays which had to be seen to be believed.

Saturday Quincy ousted Weymouth South, 5-2, behind the five-hit pitching of Eames. Weymouth scored both runs in the third and Eames pitched hitless ball over the final four innings.

Miller, Glen Oriola, McLoughlin and Balzano drove in Quincy's runs and Eames and Jeff Timberlake had key hits. Oriola played outstanding defense at third base.

Kiwanis Moves Into Top Spot In Junior League

Kiwanis moved into first place in the Quincy Junior Baseball League's American League with a 4-2 victory over Remick's.

Shaun Flavin drove in the winning run in the fifth inning with a double. Flavin, with a .580 average, extended his hitting streak to 16 straight games.

John Carroll was the winning pitcher in relief of Mark McDonald. Carroll struck out seven in three innings.

Dennis DeCoste had two hits for Kiwanis and George Hartford and Matt Hurley also had hits.

Losing pitcher was Chris Rossi, who pitched well.

Mariners Sweep Doubleheader At Scituate

The Quincy Bay Mariners boosted their South Coast League playoff hopes Sunday by sweeping a doubleheader at Scituate, improving their record to 9-5.

The first four finishers will make the league playoffs and Quincy has a good chance of making it. Weymouth's defending champions, who have won the title all five years since the league started, are making a runaway of the race.

The Mariners will play at Randolph tonight (Thursday) at 6 o'clock and Sunday will play a doubleheader at Hingham starting at 1 o'clock.

Ron Donovan pitched a five-hitter in the first game Sunday and the Mariners scored the winning run in the seventh as they edged the hard-luck Scituate team, 3-2. Donovan struck out seven as he edged Jim Hooper, who pitched a seven-hitter in defeat.

Fran Donovan started the seventh with a wind-blown double, player-coach Bob Benn bunted him to third and Donovan scored the winner on Mike McCormack's single to left center.

Paul Vespaziani, McCormack and Fran Donovan sparked the Quincy attack with two hits each.

Quincy clinched the second game with a six-run fourth inning as it won, 7-3.

Bob Padula pitched a six-hitter for the Mariners, giving up a run in the fourth and two in the seventh.

Quincy, leading 1-0, after a run in the third, exploded in the fourth. Joe Seckler, who had two hits in the inning, opened with his first. Bob Mayo walked and both scored on Bob Crooker's triple. Todd Miles singled home Crooker, moved to second on Fran Donovan's single. McCormack walked to fill the bases and Vespaziani cleared the bases with a tremendous triple against the stiff wind.

Vespaziani, Seckler, Benn, Fran Donovan and Crooker had two hits apiece.

Last Thursday the Mariners bowed to Weymouth, 9-3, as Weymouth's Bill Doherty scattered eight hits and struck out 12. Gary Donovan had two home runs to lead the winners, who have lost only one game.

It was a good game for five innings. Weymouth holding a 5-3 edge at that point, but the defending champions added two in the sixth and two in the seventh. Padula was the losing pitcher.

McCormack had a double and single. Benn hit a 400-foot triple. Vespaziani had a long triple. Fran Donovan a double and Jim Maze and Seckler had run scoring singles.

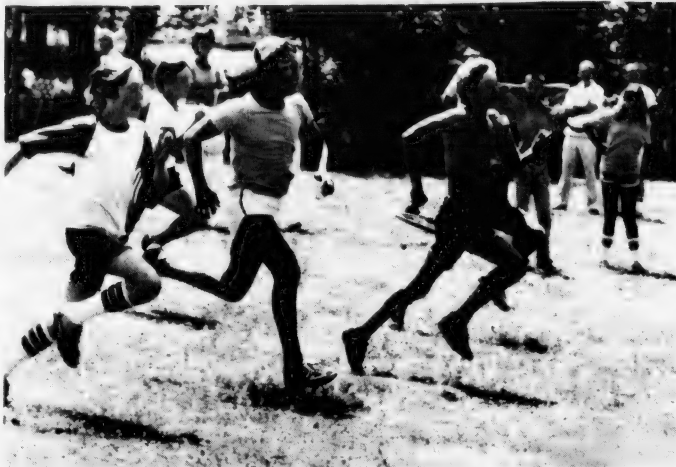

The game was marred by a brawl in the sixth inning following a play at the plate. Weymouth's player-coach Frank Niles came home on a suicide squeeze play but found Quincy catcher Tom Perry blocking the plate. Niles banged into Perry, who yelled for the ball, claiming Niles missed the plate. "When I went back to touch it for the second time, I hit him on purpose," Niles said. "He shouldn't have been blocking the plate in the first place as there was no play."

Niles and Perry began fighting and the players on both teams got in on the action. Cooler heads soon prevailed and there was no more trouble.

15-Year Old All-Stars Edge Milton

Quincy's 15-year-old Babe Ruth League all-stars edged Milton, 2-1, Sunday for their second straight tournament victory.

Chris Draicchio went three for three at the plate and also played a strong defensive game.

He was involved in three key plays which helped Quincy to the win. With two men on in the third inning, the speedy shortstop grabbed what looked like a sure base hit to halt a rally and two other outstanding plays came later.

Pitcher Jim Bandera was the beneficiary of the fine defensive play and he pitched a five-hitter and had five strikeouts.

Milton took a 1-0 lead in the first but in the fifth Mark Righini doubled, stole third and scored on Jim Austin's sacrifice fly.

Quincy won it in the sixth on a single by John Kozlowski, Draicchio's single and the winning single by Righini.

Wollaston Recreational Facility Income Up 64%, Deficit Down

James J. Collins, Chairman of the Norfolk County Commissioners, announces that the income of the Wollaston Recreational facility in Quincy in the past two years has increased by 64 percent and the deficit in the same period has been reduced by 34 percent.

"The facility has grown considerably since its opening in 1978," Collins said. "Income went from $94,000 in 1978 to $159,000 through June 30th of this year and rounds of golf have increased in the same period from 17,200 to 32,000."

Norfolk County Commissioner George B. McDonald noted, "The recreational facility budget has gone up less than one percent since 1978 in spite of the fact of an annual 14 percent inflation rate. The management of the facility should be proud of their fiscal responsibility. We are very optimistic about the future of our recreational facility and anticipate further growth."

SPORTS FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

Brought To You By ROBERT COLMAN

The most amazing home run hitting by one player ever seen in the Texas League in 1902 when Jay Clarke of Corsicana hit 8 HOMERS IN 9 INNINGS... Nobody else has come close to that record in pro baseball history... Oddly enough, when Clarke got to the majors, he hit only 6 homers in 9 YEARS.

Incredibly, a big league baseball pitcher once won 20 games TWICE in one season... Jack Chesbro of the 1904 Yankees won 20 games by July and then won 21 more before the end of the season for a total of 41 victories... Chesbro won 41 and lost 12 that year.

What's the all-time record for a big league baseball team coming from farthest behind to win a game?... On June 15, 1925, the Indians led the A's 15-3 going into the 7th... Many of the fans had left the park, but the A's scored 14 runs in the last 2 innings to win 17-15 in the biggest rally in major league history.

I bet you didn't know... That Colman's has every thing you need for fishing, famous names at money saving prices. Whatever you need in fishing, Colman's has it.

Friday Night Games

Morrisette Hosts Wollaston, Quincy At Braintree

Morrisette Legion's baseball team took a 6-4 record into Tuesday's game with Braintree. Morrisette's chances of winning Division 2 of Zone 6 depend on its continuing to win and the progress of Weymouth, which is five games behind the rest of the teams due to Weymouth South High School playing in the state tournament.

Weymouth was 4-1 going into this week's games. Morrisette has two games remaining with Weymouth.

Quincy had only a 3-7 record and Wollaston was 2-8 going into this week's games.

Canton is undefeated in Division 1 with Milton and Braintree right behind.

Morrisette will host Wollaston Friday night at 8 at Adams Field. Monday will play at Holbrook at 8:30 and next Wednesday will be home to Hingham at 8 at Adams.

Quincy will be at Braintree Friday at 6, and will host Randolph Monday at 8 at Adams.

Wollaston, following Friday night's game with Morrisette, will be home to Weymouth Sunday at 8 at Adams, will host Norwell Tuesday at 8 at Adams and will play at Randolph Wednesday at 6.

Morrisette defeated Randolph, 10-5, last week as Paul Earle pitched perfect ball over the final four innings and helped his own cause with a double and two singles.

Bill O'Connell had the winning hit, driving in two runs with a double to break a 5-5 deadlock.

Jim O'Toole also drove in two runs with a single and Earle's double drove in O'Toole in a game-deciding three-run seventh inning.

Earlier Morrisette was shut out by Braintree, 3-0, as the winners' Jack Holzman pitched five hitless innings and Sean Murphy allowed Morrisette's only hit in the last two innings.

Wollaston started out fast against unbeaten Canton, taking a 3-0 lead in the first two innings but Canton exploded for five runs in the third and went on to an 8-3 victory.

Wollaston mounted a threat in the sixth and loaded the bases with two outs, but reliever Dan Norton came on to get the final out and save the win for John Ezepek.

Quincy, which lost several players due to various reasons, continues to give all teams a battle with a depleted roster but last week lost to Canton, 7-4. Canton had run away from Quincy, 13-3, in their earlier game. The relief pitching of 16-year-old Robbie Davis and a seventh inning homer by Mark Foley made the difference.

"That home run broke the game open," Quincy coach Fred Prezioso said. "Then a nice double play in the bottom of the seventh killed us."

Quincy had been expected to be a title contender this season but its hopes faded when several players quit the squad.

Quincy trailed, 5-4, since the fourth inning and, just when it looked like a rally was blossoming, it kept missing by inches, which has been the story all year.

In the third inning Artie Roberts led off with a single and made second when the center fielder misplayed the ball. John Costigan walked and when the ball got by the catcher, Roberts went to third and Costigan got out of a rundown and made second, putting runners on second and third with no outs.

But Canton's shortstop and third baseman stopped hard grounders and threw the batters out with the runners holding, and Davis struck out Mike Stranburg for the final out.

Quincy's pitching was good with starter Jamie Walsh and reliever Steve Healy allowing only seven hits.

Walsh pitched the first three innings, giving up only one earned run, striking out six and walking three.

After Canton had opened with a run in the top of the first at Adams Field, Quincy came back in its half to take a 3-1 lead.

Tony Camillo and Walsh walked and Pat Ennis reached when Canton catcher Kevin Mutch was called for interference. Roberts was hit by a pitch, forcing in the tying run, a second run scored on an error and Chris Petrillo's infield out brought home the third.

Canton tied it up in the third and took a 5-3 lead in the fourth on three walks, a single and an error.

Quincy scored its final run in the fifth when Fred Palmer tripled and scored on Stranburg's single.

N. Quincy Koch Club Awards Night July 14

The North Quincy District of the Koch Club will close out its 30th season of boys baseball and girls softball Monday, July 14, at 6:30 p.m. with a Parent's Night and awards program at Cavanagh Stadium, Birch St., North Quincy.

Achievement and attendance awards will be presented to the boys and girls eligible for the recognition.

If rain forces postponement, the program will be scheduled for the following evening.

The North Quincy District is one of the four Koch Club Units that sponsor neighborhood youth baseball and softball leagues. Others include Broad Meadows, Montclair and West Quincy.

The boys baseball league was formed in 1951 at Cavanagh Stadium in North Quincy with 44 participants while the girls softball activities originated at the same location in 1952 with twelve girls involved.

Each year, there are 900 boys and 700 girls active in the four area neighborhoods. In the past 30 years, approximately 5,000 boys and girls have enjoyed participating in the after-supper competition.

Gary Demole will supervise the presentation ceremonies of the boys baseball leagues. Mrs. Simone Koch will direct the girls softball league awards.

Upon completion of the formal program, ice cream will be distributed to the boys and girls attending.

Pitch, Hit, Run Competition Saturday

The Quincy Recreation Department, in co-sponsorship with the Adams St. and Granite St. Burger Kings, will conduct the Quincy area Pitch, Hit and Run competition Saturday at Adams Field.

The competition, open to boys and girls ages 8 to 13, tests entrants' abilities in three key baseball skills: pitching for accuracy, hitting for distance and running against the clock.

Eight, 9 and 10 year olds are scheduled to begin competing at 9 a.m. while 11, 12, and 13 year olds will begin at 1 p.m. No prior registration is necessary as entry forms will be filled out the day of the event.

In case of rain the competition will be held on Sunday July 13 at the same times. Further information may be obtained by calling the Recreation office at 773-1380, ext. 204.

WEEK OF JULY 10,

AQUARIUS—January 21-February 19

More decisions! Personal magnetism is strengthened but intuition is weaker than you believe. Speak your mind—but only to the right party. Conservative friend becomes surprisingly broadminded.

PISCES—February 20-March 20

Arts are in the current picture. Weekend event can be beyond happiest expectations, but meetings on Monday-Tuesday prove more chaotic—or dramatic—than anticipated.

ARIES—March 21-April 20

Good period for reviewing recent events and examining current priorities. A remark you overhear or an incident you witness, helps you make a key decision. Be more generous in sharing the limelight.

TAURUS—April 21-May 22

Ego receives boost by Tuesday, thanks to gestures by loved ones and superiors. Inspiration strikes at the oddest moments—so keep pad and pencil at hand...wherever you might be.

GEMINI—May 23-June 21

Questions about relationships are being answered, and finally you can plot your next moves. Idea sketches—particularly as related to career or education—are becoming more crisply defined.

CANCER—June 22-July 22

Older relatives are outstanding advisors, children prove good friends. Don't postpone household repairs. Promotion is accented, thanks to behind-the-scenes work of secret admirer.

LEO—July 23-August 22

Family responsibilities demand additional time. Travel highlights the week—no matter how far you venture. Weekend signals the start of a socially active period.

VIRGO—August 23-September 22

Friday's disappointment can be turned to advantage—so long as you're optimistic. Romantic life perks up on weekend. Kids think you're tops—encourage them to share ideas and concerns.

LIBRA—September 23-October 22

Be alert—to your moods and to the moods of others. A perceptive Libra can make major gains now. Keeping secrets proves a mighty challenge. For singles, lovely possibilities loom all weekend.

SCORPIO—October 23-November 21

Finance is accented through week: a budget review; a choice investment opportunity, a chance to sell ideas, all are indicated. Overdue announcement or surprise newsletter arrives by Tuesday.

SAGITTARIUS—November 22-December 22

Recruit help when extra work lands on your shoulders. Stick to a proven approach—in love and friendship. You climb higher up the social ladder on weekend—whether or not you want to.

CAPRICORN—December 23-January 20

Memory plays games—and money is likely involved. Request receipts, check guarantees. An issue you've been dodging has to be faced by weekend. Travel is rewarding on Monday.

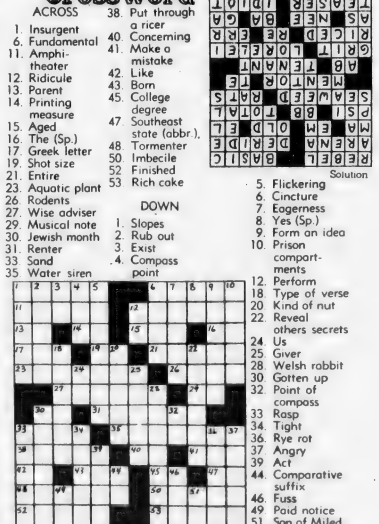

BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK

You have a great capacity for love—of all humanity. Yet sometimes you worry too much about your personal security. The creative approach can be the profitable one—in realms of career and romance, and starting immediately. Long-range goal comes into view by early autumn.

Boston Gas Says Quincy Customers Saved

$1.46 Million Last Winter

Boston Gas customers in Quincy saved a total of about $1.46 million last winter by heating with gas instead of oil, the company says.

And home-heating customers in the 74 communities served by Boston Gas saved a total of about $74 million over the past 10 months.

That's because gas heating costs about 30 percent less than the same amount of heat produced by oil, the company claims. For example, home heating oil is now selling for $1.02 per gallon. The same amount of natural gas energy costs about 65 cents.

Boston gas is telling each customer on this month's bills how much they saved during the past winter. The typical customer saved nearly $300, the company claimed.

NOW FOR NOW

(or payment by check
is coming back in style.)

In this topsy-turvy economic period, there is one stable, safe way to handle your money—open a NOW account at our Bank. What can a NOW account do for you and your money management?

Well, as the use of credit cards becomes more and more restricted, a NOW account lets you switch to a cash operating basis, thus avoiding interest charges for time payments. And your money in your NOW account is earning 5% interest per annum. Thus you get the best of both worlds—you avoid interest charges while collecting interest for yourself.

But, you say, going on a cash basis means I can't make larger or more costly purchases and spread the payments. In this economy with interest charges going up almost daily, maybe that is not all bad.

It depends on how much you need a "big ticket" item. If you have a wife and five youngsters and your washing machine breaks down hopelessly, you need a washer, of course. If you don't have the cash, you charge it. But if you can switch to a cash only (or check) basis for most items, you will save money.

The trouble with cash itself is that cash is dangerous. You can be robbed or you run the risk of losing it. NOW account checks are safe and you have an ongoing record of your expenditures.

Think about it.

Should your household budget be keyed into a NOW account?

Will it save substantial interest payments?

Will it be safe and convenient for you?

If you don't have a NOW account and want to open one (for as little as $10.00) come in to our main office or one of our branches.

We think a NOW account is the simplest and best way you have to help fight inflation.

Are "Free" NOW Accounts Really Free?

You will notice in this advertisement we did not use the term "free NOW account." That's because we want no confusion about our NOW accounts even though we feel that we come as close as anyone in offering NOW accounts at a basic minimum cost with no hidden charges.

Here is the way we work our NOW accounts:
You can open an account for $10.00.

As long as you maintain a balance of $10.00 or more you will get interest credited monthly at 5% per annum.

Overdraft charges are $5.00 each, which covers the paperwork in notifying the customer.

Stop payment fees are $5.00 for the same reason.

And the only other charge is $3.85 for each book of 200 plain checks imprinted with your name, address and account number.

What about those which claim to have "free" NOW accounts? They can demand a $300 monthly balance—or $500.00. The only minimum at our bank is $10.00 if you want to earn interest.

The thing to think about when someone says "totally free NOW account" is this: if you don't keep your balance at $300.00 all month long, you can be charged 20 cents for every check you write that month even if you bring your account up to $300.00 within 24 hours. Nothing like that at Quincy Cooperative!

We remind our customers that nothing in life is really free.....but the cost of a NOW account at our bank is very much less than for most other banking institutions.

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority

In the spirit of helpfulness and public service are making available facilities for issuing MBTA Senior Citizen passes - July 18 from 10 to 2 - at the main office of The Quincy Cooperative Bank in Quincy Square.

Normally these passes may be obtained only at the Washington Street Station MBTA office in Boston.

With a Quincy Square service available, South Shore persons over 65 may find it more convenient to get their passes closer to home. There is a 50 cent charge for this service - simply bring along proof of age and proof of residency.

The Quincy Cooperative Bank is happy to participate by making facilities and personnel available to the "T". We are also the local outlet for the monthly sale of regular MBTA passes.

NOW FOR NOW

(or payment by check
is coming back in style.)

In this topsy-turvy economic period, there is one stable, safe way to handle your money—open a NOW account at our Bank.

What can a NOW account do for you and your money management?

Well, as the use of credit cards becomes more and more restricted, a NOW account lets you switch to a cash operating basis, thus avoiding interest charges for time payments. And your money in your NOW account is earning 5% interest per annum. Thus you get the best of both worlds—you avoid interest charges while collecting interest for yourself.

But, you say, going on a cash basis means I can't make larger or more costly purchases and spread the payments. In this economy with interest charges going up almost daily, maybe that is not all bad.

It depends on how much you need a "big ticket" item. If you have a wife and five youngsters and your washing machine breaks down hopelessly, you need a washer, of course. If you don't have the cash, you charge it. But if you can switch to a cash only (or check) basis for most items, you will save money.

The trouble with cash itself is that cash is dangerous. You can be robbed or you run the risk of losing it. NOW account checks are safe and you have an ongoing record of your expenditures.

Think about it.

Should your household budget be keyed into a NOW account?

Will it save substantial interest payments?

Will it be safe and convenient for you?

If you don't have a NOW account and want to open one (for as little as $10.00) come in to our main office or one of our branches.

We think a NOW account is the simplest and best way you have to help fight inflation.

Are "Free" NOW Accounts Really Free?

You will notice in this advertisement we did not use the term "free NOW account." That's because we want no confusion about our NOW accounts even though we feel that we come as close as anyone in offering NOW accounts at a basic minimum cost with no hidden charges.

Here is the way we work our NOW accounts:
You can open an account for $10.00.

As long as you maintain a balance of $10.00 or more you will get interest credited monthly at 5% per annum.

Overdraft charges are $5.00 each, which covers the paperwork in notifying the customer.

Stop payment fees are $5.00 for the same reason.

And the only other charge is $3.85 for each book of 200 plain checks imprinted with your name, address and account number.

What about those which claim to have "free" NOW accounts? They can demand a $300 monthly balance—or $500.00. The only minimum at our bank is $10.00 if you want to earn interest.

The thing to think about when someone says "totally free NOW account" is this: if you don't keep your balance at $300.00 all month long, you can be charged 20 cents for every check you write that month even if you bring your account up to $300.00 within 24 hours. Nothing like that at Quincy Cooperative!

We remind our customers that nothing in life is really free....but the cost of a NOW account at our bank is very much less than for most other banking institutions.

Population May Be Over 95,000

Census Gain To Help City Get U.S. Aid

By TOM HENSHAW

Preliminary figures for the 1980 census, which have many Massachusetts communities up in arms over unexpected losses of people, apparently are going to reflect well in Quincy.

"I think we're going to do very well," said Mayor Arthur H. Tobin. "We know that the Quincy population figures have increased but we don't know yet exactly how much."

Any increase in population figures taken in the decennial federal head count is important, particularly to the older cities in the East, when it comes to passing out financial aid from Washington.

But it would be particularly significant should Quincy, with an expected 1980 population between 92,000 and 95,000—maybe more—surpass the 100,000 mark which would place it in a more remunerative federal aid category.

Some cities and towns have expressed shock over their preliminary census figures which show that they have lost instead of gained population. Some are crying foul.

Boston, where the census people counted 504,054 or 565,000 inhabitants depending upon some missing precincts, claims that more than 100,000 others may have been skipped by shoddy enumerating.

Indeed, when preliminary census figures first arrived in Quincy they showed only 77,000 people. The city had more than that 35 years ago.

"I thought there was a terrible mistake somewhere," said Tobin.

He and City Clerk John Gillis checked back with the Census Bureau and found that they had not counted Wollaston, Montclair and Squantum as parts of Quincy.

Tobin said he expects a new preliminary census figure early next week.

The last time the federal government counted heads in Quincy was in 1970 when they turned up 87,966 residents. In 1975, when the state took its census, there were 91,478, making it the eighth largest city in the state.

Watson Disagrees On Surplus

Kelly Says Branch Libraries Could Have Been Saved

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

"I think the branch libraries could have been saved and I certainly think they should have been saved," says City Council President Leo Kelly.

Kelly's comments were prompted by the news that the Thomas Crane Public Library returned a $56,713 surplus from 1979-80 to the city despite the fact that four branch libraries were closed this spring.

The board of library trustees voted to close the Houghs Neck, Squantum, Atlantic and West Quincy branches, citing mounting budget problems.

But, the 1979-80 library budget saw a $56,713 surplus in "personnel services," (salaries), Kelly noted.

"Okay, so they're returning $56,000 to the city," Kelly said. "That's fine, but why couldn't that have been used to keep some of the branches open?"

"It's always been my feeling that the branch libraries were essential," he added. "I don't feel there was ever as much done with them as there could have been."

Budget cuts made by the City Council reduced the library's 1980-81 budget by about $183,000 below last year's, according to City Auditor Charles Shea.

The total budget was reduced from $1.25 million to $107 million, while salaries were cut from $973,132 to $845,167.

The surplus resulted from seven library positions being left vacant, in keeping with the city's overall fiscal problems according to Director Warren Watson.

"I realize city government has to be scaled down, although I'm not that happy about our part," he added.

The surplus "has nothing whatever to do with the operation of branch libraries," Watson said. "Any city councillor should know that."

"What he (Kelly) is saying just can't be done."

Commission Okays South Quincy Ramps

The Quincy Conservation Commission has cleared the way for the state to build ramps from the Southeast Expressway to the new Quincy Adams MBTA station ... provided it doesn't interfere with Town Brook.

The Commission gave its endorsement to the state project with the notation that "the prime concern of this commission in this instance is the prevention of flooding."

"It is the intention of this commission to carefully view this area during and after completion of this project in order to in fact insure zero impact on this problem."

"Adequate means of trapping sediment must be employed downstream of the project to prevent siltation of Town Brook."

The commission also expressed concern for the protection of the smelt in the brook.

Newport Ave. Resurfacing In August

Restructuring and resurfacing a section of Newport Ave. between Hancock and West Squantum Sts. is scheduled to get underway late next month, Senator Paul D. Harold announces.

Bids for the $380,000 project are scheduled to be opened July 29, and work is expected to begin about the third week of August. The project is slated for completion about Nov. 1.

Senator Harold said the construction contract will include a requirement that the roadway be kept passable to through traffic at all times during the work.

Ricciuti: Costly If Not Taken Lyons Mill Wins Round Against Role As City Dump

The 86-year-old Lyons Turning Mill in West Quincy took a giant step closer to the National Historic Register last week, a status that could save it from becoming a part of the city dump.

The Massachusetts Historical Commission voted to recommend the old mill and 15 other sites in the Blue Hills for the Register which would protect it from federal actions.

The Lyons Mill, one of the few remaining structures associated with the glory days of the granite industry in Quincy, is in the way of fourth and the final five year phase of the city's waste disposal program.

Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti said that if that phase is eliminated and the city is forced to find other disposal space the cost could represent as much as $10 on the tax rate.

Stephen Cole of the State Historical Commission said National Register status would not protect the mill fully from city action "but it would increase its prestige value significantly in the public eye."

"We are not certain what the future holds for the Lyons Turning Mill," said Cole, "but we will try to protect it with all the resources that the National Register gives us."

Ricciuti said he has detected little public reaction either way on the preservation or demolition of the mill.

"I haven't gotten a single letter from the public on it, except the form letters that were designed by the Quincy Historical Society a couple of months back," he said.

"On the other hand, I have had no political backup to continue with the dump program either. I've tried to get the City Council to assess the situation but nobody's interested."

"The mill is just an old ruin. It has no significance at all. It would be a tragedy to have to suffer the cost of seeking another dump site just to satisfy the whim of people who think it's historically important."

Ricciuti said, according to the dumping program laid out a dozen years ago, Phase 3 is scheduled to be filled in about a year. Phase 4 would include the Lyons Mill area.

Cole said the nomination of the mill is being sent to the Register office in Washington this week and the usual time taken to either approve or disapprove it is about three months.

Brownell Urges Anti-Vandal Patrols In Oceanview

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D-Quincy) has called for more police patrols to stem the tide of vandalism in the Oceanview Senior Citizens Housing Complex in Germantown.

He said he has received numerous complaints from residents about the high incidence of crime in the area.

"The residents of Oceanview deserve, at the very least, the peace of mind associated with the protection of person and property," said Brownell. "The fear of lack of security is a crime itself."

REDUCE MEDICAL COSTS

Medical costs have been soaring in recent years and the level-off point is not in sight. However, they can be held down if certain precautions are taken.

Have a family doctor. His family case histories that he accumulates can eliminate expensive duplication of diagnostic tests.

After age 35, an annual checkup is really important. And if you feel the need for a doctor, go to his office if possible. That's where his diagnostic equipment is and office calls are less expensive than house calls.

If you're over 65 and eligible, make sure you're enrolled in Medicare and have supplemental private health insurance coverage to fill the gaps. Make sure you maintain complete records of health costs to speed up insurance claims and to substantiate income tax deductions.

Music, Fun, Values To Highlight Sidewalk Bazaar

Music, fun and shopping values will highlight the 11th annual three-day downtown Quincy Sidewalk Bazaar sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

From today (Thursday) through Saturday night, Hancock St. will be closed between Granite and School Sts. for the bazaar. The street will become a pedestrian mall, featuring 40 booths sponsored by stores and civic organizations, and a variety of activities.

Cliveden St. and Hancock Court will also be closed. Regular traffic will be rerouted along Chestnut and School Sts.

The main event of the festivities will be the selection and coronation Friday night of Miss Quincy Bay of 1980. Last year's winner, Nancy Myers of Hingham, will crown her successor, who will reign over Quincy Bay Race Week in August. The pageant will be on a portable boardwalk in front of the Hancock Bank, starting at 9:15 p.m.

A special treat for the kids will be The Burger King Show. The King himself will appear from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Thursday and Friday outside the QCBPA office at 1416 Hancock St.

During his three shows, members of the audience will be invited to help the King perform his magic tricks. Between shows, kids can meet with the King and have their picture taken with him free by PhotoQuick.

The Burger King show is sponsored by Burger King, PhotoQuick and the QCBPA.

As usual, music and dancing will be part of the weekend. Taking part in the festivities will be:

- Baron Hugo, famed band leader and his orchestra, performing Friday night and for the Miss Quincy Bay Pageant.

- Mabel Biagini, strolling minstrel, performing with her accordion at various spots downtown between noon and 2 p.m. on Thursday and Friday.

- Quincy's Young World dancers, performing Thursday and Friday nights.

- The Milton Band, in concert Thursday night.

- A country band, in full western attire, will perform for square dancing Thursday night. All are invited to take part.

Also featured will be mime performances, a dunking booth, and visits Friday and Saturday by the Franklin Park Zoomobile.

On the serious side are demonstrations of cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) techniques by the Quincy Police ambulance team on Thursday and Friday, a blood pressure screening clinic staffed by Quincy Health Department nurses on Thursday and Friday and a crime prevention demonstration, also on Thursday and Friday.

QCH Displays At Sidewalk Bazaar

Obstetrics, cardiac rehabilitation and pediatrics displays will be featured at Quincy City Hospital's booth at the Quincy Sidewalk Bazaar.

Obstetric department displays will feature posters, materials, and a discussion by Dr. Richard Adams today (Thursday) 1-3 p.m. on birthing rooms, labor and delivery.

The cardiac rehabilitation display today and Friday 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., will include the American Heart Association's display, "Your Heart and How it Works", films, heart attack and stop-smoking information.

There will be CPR demonstrations Thursday at 1:15 p.m. and Friday 1:30 to 2:30 p.m.

The pediatrics display, also today and Friday 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., will include pediatrics blood pressure, a slide show, free balloons and nurse and or caps, and a doll house.

There will also be a free blood pressure checks with an extra large cuff available. The Quincy Civil Defense Ambulance will be parked beside the booth, and Gail Lombardi, registered dietician, will answer questions on diet and health.

2 Arrested In Willard St. Fire

A 19-year-old Braintree man was held in $15,000 bail this week on charges connected with a $150,000 fire in an office building at 406 Willard St., West Quincy.

Troy A. Doucette pleaded innocent in Quincy District Court to those charges and to eight other charges involving breaks in Quincy and Randolph, drugs and a robbery.

His case was continued to July 23.

A 16-year-old Quincy youth, also arrested in connection with the Willard St. fire on July 7, was held in $10,000 bail in juvenile court and the case was continued to July 29.

Taking part in the investigation were Dets. William Donnelly, Thomas Casey, Ernesto Lijoi, Officer Gerald D'Arigo and Economic Crime Coordinator William Grindlay.

Also Sgt. Donald Riley and Officers John Barnes, Anthony Courage, Robert Edgar and John Caporale of the Patrol Division.

Getting Tough With The Drug Pusher

At long last, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts appears to be getting serious in its efforts to crack down on the drug menace that is infecting our society, particularly the young who are so vulnerable to the blandishments of the traffickers.

A month ago, Gov. King signed a new law that raises phenylethylamine, the deadly animal tranquilizer known as PCP or "angel dust," to the category of a Class B substance and doubles the punishment for selling it. Dealers now can get up to 10 years and a $20,000 fine for a conviction.

Last week, Gov. King signed a new law that would bring down mandatory sentences on the heads of major drug dealers, many of whom heretofore received probation or a suspended sentence or some similar slap on the wrist.

As of now, a first conviction for dealing in any Class A substance—heroin and the like—will result in a mandatory sentence of one year in State Prison.

A dealer in cocaine (Class B), the latest crutch in vogue with the Jet Set, will now get a mandatory three years for dealing in 28 grams (about one ounce), five years for 100 grams and 10 years for 200 grams.

The State Legislature and the Governor also took a dim view of the most popular—and, to some, the least lethal—drug of all, marijuana.

Pot dealers now face a mandatory year in the House of Correction for dispensing or even cultivating 50 pounds of marijuana, three years in State Prison for 100 pounds, five years for 2,000 pounds and 10 years for 10,000 pounds.

Best of all, in our opinion, is that section of the law which calls for mandatory sentences of five, three and two years in State Prison for the distribution of any Class A, B or C substance to persons under the age of 18.

Recently, The Quincy Sun concluded a 15-part series on the drug problem in Quincy which underscored the concern of law enforcement officials that the courts are much too lenient with drug pushers, who, says Patrolman Donald Pearson, "are often on the streets again before I've finished writing my report."

We trust that these strict new laws with their mandatory sentences will hold these despoilers of the young at least long enough for Patrolman Pearson to close his notebook and put his pen back in his pocket.

Quincy Quiz

There are no winners in the Quincy Quiz this week—although Debbie Barkhouse of 2 Keyes St., Quincy Point with four correct answers and one near miss came about as close as you can get without winning.

Debbie's not quite correct answer to Question 5 was: "The regular meetings of the City Council are held on Mondays at 7:30." For the correct answer, see below.

Each week two Quincy Sun T-shirts and two Quincy Sun bumper stickers are being offered as the prizes in the Quincy Quiz.

The first two readers (one a mail subscriber) to submit to The Sun office the correct answers to that week's five questions receive the T-shirt. The next two receive the bumper stickers.

One person in each home is eligible to compete in any one week.

This week's Quincy Quiz questions:

1. There are four state highways in Quincy. Name them.
2. McIntyre Mall beside City Hall is named for William F. McIntyre. Who was he?
3. In what section of the city is Pagnano Towers, the senior citizens' apartment complex?
4. What is the name of Quincy's director of Recreation?
5. Upland Rd. used to run from Granite to Adams Sts. What is the new name for Upland Rd.?

Answers to last week's Quincy Quiz:

1. The South Shore Bank, also known as the Granite Trust building, is at 1400 Hancock St.
2. Capt. Wollaston, for whom the Wollaston section was named, was the leader of the first settlers in what is now Quincy in 1625.
3. The Norfolk County Recreational Facility is in the Montclair section of Quincy.
4. Quincy's director of veteran's services is Francis L. Sullivan.
5. The City Charter specifies that regular meetings of the City Council must be held on the first and third Mondays of each month, except July and August, at 7:30 p.m.

Ted: 'I'll Be Nominated'

The odds seem lopsided against Senator Edward Kennedy wrestling the Presidential nomination away from Jimmy Carter at the Democratic National Convention.

A miraculous stampede of delegates to the Kennedy camp would be needed. But miracles do happen -- once in awhile.

However, when Kennedy stands up there on TV and says he's going to stay in the fight right through the convention, he apparently means it.

And, when he insists, "I'm going to be the nominee," he sounds like he means that, too.

His workers apparently think so, too, -- or, hope so. Like Ron Iacubucci of Quincy.

Iacubucci was among 35 or 40 Kennedy staff members all of whom worked out-of-state for him and were guests at a recent cookout at the Kennedy compound in Hyannis Port.

Iacubucci, who worked Pennsylvania, Michigan and New Jersey for Kennedy said the Senator was "relaxed and enthusiastic" during the cookout.

"He told us he will be nominated at the convention," Iacubucci says. "He said his name will be placed in nomination but he didn't say by who."

If the polls show Carter continuing to slip and Ronald Reagan a strong bet to defeat him, maybe it could start that miraculous stampede.

"It could," says Iacubucci. "It really could." Anyway, the Kennedy campaign is continuing.

A fund-raising rally is scheduled for July 31 (8 p.m.) at the Savoy Theater, Boston. Reserved tickets ($25) and unreserved ($15) can be obtained by calling Iacubucci at 472-5768.

And, what if Kennedy finally has to bow to Carter? Well, 1984 is just four years away.

THAT MALE CHAUVINIST who refused to allow School Committee woman Joan Picard to play for his volleyball team at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce outing may have sparked a new trend in women's lib.

Morrissey Says:

Newly Signed Housing Law Construction Shot-In-Arm

The $178.5 million housing bill that was signed into law by Gov. King last week will mean a shot in the arm for construction work around the state, says Rep. Michael W. Morrissey (D-Quincy).

"For Quincy, in particular," he said, "this package represents more funding for Commercial Area Revitalization Districts (CARDs), modernization of older buildings and revolving loans."

Morrissey, who was co-sponsor of the bill, said its provisions will mean the upgrading and construction of more than 9,000 housing units and create 5,000 construction jobs in Massachusetts. The new law will provide:

- $100 million for the revitalization of the state's older public housing units.
- $67 million for construction of new housing for the elderly.
- $10 million for the scattered-site family program.
- $1.5 million for a new state Neighborhood Housing Services program.

"The signing of this legislation is a clear commitment by the Governor and the Legislature to address the serious housing shortage that is confronting the state," said Morrissey.

The new law authorizes the Massachusetts Industrial Finance Agency (MIFA) to finance mixed-use residential and commercial projects in CARD areas.

It also provides for a $1 million demonstration program to purchase condominiums for the elderly.

Joan has promised to start a campaign to add some games in which women can compete successfully to the Chamber's roster of bocce, football throws, horseshoes, et al.

"About the only game women can compete in now is cribbage," said Joan, who took part in that sport with her husband, Tom, as partner.

She tried the basketball free throw contest, however, and finished second among the two women contestants, Pam Harrington of the U.S. Trust Co. sank one free throw in live. Joan missed all of them.

And to think that only a few years ago women were discouraged from even attending the outing.

BILL DE LARGY, who covered the Quincy-South Shore area for the old Boston Record-American, is a patient at University Hospital, Boston. Bill, who has been retired for a few years, was one of the best and one of the fairest newsmen ever to cover a news story.

And, a great guy. A card from friends would help cheer him. He's in Room F424. The hospital address is 75 East Newton St., Boston.

WANT TO LOSE weight, the easy way?

Quincy Atty. Steve Keefe has his own formula: No sugar, no salt, no sandwiches (no bread). Fat fish and chicken. Does it work? Well, since October, Steve has lost 24 pounds (down to 175) and three inches off his waistline. He looks trim and 10 years younger.

I.T. FRANK MULLEN of the Quincy Police Department has his own way of keeping trim. He jogs 10 miles every day. And swims a half-hour daily. It keeps his weight at 180 and his stomach flat.

QUINCY accordionist Mabel Biagini performed Saturday at a surprise birthday party for Eunice Kennedy Shriver at the Kennedy Compound in Hyannis Port.

The earliest recorded strike was one by an orchestra leader from Greece named Aristos in Rome about 309 B.C. The cause was meal breaks!

Creedon Takes Issue With Quincy-Lynn Schools Comparison

By TOM HENSHAW

"City councillors and worried taxpayers, agonizing over the amount of money being spent on public education in Lynn, should be thankful they aren't living in Quincy."

That's the provocative lead paragraph on a story that appeared recently in the Lynn Daily Item comparing the Lynn and Quincy school systems, financially and educationally.

Quincy loses on both counts. The story has gained some currency in Quincy in the past few days through the medium of a Xerox machine that has been busily turning out copies for city officials and critics of Quincy schools.

The story and its interpretations of the differences found between the two systems drew some sharp comments from School Supt. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon.

Said the story: "Local (Lynn) school committee members have already approved a $27.7 million School Department budget. Add another $2 million being included in a requested supplementary budget and the total cost of public school education is a whisker under the $30 million mark."

"Yet, in Quincy, a community with at least 1,200 fewer public school children than Lynn, the budget for last year was well over $33.3 million. The per pupil cost for regular students was at $2,261 a day (sic) last year in Quincy, compared to $1,690 a day (sic) here in Lynn."

"Taking all types of activities in to consideration, including supportive services, plant operation costs and special needs and bilingual class students, the Lynn per pupil spending increases to $1,895, but in Quincy taxpayers are forced to pay $2,186."

(The phrase "a day" apparently was inserted in the story by error. Creedon said the figures used in the Lynn story did not reflect the 4,000 students at Quincy Junior College but it did include the $1.5 million junior college budget.

He pointed out that while Lynn spent $150,000 on its adult continuing education program, Quincy spent more than $500,000. Those figures, he said, were not explained in the Lynn story.

"There are just two items off the top of my head that would make a difference of $2 million right there," he said.

"If you add the 4,000 junior college students to the Quincy total then actually we have 2,800 more students than Lynn."

The Lynn story said: "The academic achievements, at least as mirrored in test scores, clearly shows Lynn students a stride or two ahead of their Quincy counterparts."

"For example, college-bound seniors taking SAT scholastic aptitude test mathematics tests in Lynn had an average score of 451 in the 1978-79 testing period. The verbal test scores during the same period stood at 416."

"Math test scores by North Quincy High students during the same period averaged 426 while the verbal test scores averaged 396. At the same time the Quincy High math test scores were 425 and the verbal quiz scores were 396."

"Thus Lynn with far less money being expended per pupil seemingly has achieved much greater success, if indeed public school success can be measured by academic achievements."

Creedon said the SAT figures given for Quincy by the Lynn newspaper were correct.

"We are not satisfied with the SAT scores in the Quincy high schools," he said. "We have been working quite hard to identify the reasons why SAT scores are not as positive as we would like."

But, he added, "Quincy loses many of its college-bound young people to the parochial and private schools, which does not happen in Lynn."

"About 18 per cent of the kids who would normally go to high school in Quincy leave the public schools for parochial or private schools. Half the student enrollment at Archbishop Williams is from Quincy. Fifteen per cent at Boston College High."

"These would be among our better students."

"We have talked to the Lynn authorities and they tell us that such a drain in Lynn is almost nonexistent, particularly since the tuition went up at St. Mary's High School there. They had 50 to 75 kids return to public schools."

The Lynn story said: "Quincy teachers receive about 20 per cent more in their paychecks than their Lynn counterparts."

"Quincy is more liberal in teachers' salaries," Creedon conceded. "Like the salaries in other city departments, they are reasonably attractive compared to others around the state."

The Lynn story concludes: "Either something very right is being done in Lynn schools or the Quincy school system is on a very dangerous course."

City Wins New Round In Pay Dispute With Teachers

The State Supreme Court has refused to take jurisdiction in a Quincy Education Association suit to force the city to ante up all the money asked by the School Committee to run the schools for fiscal 1980 and 1981.

Mayor Arthur H. Tobin claimed a victory for the city in the case.

Judge Benjamin Kaplan ordered the suit, which was filed in the Supreme Court by the QEA and 10 taxpayers, be sent to the Norfolk Superior Court for disposition.

City Solicitor Robert Fleming called the case "an apparent challenge raised to the tax cap legislation that limits school department appropriations."

Eventual ramifications, he said, may go far beyond the dispute between the city and the QEA.

The action by the QEA claims that the 4 per cent tax cap passed by the State Legislature in 1979 does not apply to school budgets since the legislation fails to repeal fiscal autonomy.

The QEA suit, which is now in the hands of the Superior Court, had asked the Supreme Court to:

- Issue a preliminary injunction to prevent the setting of a tax rate in Quincy for 1981.
- Order the city to provide

$2,028,056, plus $507,014 in penalties, to fund pay raises for 1980.

• Order the city to appropriate $4,783,707.70, plus $1,195,926.90 in penalties, and restore it to the 1981 school budget.

Fleming said he will ask that the suit be consolidated with two other similar QEA suits in Superior Court and seek a clear ruling on whether the mayor can be forced to submit a supplemental budget.

He said it could be at least a year, possibly a year and a half or two years, before the case of the QEA v. Quincy will be settled once and for all.

Federal Grant To Aid Sterling Recreation Facilities

Mayor Tobin has announced that $57,000 in federal funds has been allocated to the rehabilitation and improvement of outdoor recreation facilities at Sterling Junior High School.

The money from Quincy's Community Development Block Grant program will be used to construct a one-eighth mile track, a shot put area, long jump facility, a basketball court and open space for miscellaneous activities.

Construction is expected to begin in early September.

Tobin said the program is one of many neighborhood revitalization projects being undertaken in the Southwest Quincy section, including housing, public services and public works.

He said it is expected that the Sterling improvement project will upgrade the overall living environment of Southwest by increasing recreational opportunities for youth and adults.

He said the building is 60 per cent rented and efforts will be made to retain the storefront tenants on the first floor, Tom McAn's shoes and the CVS store.

Renovation Starts On Greenleaf Building

Renovation work has begun on the Greenleaf Building at the corner of Hancock and Granite Sts., built in 1876, one of the oldest existing structures in downtown Quincy.

Developer Stephen Ricciardi said it is expected that the first tenants will be able to move into the modernized offices on the second and third floors around Sept. 1.

While the building is to be completely renovated inside, the exterior will be restored to a condition similar to when it was built 104 years ago.

Ricciardi said the building is 60 per cent rented and efforts will be made to retain the storefront tenants on the first floor, Tom McAn's shoes and the CVS store.

Education Survey For Senior Citizens

Beginning July 21 and continuing for at least six weeks, Quincy Junior College and the Quincy Council on Aging will be conducting a door-to-door survey of persons 60 years old or older.

The survey is designed to begin to assess the educational needs of Quincy seniors and to give Quincy Junior College an idea of the kinds of courses desired.

Donna Rothenberg, Outreach Counselor with the Quincy Junior College Student Outreach Services, said she thinks there may be senior citizens in the city of Quincy who are not aware of the varied course offerings at Quincy Junior College.

"What we want to do," she said, "is to find out what kinds of courses and workshops would be most popular. Before we do any kind of programming, we need to know what kinds of courses people want, when they want them, and where they want them. That's exactly why we're doing this survey -- the College is gathering information for possible use in the future."

Marion Andrews, director of the Quincy Council on Aging, said people will be selected at random from the 1979 list of Quincy residents 60 years of age or older. After these random names have been selected, the survey workers will call the person to set up a time to go to the home and interview.

Interviewing will be done by the CETA-funded Operation Information team, which operates out of the Quincy Council on Aging. Coordinator of the team is Paul Fisher and members are Debra Brundidge, Marjorie Menz, and Regina Tempesta. All three members of the survey team are registered with the Quincy Police and will have identification badges with them, said Mrs. Andrews.

REMEMBER WHEN?

... the present home of Burgin, Platner Insurance was a three-story wooden building that was known far and wide as the old Town Hall—and a peripatetic one at that.

It was built in 1816 as a combination Town Hall and schoolhouse for $1,200, the first time that Quincy, a town since 1792, ever found it necessary to borrow money for a municipal improvement.

It was moved to a site on Coddington St. near the present Coddington School in 1842 and two years after it lost its place as the seat of government when the present City hall was built.

The land on which the old Town hall once stood was used to enlarge the Hancock Cemetery so when the building was moved back in 1866 it came to rest slightly south of the old location.

It became the East Norfolk District Courthouse in 1872, later housed the Quincy YMCA and, sometime around 1920, it was remodelled into a two-story building and joined to the adjoining Copeland Building.

Now known as the Central Building, it is reputed to be the oldest standing office building in Quincy. It has been the home of Burgin, Platner Insurance since 1951.

Quincy Police Move Into 3rd Spot

The Quincy Police softball team moved into third place in the Eastern Mass. League with a 19-12 victory last Sunday over Brookline.

Jim Bugle and Nick Nichols, with four hits each, and Edward Kusser with three, led Quincy's 20-hit attack.

The score was 3-3 in the third inning when player-manager Gerald Queeny drove in two runs with a double and Joe Mannix followed with a single driving in Queeny. Quincy went on to score 13 runs in the last four innings.

Chico Caporale and Joe Lips combined for the defensive play of the game, a sparkling double play in the second inning that halted a potential big inning for Brookline.

In pre-game ceremonies Lynn Kenny, an insurance agent, presented a check to Duke McLary and Jim McNeil for the police relief fund which benefits stricken police officers.

Quincy will play Weston Sunday with the $1 admission being used to benefit the Neighborhood Watch program.

Conti, 4-Hitter Sparks Elks

Houghs Neck defeated the Elks, 7-3, in the Quincy Babe Ruth League with Joe Conti the winning pitcher and Dan Fink the loser.

Conti pitched four-hit ball and struck out eight and also had a key hit driving in two runs in the fifth inning.

Morrisette Wins 3, Wollaston Upsets

Morrisette Legion's baseball team won three games during the past week to improve its Zone 6 Division 2 record to 9-4 and Wollaston did Morrisette a big favor with an upset win over league-leading Weymouth, improving Morrisette's chances of overtaking Weymouth.

Weymouth's record fell to 7-3 in losing the 6-5 shocker to Wollaston (4-9). Morrisette still has two games to play with Weymouth, which got off to a late start in zone play due to Weymouth South High having played in the Eastern Mass. schoolboy tournament.

Morrisette has two big games coming up, hosting Milton Friday night and entertaining undefeated Canton (Division 1 leader) Tuesday night. Both games will be at 8 o'clock at Adams Field.

Quincy will play at Weymouth Friday at 6, will host Hingham Saturday night at 8 at Adams and will be home to Wollaston Monday at 8 at Adams.

Wollaston will host Braintree Sunday night at 8 at Adams, will play Quincy Monday and will be at Weymouth next Wednesday at 6.

Monday night Gary DiNardo pitched six-hit ball as Morrisette avenged an earlier setback and defeated Holbrook, 6-3, under the lights at Holbrook.

Morrisette scored three runs in the first inning as Mike Scurti and Dan Boyle walked. Bill O'Connell was hit by a pitch to fill the bases and Mark Millane tripled to clear the bases.

Holbrook scored twice in the bottom of the inning.

In the fourth DiNardo walked, was bunted along by Jim O'Toole. Scurti reached on an error by the shortstop. DiNardo scoring. Bill Deitsch walked and Bob Biagini tripled the two runners home. Dave Trenouth had homered for Holbrook's final run in the third.

Biagini and Millane had two hits each and Jim O'Toole played an outstanding game at shortstop. DiNardo improved his record to 4-1 with the victory.

Last Friday Morrisette bombed Wollaston, 11-2, in a game called after five innings. The umpire called the game due to an electrical storm.

"With those aluminum bats the players have lightning rods in their hands and I don't want anyone to get hurt," said umpire Peter Williams.

After a 45-minute delay Williams called for the game to be resumed but most of the Wollaston had left the area.

Paul Earle pitched a five-hitter for Morrisette.

Morrisette started fast with six runs in the opening inning. Scurti reached on an error. Boyle walked. Deitsch singled to load the bases. Biagini walked, forcing in a run. O'Connell also walked to force in another. Andy Carrera singled home the third run. Kevin Howlett singled home two and Carrera scored on an error.

Wollaston scored once in the second when Pete Alibrandi was hit by a pitch and eventually scored on Brian Reale's sacrifice fly.

In the bottom half Biagini singled, stole second and scored on a single by O'Connell.

Morrisette added five in the third when Jim O'Toole, Scurti and Boyle singled. O'Toole scored on a sacrifice fly by Deitsch. Biagini tripled and O'Connell and Kevin Howlett singled.

Wollaston scored its second run in the fourth when Rich Hallberg singled with the bases filled.

Biagini, Scurti, O'Connell and

Howlett had two hits each for Morrisette, with Biagini and O'Connell each driving in three runs.

Earlier Morrisette had defeated Quincy, 8-3, with DiNardo pitching seven-hit ball.

Morrisette opened with three runs in the first on a double by Scurti, a walk to Deitsch, a wild pitch, O'Connell's single, and a single by Millane.

In the fourth it added three on a walk to Carrera, Deitsch's single, a walk to Biagini, an error on O'Connell's fly and a single by Millane.

In the fifth Carrera, Biagini and O'Connell walked and Carrera scored in an infield out.

Quincy scored twice in the third on a single by Mike Stranberg, an error and singles by Tony Camillo and Pat Ennis.

Millane had three hits and two RBO, O'Connell two RBI. Scurti two hits and an RBI and Biagini an RBI triple.

Wollaston bounced back from an 7-2 loss to Canton and a 15-4 defeat at the hands of Braintree to shock Weymouth, 6-5 in one of the major upsets of the season.

Paul McConville pitched a five-hitter and Glen Segalla drove in two runs with a pair of doubles for Wollaston.

Segalla, McConville and Sean Murphy had two hits each for Wollaston, which collected nine hits. RBI singles by John Kavanaugh and McConville, a two-run double by Segalla and a wild pitch gave Wollaston a 6-2 lead going into the last inning but Weymouth went down fighting as it scored three runs before McConville put out the fire.

In the loss to Canton Wollaston took advantage of two walks and an error to score in the third and scored again in the fourth on a walk to Jim Hensley and infield hits by Segalla and Steve Belcastro.

Quincy defeated Norwell, 8-6, for its fourth victory of the season in an exciting game which saw Norwell with the tying runs in scoring position and two outs in the last inning. Norwell coach Jim Murphy hotly disputed a called third strike on Steve Gangi which ended the game.

Norwell had the bases loaded with no outs in the final inning when Steve McPhail singled home two runs. Steve Healy came in on relief for Quincy, got two outs on a pop fly and strikeout, then got Gangi on a called third strike.

Quincy scored twice in the second on a two-run double by Ennis, then exploded for six in the third as Stranberg singled home two runs and Greg Madden, John Costigan and Art Roberts all drove in runs.

Quincy lost to Braintree, 8-2, as its pitchers issued eight walks to make things easy for the winners.

Gibbons Receives NU Baseball Letter

Pat Gibbons, a former Quincy High pitcher, recently was awarded his first varsity baseball letter at Northeastern University.

Although Gibbons, a sophomore last season, had no record, he compiled a 3.86 ERA and is expected to bolster the Huskies' bullpen next season.

After getting off to a poor start, Northeastern roared back with six straight wins to finish 14-12 and just missed the ECAC regional playoffs. The team had doubleheader sweeps over UMass, New Hampshire and Brown and also had big wins over Connecticut, Fairfield, Springfield and Tufts.

Gibbons is majoring in Business Administration at Northeastern.

At Plymouth Thursday

Mariners Split Doubleheader At Hingham

The Quincy Mariners, with a 10-6 South Coast Baseball League record, will play at Plymouth tonight (Thursday) at 6 o'clock p.m. and Sunday at 1 p.m. will host Abington in a doubleheader at Adams Field. The Mariners will play at Braintree next Thursday at 6 o'clock.

The Mariners last Sunday split a doubleheader with the Hingham Phillies at Hingham.

Ron Donovan pitched another outstanding game for the Mariners, holding Hingham to four hits in an opening game 5-3 victory, and encountering his only trouble in the sixth inning when a spell of wildness led to all three runs.

Quincy scored all its runs in the top of the sixth, featured by Bobby Mayo's booming triple with the bases loaded. Up to the sixth Donovan and Hingham's Kevin Doyle had no trouble.

Donovan, who has been one of the league's most effective pitchers, retired the first 12 men he faced before Mike Schwob singled in the fifth.

John Massolia had two of Quincy's five hits and collected the team's first hit off Doyle, who had retired the first seven batters.

Massolia opened the sixth with his second hit but was out when Lodd Mills reached on a fielder's choice. Mills stole second and Doyle walked. Bob Benn, Mike McCormack and Paul Vespaziani to force home the game's first run. Mayo then cleared the bases and he scored the final run on a wild pitch.

Donovan issued three walks in the bottom half and singles by Kevin Costello and Ed Fitzmaurice accounted for the three runs.

The second game also saw some fine pitching by Quincy's Vin Todd and Hingham's Lloyd Hill, as Hingham won, 4-3, for the split.

Hingham took a 1-0 lead in the second but Quincy scored twice in the top of the fifth when Hill walked the bases full, then issued another walk to Jimmy Mize to force home the tying run.

Then came a controversial play which resulted in the ejection of Hingham coach Ed Rose and gave Quincy its second run of the inning.

McCormack chopped a dribbler down the first baseline and Hill fielded the ball and tagged McCormack. The ball, however, popped out of his glove but right into first baseman Art Cronin's glove, easily beating McCormack to the bag. The umpire called him safe, ruling Hill had dropped the ball. Josh Alberti scored the go-ahead run. It appeared Rose had a legitimate beef.

In the bottom of the inning Fitzmaurice hit a mammoth three-run homer to spoil Todd's fine performance and give Hingham a split on the day.

The Mariners added a run in the last inning when Mize singled home Ron Donovan, but a long fly to left by Vespaziani ended the threat.

Mills, playing centerfield for Quincy, made one of the best catches ever seen at Cronin Field, racing to the fence and leaping high at the last second, the ball just hanging in the webbing of his glove.

Track Club Girls 5th In Kendall Open Division

The Quincy Track Club brought its entire team of girls from 4 to 19 years of age to last weekend's third annual Kendall Women's Games at Boston University.

Despite the stiffest competition ever faced by the club, the girls still placed fifth in the Open division and second in the New England Division with 94½ points.

Entries from all sections of the country including California, competed in the meet.

The QTC received $700 in development grant money from the Kendall Corporation.

In the 7-under division Marie Lenana placed second and Dawn Manton sixth in the softball throw.

In 8-9 division Karen Rodgers won the 400 meters in 1:12.0 and Maureen Supple placed second. Rachel Boland fifth and Dorothy Bonnar fifth in the softball throw.

In 10-11 action Tracy Wilson took second in the long jump and third in the high jump and Clare Murphy was sixth in the high jump.

In 12-13 Georgia Traficante set a meet record of five feet in winning the high jump and also placed fourth in the long jump. Kristine Picarski placed fourth in the 100 meters and was second in the long jump. Denise Petta was fifth in the long jump. Tracy Coull was fifth in the two-mile and the relay team of Maureen Roche, Picarski, Petta and Terri Hamilton took sixth.

In 14-15 Denise Santo was fifth in the long jump and Michelle Millane placed fourth in the shot put.

In 16-17 Caroline Mitchell was fourth in the 880 with a club record 2:17.6 and the relay team of Lianne Supple, Karen McCarthy, Kathy Stevens and Mitchell sprinted to a third place finish in the 1600-meter relay in a club record 3:59.6.

In the results of the recent Mass. State Police championships the name of Quincy's Eileen Crehan was omitted. Eileen, 14, won the softball throw with a toss of 200-6, the best ever by a QTC member.

Saturday the QTC will compete in the state Hershey Youth Program championships at Braintree High.

Kiwanis, Rotary Setting Pace

With the season winding down toward the playoffs, Kiwanis leads the Quincy Junior Baseball League's American League with a 14-5 record, followed closely by Burgin Platner (13-6) and Foley Plymouth Chrysler (13-7).

In the National League Rotary leads the pack with a 15-5 record, followed by the Elks (12-9) and Keohane's (11-9).

SPORTS FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

Brought To You By ROBERT COLMAN

See if you can answer this baseball puzzler . . . Instead of having a first baseman, second baseman, shortstop, third baseman and four outfielders, could a team use, say, only a first baseman in the infield, and then put 6 men in the outfield during a game?

ANSWER IS YES. The official rules say that outside of the pitcher and catcher, the other 7 fielders may play ANYWHERE as long as they're in fair territory.

Ever wonder how the Pittsburgh Pirates got the name Pirates? . . . In 1890, Pittsburgh signed some players who were already under contract to another team . . . Because of their actions the league dubbed them "The Pirates", and that famous nickname has remained.

Here's a believe-it-or-not from golf . . . In South Bend, Ind., on July 21, 1966, Mrs. Harold J. Leyes shot a hole-in-one on the 9th hole of a golf course at 1 p.m. . . . Exactly one hour later, on the same hole, on the same course, on the same day, her husband also shot a hole-in-one. . . . What are the odds on that happening?

I bet you didn't know . . . that whatever you need for summer fun, you'll find it at Colman's. Summer fashions for leisure or sports, summer games, fishing gear, all camping needs. You name it . . . Colman's has it . . . and at lowest money saving prices.

WEEK OF JULY 17.

AQUARIUS—January 21-February 19

Short treks keep you on toes all week, but there's a chance that you meet lovely new friend along the way. Good time for taking on sideline or starting profitable hobby.

PISCES—February 20-March 20

You excel at detecting errors and making logical decisions. At same time, you can get quite carried away with socializing. Very friendly soul makes point of greeting you.

A barker system could be answer to increased costs and new expenses. Family deadlock is broken by Monday. Play up simplicity in both your dress and decor.

GEMINI—May 23-June 21

Greater discipline—and this includes an improved diet—makes for more successful social life. In finance, ask many questions, few favors. Small risks pay off by Wednesday.

CANCER—June 22-July 22

The week finds you delegating work with greater force and more flair. Romancewise, there are more ups than downs. Good time to think about self-improvement programs.

LEO—July 23-August 22

The week may see you making changes in friendship circle. At work, a favor from higher-up means better things are around the corner. Weekend may be best one so far this summer.

VIRGO—August 23-September 22

Far-out schemes may not succeed right now, but keep your offbeat ideas on hold for a while. Image improves greatly—in eyes of loved one and colleagues.

LIBRA—September 23-October 22

Friendship may seem strained, but worst thing is to "prove" yourself in obvious way. Tend to legal matters promptly. Check rebellious streak that begins on weekend.

SCORPIO—October 23-November 21

Romance is favored, so long as you opt for light touch. Could be inspired to take on a few zany projects, and at least one brings dividends. Don't take sides in financial feud.

$22,849,454 Total $10 Million Increase In Construction

Construction in Quincy took a $10 million jump in 1979-80 over the previous year, according to the annual report of the City Building Inspection Department.

Permits for work costing an estimated $22,849,454 were issued during the fiscal year, while $12,415,738 in work was approved during 1978-79.

A $14 million increase in construction of mercantile buildings accounted for the overall increase.

Permits for seven mercantile buildings costing an estimated $15.1 million were issued during 1979-80, while six buildings, costing $1.2 million, were approved during 1978-79.

The construction of one-family homes was down, from 25 homes costing $597,000 built last year to 20 costing $564,000, approved this year.

The number and value of other permits approved during 1979-80 are:

One three-family dwelling, costing $40,000; six multi-family dwellings, $1,628,000; three storage, $14,000; five garages, $16,000; 725 residential alterations, $2,280,407; 128 other alterations, $2,047,512; 31 removals, $75,289; 90 signs, $123,451; 222 miscellaneous, $963,995.

Six new dwelling units were added through alterations and 106 through new construction.

The department collected $87,448.75 in receipts during 1979-80 and collected $10,857 for public safety inspections.

City Dump To Close Saturdays

The City Dump has been closed to all commercial rubbish disposal on Saturday for economy reasons, it was announced by Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti.

Only residential rubbish originating in Quincy will be accepted and only then if it is of a minimum amount that can be deposited in dumpsters at the check-in area on Ricciuti Drive.

Ricciuti said the closing has become mandatory due to the fiscal restraints placed on the DPW when the City Council slashed its budget.

After One-Day Halt Hospital Admissions Back To Normal

By TOM HENSHAW

Admitting policies at City Hospital were back to normal Tuesday after a one-day partial halt to cover a weekend shortage of nurses.

Hospital Director Anthony P. DeFalco said admissions from the emergency room were stopped temporarily Sunday when two nursing staffs had to be combined due to a shortage in the Intensive Care Unit (ICU).

Normal admissions were restored Monday, said DeFalco.

"Usually there is a fall off in admissions during the summer," the director explained, "which accommodates our vacation schedule. But when we have an excess of sick time then there are problems."

DeFalco said that Asst. Director Harold Coose ordered the Sunday cutback in elective admissions after seven nurses called in sick and he became concerned for the ICU. Fifteen admissions is normal for a Sunday, he said.

City Hospital is understaffed by 20 full and part-time nurses — the equivalent of nine full-time nurses — DeFalco said, but it should be back to normal complement by September.

Normal is 396 full and part-time nurses or 360 in full-time equivalent.

DeFalco said nine prospective nurses are currently in the orientation program and the city has three more waiting to begin the next one. Six more are needed.

He decried as "not factual" published comments that City Hospital is having trouble getting nurses because the pay scales are not comparable to surrounding hospitals.

"Statements like that tend to get exaggerated," he said. "We are staying competitive with others on the entry level. One of our areas of concern is that we make sure we keep our experienced nurses."

Nearly 3,000 Eligible

200 Sign Up For Draft

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

More than 200 Quincy youths signed on the dotted line Monday and Tuesday in the first two days of draft registration.

About 100 signed up Monday and a slightly higher number on Tuesday, according to employees of the Quincy Center, North Quincy and Wollaston post offices.

And all three reported that the days' proceedings were quiet, orderly and lighter than expected.

Some 19- and 20-year-olds may have been confused by the on-again, off-again legal situation, which saw the draft declared unconstitutional by a Philadelphia court on Friday, but then given a temporary go-ahead by Supreme Court Justice William Brennan over the weekend. The full Supreme Court will take a look at the draft sometime this fall.

And, since you're not required to sign up in your home town, many youths probably signed up at out-of-town post offices.

Other young men may have been confused by the registration schedule. Those born in the first three months of 1960 were required to sign up Monday, those in the second three months on Tuesday, those in the third three months on Wednesday and those in the final three months on Thursday. Friday is a "make-up day" for those who missed signing up that week.

Young men born in 1961 will follow a similar schedule next week.

Birth records — which show 2,771 male and female births in 1960 and 2,886 in 1961 — indicate the city has about 2,800 young men of registration age, according to city clerk John Gillis.

That would mean about 350 young men registering per day, if they all registered on the proper day.

But Monday and Tuesday's figures fell over 200 short.

"We had 45 on Monday," said William Grimes, member of the Quincy Center post office. "It was pretty light."

"It's relatively quiet" said an employee of the North Quincy office. "We had about 22 yesterday," he said Tuesday

Picard: "That Isn't Right"

Closed Schools May Be Rented

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

To rent or not to rent?

The School Committee is studying the possibility of renting the three schools it closed this year to private educational groups.

But member Joan Picard says she's opposed to that.

"I did not vote to close those buildings to neighborhood kids and then lease them to private companies for other children," Mrs. Picard said. "That isn't right."

"We're going to end up in a mess and I want no part of it."

Several groups - Amego, which works with autistic children,
Quincy CETA, Milton Montessori
Schools, the Quincy Fire Department and South Shore Day Care Centers - have expressed interest in renting one of the closed schools, according to School Supt.
Dr. Lawrence Creedon.

That seemed like a good idea, too,
Patricia Toland. She said:

"All around the country, school systems are renting closed schools to other groups. It's a source of revenue to the school system."

"I don't care if we make a cent on sending somebody's children away from their neighborhood schools.
That isn't right," said Mrs. Picard.
She voted in favor of the closings on the grounds that the buildings be returned to the city and eventually placed on the tax rolls, she said.

"It's sort of a holding position," said Mrs. Toland of the renting option. It would give the committee a year to vote on a total reorganization plan, which could involve the closing of several more schools, and to decide whether it had any school-related use for the buildings. It would also give the city a year to line up private developers interested in taking over the buildings.

Planning Board Chairman
Bedros Baharian told The Quincy Sun in June that the sale of the three schools - the Great Hill, Hunting and Standish - to private developers would earn the city about $1.1 million.

Until the school system decides what it wants to do with the buildings, Creedon said, they will be staffed with custodians for security reasons.

But any agency or group renting the buildings would assume all utility and custodial costs, he said.

Member Mary Collins doubted that any agency would accept a one-year lease for one of the schools, since the cost of transferring into one of the buildings would be so high.

"One way or the other, I think we have to make a decision on it at the next meeting," she said.

Sidewalk Bazaar May Have Been Best Ever

The 1980 edition of the mid-summer Sidewalk Bazaar in downtown Quincy may have been the best one of them all in spite of 90-plus degree weather.

"Fantastic!" said Burt Cook of Tag's Discount Furniture and Sleep Shop. "Phenomenal! We were 30-40 per cent ahead of a year ago. We made last year's figure on the second day. The third day was a bonus."

"An excellent turnout," said Bob Colman of Colman's Sporting Goods. "It was a big success. Give Quincy a plus. It shows that the downtown business center is still alive and kicking."

The Quincy Cooperative Bank reported a land office business in senior citizens discount passes for the MBTA.

"The T people were amazed at the turnout," said Pat Jones, director of marketing for the QCB. "There were 20 to 30 in line at all times. The bazaar brought them out."

Sears Roebuck, which is moving its downtown Quincy operation to South Shore Plaza in the fall, reported excellent sales.

"We had more merchandise out than ever before," said Ove Strandskov, manager of Sears. "We made an effort this year to make it a good one. We put a lot of effort into it."

Barker's business was up four to five per cent over last year.

"And that's without air conditioning," said an obviously pleased Dick Barker.

"People are not traveling as much as they used to. They're staying close to home and spending money locally."

"There were an awful lot of people out, more than we expected," said Mark Bertman, adding that his Rogers Jewelry Store did "surprisingly well considering the weather and economic conditions."

"We were ahead about 15 per cent," he said. "It shows that honest values will attract people and the Sidewalk Bazaar has a reputation for honest values."

"Some people thought the bazaar had reached its peak but they were pleasantly surprised," said Jason Feldman of Jason's Luggage and Music Shop, who reported business a little better than last year.

"I think the outdoor carnival-type atmosphere has a lot to do with the popularity. People know that they're going to get good values and there's things for the kids to do, too."

Mrs. Charles Ryder of Ryder's Curtains and Drapes called the bazaar "fantastic the best we ever had business was up 50-75 per cent," but there was an unusual reason.

Ryder's is closing its store at 1617 Hancock St. and moving to the larger old Milton's store on July 26, so there were many more sale items to put out in the sidewalk booth.

Jack Kerrigan described business as "excellent; it was our kind of weather." Kerrigan runs the Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream store.

"It's hard to gauge business until we count up the number of tubs we sold," he said. "The money count doesn't mean anything anymore because of inflation."

Summer Cohen called business "fair" at Kincaide's Furniture Store.

"It was about on a par with last year," he said, "but we don't have the merchandise that we want to sacrifice since we moved the warehouse from Quincy to Boston. We send the slow moving stuff back in town."

"But it was still an exciting day, a fun day."

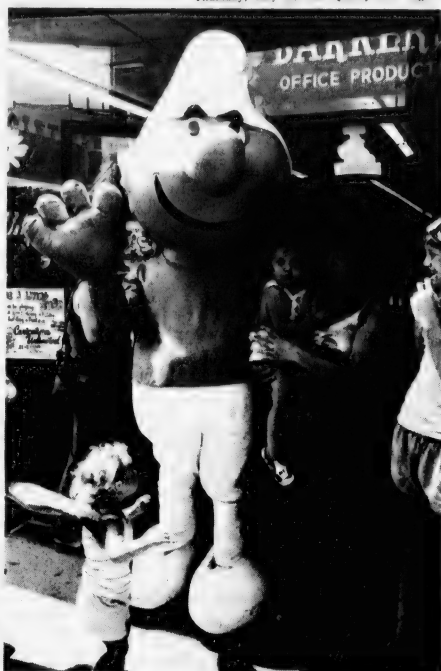

Nand Arora, manager of the FFC (Friendly Family Center) store, said business was better than last year.

Jerry Nicklas of Beacon Fabric and Furniture, which was taking part in its first Sidewalk Bazaar, said his store "did not do as well as we expected outside but we got people inside and did pretty well."

Another newcomer to downtown Quincy, Tempo Fashions, 108 Parkingway, which opened in March, didn't do as well as expected either.

"We hoped for better," said Manager Linda Langdon, "but we're not on Hancock St. I don't think a lot of people know where we are yet."

"We'll do something different next year, maybe put a booth out on Hancock St."

"SMURF", actually Elan Ezickson of Quincy, greets shoppers outside Barker's Office Products during last week's Sidewalk Bazaar. Getting acquainted are Chris Gallagher and her year-and-a-half old niece, Elaine Gallagher.

Two Quincy residents were recently named to the spring semester dean's list at American International College in Springfield. They are Sandra L. Molla, 58 Viden Rd., South Quincy and morning. Manager William Keough reported 34 registrants at the Wollaston post office.

Tuesday found about 20 more young men registering at North Quincy, about 70 at Quincy Center and, by mid-day, 11 at Wollaston.

The closest thing to a demonstration was a young man distributing anti-draft handbills outside the Quincy Center post office.

"You have at least until Friday at 5 p.m. to decide if you want to register," said the literature, printed by several anti-draft groups.

By registering, you will also be adding your name to the list of those who may before long be ordered to kill and die in places like the Middle East, Latin America or Southern Africa.

"During the Vietnam era," it continued, "more than half a million young people like you refused to register... some refusals (less than one percent) went to prison, but most never did."

The literature urged young men to contact one of several anti-draft groups for information and counseling on avoiding military service.

Failure to register carries a penalty of a $10,000 fine or five years in prison, or both.

$240 Monthly Rent Fuels QHA-CAP Dispute

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

The sum of $240 a month is fueling a bitter disagreement between the Quincy Housing Authority and the Community Action Program (CAP).

That's how much rent the QHA wants CAP to pay for space at 9 Bicknell St., Germantown.

That demand has sent CAP officials complaining to the district attorney's office about possible open meeting law violations and to the Executive Office of Communities and Development, to appeal the QHA decision.

"This is really a much larger question than whether we pay $240 or not," said CAP President Marge Doolin. The $240, if spent on rent, would then result in fewer services available for residents of Germantown housing, she said.

The QHA is requesting that social service organizations using space at 9 Bicknell St. pay a portion of that building's utility costs.

The board is requesting $90 each from South Shore Mental Health and the U-Mass sponsored Nutritional Program and $120 each from CAP and the CAP-sponsored family planning clinic.

That's a total of $420 per month or $5,040 per year. Utility costs at the building now run about $5,000 per year, said QHA Administrator Clement O'Brien.

"It's a philosophical dispute," said CAP Executive Director Rosemary Wahlberg, a former QHA board member, of the rent question.

While QHA members have claimed the board's main purpose is merely to provide housing, Mrs. Wahlberg feels that providing tenants with social services, such as those offered by her organization, should also be among the QHA's goals.

Mrs. Wahlberg left last Wednesday's QHA meeting after being denied permission to speak by Chairman Rev. William McCarthy.

"I had spoken with the chairman and he said I would be heard," said Mrs. Wahlberg. "I can't say he promised, but it was my understanding I would be heard," she said.

Rev. McCarthy noted that representatives of CAP had given that organization's side of the controversy at the QHA's May meeting and said he was not required to allow other persons to speak at the board's meetings.

Rev. McCarthy then read a two-page statement on behalf of the board which read, in part:

"If we are to pay costs for other governmental agencies, agencies which receive state and federal funds to pay for these costs, and then attempt to have another governmental agency absorb the costs for them, (is this not called 'double dipping' in today's jargon?), then the Quincy Housing Authority is having its services squeezed.

"Again, our purpose is to provide decent, safe and sanitary housing to low income tenants, and this board feels that this is our purpose, and we must adhere to that purpose in order to achieve our goal, and to best utilize the funds entrusted to us by the tax payers of this city, this state and the federal government.

"This board is not attempting to prevent any services from reaching our tenant population, rather we are trying to remain in a position to be a vehicle for these services reaching our tenants.

"This can only be accomplished by conserving our resources."

That statement angered Mrs. Wahlberg:

"It was clearly a consensus of the board, but when was it arrived at? Not at any public meeting," she said. This led her to believe the QHA members were meeting in private to decide on such policy matters, she said.

Mrs. Wahlberg said she would lodge a complaint with the office of District Attorney William Delahunt, asking that the matter, including possible open meeting law violations, be looked into.

Dr. Bernadette MacPherson Elected DOVE Vice-President

Dr. Bernadette MacPherson of Squantum was elected vice president of DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) at that organization's recent annual meeting.

president, and Patricia Peers of Braintree, parish coordinator at St. Boniface Church, Germantown, who was elected treasurer.

Five other Quincy residents were elected to the Executive Board. They are: Jane B. Ford, director of the Atlantic Neighborhood Center; M. Jane Mudge, administrative supervisor at Quincy City Hospital; Nancy Noble, secretary in the office of Mayor Arthur Tobin; Patricia Quincy Journalist Cited For Communications Effort

A Quincy woman who edits a monthly international publication for the 9,000 employees of Boston's Cabot Corporation has been singled out for praise recently by a New England group of professional business communicators.

Jean Souden, editor of the Cabot Chronicle, received Yankee-IABC Chapter's (formerly New England Business Communicators) "Green Eyseshade" award which is presented monthly to the person whose publication represents the best overall example of effective communication to its chosen audience.

Jean has been with Cabot for three years now - two of them as editor of the Chronicle. She just relinquished the editorship of the Cabot Crier - newsletter for Massachusetts Cabot employees, when the Chronicle went from bi-monthly to monthly editions.

Communications is a field which Jean admits she sort of "fell into". She had been doing secretarial work for a number of law firms in Boston when she decided to go back to school. Working nights and going to college days, she earned her BA in English Literature from the University of Massachusetts in 1977. "At that time I didn't know that this was what I wanted to do. I had a few interviews at places where there were newsletters and thought this might be interesting." Nine months later she was editor of two Cabot employee publications.

"Most of what I have learned is by making mistakes. Before this I never really thought about how an idea got from the idea to the printed page," she said. Because of Cabot's first-line interests (carbon black, energy, specialty metals), Jean admits that it has been difficult to find a middle ground. At the moment, she is concentrating on human interest stories and has just started up a reporter's network. "I enjoy it," she said, "but I have so much more to learn."

The job as communicator doesn't leave Jean with much free time for outside activities. A little cross-country skiing, tennis... "Nowadays," she confessed, "even my reading seems to consist of books on layout and design."

The Yankee Chapter of the International Association of Business Communicators (Yankee IABC) is an association of writers and other communications media specialists working for business and non-profit organizations

CHILDREN AND NOSE BLEEDS

Nosebleeds are common in childhood but rare in infancy. They may occur more often in the winter months when the heating systems cause the air to be dry in the home. They occur frequently at night when the child rubs or picks his nose during sleep. Excess blood loss is rarely a concern.

The most common cause is dryness of the mucous membranes and, often, an associated small ulcer area. Frequently, this condition can be corrected simply by improving humidification in the home. Also helpful is the application of white petroleum jelly to the inside of the nostrils to prevent dryness.

The most common method used to stop a nosebleed is to apply a cold, wet towel over the face and nose and back of the neck with the head tilted back. If bleeding is severe or prolonged, by all means, call a physician.

NQHS Plaque Billing Fuss Lingers On

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

It isn't the weightiest topic that the School Committee and Mayor Tobin have clashed over recently, but it may bruise a few egos.

The committee took a look last week at a drawing of the proposed plaque for the new North Quincy High School and weren't too happy about who is getting what billing.

The first draft was drawn up by the architectural firm of Coletti Brothers, at the direction of Public Works Commissioner James Ricciuti and Mayor Tobin.

The top two names on the plaque were "Mayor Arthur Tobin" and "Public Works Commissioner James Ricciuti," followed by School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon and, then, The School Committee.

"I think the School Committee should be on top," offered member Joan Picard.

Others thought the usual style was to place the public works commissioner at the bottom of the plaque.

The position of the mayor is that he and he alone will determine whose name is on the plaque," said Creedon.

"I thought Huey Long was dead," joked member John Sullivan, referring to the one-time Louisiana "dictator".

"That's a damn lie," said Tobin of Creedon's remarks. "I would hope the School Committee has better things to talk about than that," he added.

Helen Duffy, Assistant Public Works Commissioner, was confused by the fuss.

"It's more or less a regular format used by the architect on other schools," she said. Similar plaques were used at the Lincoln Hancock, Merrymount and Squantum schools, she said.

"Somehow, it ran amok," she said.

Not mentioned, Creedon said, are any of the many past committee members or city councilors who aided in the 10-year process that resulted in a new North Quincy High.

There was also no mention of the present City Council.

"There shouldn't be," jibed Sullivan.

"People have been very sensitive in the past when they've been omitted," Creedon said. "And there are serious considerations about some people's contributions to the city."

For example, Creedon said,

Charles Sweeney, former committee vice chairman and a moving force behind the construction, is omitted.

Sullivan had his own solution: "We'll accept the keys, take over the building, tear down the plaque and put up our own plaque."

"We can just add another plaque," said member Patricia Toland.

"Or two," said Vice Chairman Christopher Kennedy.

Mrs. Picard ("Piccard" on the sketch) had one final request:

"Could you ask them to spell my name right?"

Hopefully, the matter will be ironed out by Oct. 26, when the building will be officially dedicated.

TV Dominated Media Ruled Floor At Convention

Editor's note: Kathy Roberts of Wollaston attended the Republican National Convention in Detroit last week in the dual role of delegate and correspondent for The Quincy Sun. Here, she presents her impressions of the convention.

KATHY ROBERTS

Sometimes I wonder if the media is not running the country. The television networks sure seemed to be running the Republican National Convention in Detroit last week.

The first thing we saw when we walked into Joe Louis Arena were these enormous TV signs — NBC, CBS, ABC. They dominated the convention hall.

There were 3,900 of us media people there. I say "us" because I was covering the convention for The Quincy Sun as well as being a delegate. There weren't as many of us delegates.

There were so many media that they gave out press passes that permitted you on the floor for half hour periods. Then you had to get off and wait your turn again.

When Elizabeth Taylor came in the media really got excited. Her husband is Sen. John Warner from Virginia. There must have been 200 cameras trained on her.

Then Nancy Reagan came in and the cameras went to her. But not for long. They went back to Taylor. Finally the ushers moved Nancy so that she was sitting beside Taylor so the media could get both of them.

I think it was the media that got the rumor started that Gerald Ford was going to be Ronald Reagan's choice for vice president. The media sure kept it going.

Ford's name started to come in about 9 o'clock Wednesday night. There were news people everywhere, interviewing everyone about Ford. At 10:30, the Bush people left the hall. We thought it was Ford for sure.

Then just before Reagan came out, around 11:30, someone ran out on the floor and the news people all ran over to him. Something had fallen through. It was not going to be Reagan and Ford. It was Reagan and Bush.

Reagan was visibly shaken when he got up on the platform to speak. He said there was a rumor going around about the vice president and it wasn't true. Then he announced that his choice was George Bush.

Everything seemed to stop. People were quiet. They didn't know what happened.

I think it was incredible that they let it go as far as it did. A Reagan-Ford ticket made no sense to me. How could someone who had been president be vice president? I don't think it would have worked.

Reagan-Bush is an interesting ticket. Bush appeals to a lot of people in this area. I think they'll get along well. They're grown men. They can overcome their differences.

This was my first convention, so it was pretty exciting for me.

But if I go to the convention in 1984, I think I'd like to get on a committee and go the week before. That's when things happen. Everything seems to be done in committee.

There is rarely anything on the floor to be discussed. That's where it all happens, in committee. You meet a lot of people on the floor but unless there's a real contest you don't get to say anything.

The Massachusetts delegation caucused on Tuesday and John Buckley put together a motion to ask a poll of all the delegates on the party platform. We voted for it 29-13.

But the motion was never presented to the chair. They said it wasn't written right. While we were caucusing on the floor to write a new one, Hawaii was recognized for a motion and in the mixup neither one of them passed.

"The platform was never discussed. It went right on through."

The Massachusetts delegation stayed in the Hilton Hotel in Plymouth, Mich., about 40 miles from the convention hall. The people of Plymouth really went out of their way to be nice to us.

They held a big reception for us in the Mayflower Inn. They assigned a host and hostess to show each delegate around. The hotel even had a cooler full of cranberry juice for us around the clock.

Polly Logan, the delegate from Hingham, found a rock in front of the hotel and officially proclaimed it "Plymouth Rock."

Wednesday morning we were going to caucus in the hotel on the vice president. When I came down stairs at 9 o'clock in the morning it was dark out. People were running around and yelling "Tornado!"

We all ran down in the cellar but the tornado missed us. It took the roof off a hotel out near the airport, however.

Nothing bad happened to us while we were out there. I think that surprised me because of all the things I'd heard about Detroit. The news media has been unfair to Detroit.

The Free Press sent out letters to all the delegates asking us if we were afraid to come to Detroit. My original answer was "yes." It's reversed now. I'd like to take my family back there to see the sights.

All the people were very hospitable. They let you know Detroit was not a bad place.

If I go to the 1984 convention, no matter where it is, I'd like to take my kids, Christopher 13, and Elizabeth 9. They'll be the right age then. It's really something to see.

Bush People Cried, Laughed

Former Quincy resident Ron Kaufman was with George Bush the night he was tapped as Ronald Reagan's running mate.

For Kaufman, former aide to City Councillor James Sheets and now political director of the Republican State Committee, it was the happy end to a political roller coaster ride.

And, a moment to long remember.

"It's hard to explain what a roller coaster ride that was," says Kaufman who, following the convention, in Detroit, helped whip up a 2,500-person brass band reception for Bush in Kennebunkport, Maine on the weekend.

Kaufman, who now lives in Holbrook, was on the convention floor organizing a spontaneous demonstration for Bush when word began to filter down that former President Gerald Ford was Ronald Reagan's choice for a running mate.

"We went through with the demonstration," said Kaufman, "and it was a pretty good one if I do say so myself. But everyone was down."

After it was over and after Bush had made his scheduled speech, Kaufman turned to his wife, Allison, and said, "That's it. Let's go tell George it's been a great campaign. It's all over."

The Kaufmans and Rep. Andrew S. Natsios (R-Holliston), chairman of the Republican State Committee, went to Bush's suite on the 19th floor of the Ponchartrain Hotel.

"We got off the elevator and people were getting on," said Kaufman. "People were crying, they were so upset. Just as we got into the main room of the suite, the phone rang."

BUSH

"One of George's aides answered it. It was Reagan. George went into one of the private rooms to talk to him. Then he came out and told us that Reagan had chosen him for vice president."

Almost immediately Secret Service men showed up and shooed most of the people in the suite outside. About 25 were allowed to remain. Kaufman was one of them.

"We sat around for about half an hour, laughing and crying," he said.

"George kidded us about the demonstration. He hadn't known about it but he was pleased. He said the demonstration buoyed him up by its enthusiasm. He was too thrilled to be down."

"Then the VIPs started to show up and I left. I had my thrill for the year."

Kaufman and his wife arrived home about 10:30 p.m. Friday. At 10:35 p.m., the phone rang. The Bush camp wanted him to go to Kennebunkport, Maine, to organize a reception when the candidate arrived for a brief vacation at his summer home.

"We had about 2,500 people and a brass band ready at noon Saturday," said Kaufman.

After working for Bush in successful primary campaigns in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Michigan, Kaufman doesn't think he'll play much of a role in the national campaign.

"Reagan's staff will be in charge of the campaign," he said. "I have my work here with the State Committee, trying to elect state senators and representatives."

"But I'll go wherever I can serve the party best."

YOU'RE FAMILIAR WITH the theatrical tradition, "The show must go on!" Well, at the Miss Quincy Bay Beauty Pageant the other night, one of the contestants almost didn't. Seems that just before the pageant was to start, the young lady discovered that a relative had forgotten to pack her swimsuit for her. The contestant was virtually in tears but pageant Chairwoman Pat Jones came to the rescue. She sent an aide to nearby Remick's to buy a swimsuit for her. And, the show and the contestant went on.

AND NOW THERE is the Skinny Dip Clip for bashful nudists, those who would like to paddle around in the buff but would be too embarrassed to walk across the beach with nothing on.

Now they can stride purposefully into the water clad in bathing suits, remove the suits, attach them to the Skinny Dip Clip, which in turn is attached to a bright yellow foam rubber buoy, and skinny dip to their hearts content until it's time to don the suit and leave.

They're available in some Boston stores but not yet in Quincy.

$123,000 Still Sought For Community Schools

The School Committee's $4.7 million dispute with the City Council is now down to $123,000.

But it doesn't seem any closer to getting solved.

After cutting almost $4.6 million from its proposed 1980-81 budget to match the money taken away from it by the council, the committee wants $123,000 more.

That money would be used to fund the community education program, including evening and adult programs.

There are two problems, though, according to School Supt. Lawrence Creedon:

Council President Leo Kelly won't accept the request from the committee, saying it should be submitted to the council by Mayor Arthur Tobin.

And Tobin says he won't submit it to the council.

"I suggest it's very poor precedent, very poor form for the mayor to decide when he will submit communications and when he will not," Creedon said.

Committee Vice Chairman Christopher Kennedy said Tobin told him that the majority of the council was opposed to granting the extra money, anyway.

"They seemed to imply in public session that they were willing to sit down and compromise, negotiate or whatever," Kennedy said.

"They have not compromised, they have done nothing," said member Patricia Toland of the council. "The people who use the evening programs, who use the community theater, are people they represent."

Member Joan Picard suggested the committee appear in person before the council to make their request. That idea was shot down by the rest of the committee, however.

"I think they know what we want, and I don't think they're going to give it to us," said Mary Collins. "I think we'd be wasting our time."

"We've spent enough time over there, answering questions about our budget and so forth," said Kennedy. "It's a very demeaning experience."

"Why should we genuflect to those people over there?" said John Sullivan.

The committee voted to send yet another letter to the council, asking a formal vote of their request.

Since the $123,000 was included in the committee's original $39 million budget, the request for extra funds is not, technically, a supplemental request, Creedon said.

On Joseph Grossman's 88th Birthday Grossman Conference Center Dedicated At Beth Israel Hospital

Joseph B. Grossman, on his 88th birthday, recalled the time when a big event in the life of a young Jewish boy was the fund-raising picnic at New Downers Landing, now the Boston Edison plant in North Weymouth.

"That even was in large measure responsible for the beginnings of the Beth Israel Hospital," he said.

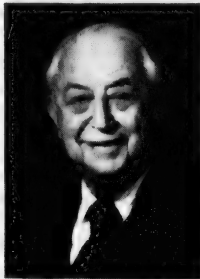

"And I very well recall as a child my mother of blessed memory, Hia Pearl, always had a blue box in the house for the benefit of Beth Israel, not only for weekly donations but for every special occasion."

So it was only natural that, on his 88th birthday, Grossman and his wife, Esther, should give to Beth Israel the means to transform the living room of the old nurses' dormitory into the Grossman Conference Center.

The room was dedicated Tuesday, July 15, in ceremonies at the Hospital on Brookline Ave. in Boston.

"We've seen the Beth Israel Hospital grow over these many years," said Grossman, "and it is with a lot of satisfaction that we members of the Grossman family have been permitted to take part in this development."

"You should understand," said Rabbi David Jacobs of

JOSEPH B. GROSSMAN

Temple Beth El in Quincy, "that this is not the only hospital in which they've been involved because they understand the mitzvah (moral commandment) of compassion."

Rabbi Jacobs noted that the plaque that was placed in the conference room mentioned that the Grossmans come from Quincy.

"People somehow in Quincy have a feeling that on the other side of the Neponset we are somehow not part of the Boston community," he said.

"I think it is very important that we should be reminded — and very often it is J.B. and Esther who remind us — that we are not just some distant colony to this wonderful Jewish community.

"We are part of it and we participate in it and we use it and it is certainly very lovely to see it (the plaque) there because Quincy is very special in the lives of the Grossmans.

"J.B. was the first Jewish boy born in Quincy."

Norman B. Leventhal, chairman of the Beth Israel board of trustees, noted that Grossman served two terms in the State Legislature and six years on the Governor's Council under Govs. Ely, Curley and Hurley.

"Throughout his career," said Leventhal, "he has given of himself to his country, his state and his community and we are all indebted to him.

"The variety of causes that have received support from this family is a testament to the range and thoughtfulness of its generosity."

Leventhal noted a quotation that appears in a book about the Grossman family that was published several years ago:

"To realize dividends of happiness one must invest in kindness."

"We all hope," he said, "that the return in happiness has come close to matching the investment in kindness that has been made by Joe and Esther."

"I found out I wasn't as safe as I supposed."

GROSSMAN BOWS OUT

Joseph B. Grossman of Quincy stunned political circles when he announced his "temporary" retirement from politics after six years as a governor's councillor and 25 years in elective office.

Grossman's retirement left the Republican nomination for governor's council in the Second District up for grabs among David S. McIntosh and Christian A. Burkard, both of Quincy, and Clayton L. Hovey of West Roxbury.

Carter Low Man

Local Businessmen Strongly Favor Reagan

The South Shore business community supports Ronald Reagan for president. Members of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce responding to a poll indicated their overwhelming support for the former California governor.

Reagan received 75.5 per cent of the vote to 15.9 per cent for Independent John Anderson, 5.3 per cent for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and only 3.2 per cent for President Jimmy Carter.

The 1,200 members of the Chamber were polled and 8 per cent responded, which, said the Chamber, is a high response for this type of survey.

Those in the poll also were sampled to see which candidates they agreed with on a wide variety of issues and once again Reagan came out on top with 57.1 per cent.

The respondents agreed with Anderson on 21.4 per cent of the issues, with Kennedy on 14.3 per cent and with Carter on 7.1 per cent.

There was strong support for Reagan's stand on wage and price controls (he's against them), income tax cuts (he's for them) and federal budget cuts (he's for them, too).

No one agreed with President Carter's solution to the inflation problem (continue present policies) and hardly anyone agreed with Kennedy's proposal to freeze wages, prices and profits.

On foreign affairs, the business people agreed with Reagan's Persian Gulf proposals to commit U.S. troops if necessary and with Kennedy's stand of letting Egypt and Israel work out their own problems.

"The businessperson on the South Shore," said Ralph Rivkind, vice president of the Chamber's Public Affairs Group, "perceives Gov. Reagan as the best hope for restoring the quality of life in the country and the renewing of hope for the future."

School Lunch Prices Up 10 Cents

The School Committee voted unanimously last week to increase the prices of students' school lunches by 10 cents.

Prices at elementary schools will jump from 40 to 50 cents, and at secondary schools from 45 to 55.

Teachers will also pay more. Their lunches will increase in price from 90 cents to $1.10.

That's a 25 percent increase for elementary students, 18 percent for secondary students and 22 percent for teachers.

"That's just to cover the cost of food," said School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon in recommending the increases. "If you've been reading the newspapers, you'll see that all the area schools are doing just about the same thing.

Member Patricia Toland said she voted for the hikes with regrets: "This is certainly going to make things tougher for families with three or four children."

Task Force To Study Food For Hungry

A task force is being formed to study a concept, new to the Northeast section of the country, that is designed to bring surplus food to hungry people in Quincy.

Prospective members of the task force have been invited to meet today (Thursday) at 3 p.m. in the Southwest Community Center, 372 Granite St.

"We propose to provide a central clearing house through which the food industry can donate non-saleable but edible food," said Mary L. Brelsford, director of the Southwest Center.

"In turn this food is given to nonprofit agencies which provide on-site and crisis feeding programs."

She said the idea has been tried successfully in 20 cities across the country, including Phoenix, Cincinnati, Detroit and Baltimore.

Summer School At Good Shepherd Lutheran Church

Pre-registration is being taken for a summer vacation church school to be held Monday through Friday, Aug. 18 to 22, by Lutheran Church of the Good Shepherd, 308 West Squantum St., North Quincy.

The school, to be held 9 to 11:30 a.m., is for pre-school (ages four and five) youngsters to sixth graders and theme of the week will be "Travels With Jesus".

The school is for all children regardless of religious denomination.

According to Rev. Darrell Urban, church pastor and program director, the program is on "a Bible-based theme that explores the world of Jesus and his message of God's love for people then and now. It will include learning experiences and quality crafts that we know all the children will enjoy."

For a pre-registration form, call 328-8389. Registration will be held the first day of the program.

'Services From The Psalms' At First Church Of Squantum

The First Church of Squantum held the third of its "Services from the Psalms", a series of nine summer services based on the Old Testament Book of Psalms, Sunday morning.

Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, pastor, preached on the topic "Who Are You?" using a text from Psalm 71. The call to worship was Psalm 121 which was read responsively by the congregation and then sung as a hymn. Reading the scripture were David Gerry, Silas Porter, Steve Williams, Tom Williamson, Bonnie Adams and Leon MacIntyre. Ushers were Susan Mildram, Paul Paulson, Don Frazier, Richard Williams, Steven Williams and Nancy Allen. Rev. Langevin's topic for the children was "Psalms Are Songs".

The remaining schedule of sermon topics for the "Services from the Psalms" is July 27, Receiving God's Forgiveness; August 3, The Secret of Christian Prayer; August 10, The Secret of Christian Bible Study; August 17, A Network of Love; August 24, Are You Growing?; August 31, A Going Concern.

Lemonade is served after each service by the Orange Crush youth group.

Next Sunday there will also be a baptism by immersion at Squaw Rock after the 9:15 a.m. morning service. After the baptism, the young man being baptized and his wife will dedicate their baby to God in a service on the beach. In the Baptist tradition, infants are dedicated instead of being baptized. Only adult believers are baptized.

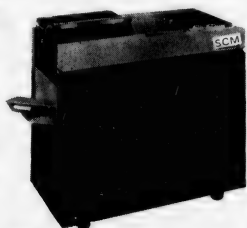

Although The First Church of Squantum is affiliated with the United Church of Christ and is organized congregationally, it serves as a community church in Squantum, ministering to persons from several Protestant traditions including Baptist. The pastor is an American Baptist.

TEARS OF JOY seem about to overcome Tracy Hart as she is crowned by Nancy Myers (right) of Hingham, Miss Quincy Bay of 1979, and Pageant Chairwoman Pat Jones of The Quincy Cooperative Bank.

DENISE RODDIE, 17, of Rockland (right) smiles as she is announced as first runner-up. Tracy Hart, 17, (left) of Quincy gasps as she realizes she's the winner.

Tracy Hart New Queen

Miss Quincy Bay Credits Mother's Confidence

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

If Miss Quincy Bay winner Tracy Hart seemed less nervous than the average contestant, it might have been because she had plenty of company.

"Three of my best friends - Cindy Smith, Laura Calley and Christine Fitzgerald - were contestants, too," notes the 17-year-old new queen from Quincy.

Miss Smith, in fact, was third runner-up in the annual pageant, sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and the Quincy Bay Race Week Association.

Besides her three friends, Miss Hart, a resident of 14 Crescent Circle, had about 30 friends, neighbors and relatives cheering her on.

But she gave one of the 30 - her mother, Pauline Hart - most of the credit for her victory.

"My mother was a big part of it. She did a lot for me," said Miss Hart. "She gave me the confidence and courage to pursue the things I want to do."

One of the things she wants to do is enter other beauty pageants. She's already looking forward to entering next April's Miss South Shore pageant.

Other tentative plans call for her to study communications at Dean Junior College, after she graduates from Quincy High School next spring. She may choose to study interior decorating instead, though.

She's spending the summer as a sales clerk at Sears Roebuck in Quincy Center.

As part of the pageant, Miss Hart was asked to answer the question, "If there was one problem that you could solve, what would it be?"

Her answer won one of the biggest ovations of the evening:

"To have the U.S. hostages free from Iran, so they could be reunited with their loved ones and families and start a happy life over again."

As Miss Quincy Bay, she will reign over Quincy Bay Race Week, Aug. 13-18, and receive the lion's share of more than $2,000 in prizes donated by local businesses and organizations.

The four runners-up were, in order, Denise Roddie, 17, of Rockland; Ursula Mathias, 21, of Dorchester; Cindy Smith, 17, of Quincy and Linda Murphy, 16, of Rockland.

Other contestants, in alphabetical order, were:

Debbie Alley, 21, Raynham; Jacquie Babcock, 20, Quincy; Erica Brotkin, 16, Holbrook; Laura Calley, 16, Quincy; Carla Connolly, 18, Quincy; Lisa DelVecchio, 16, Quincy; Ruth Elwood, 17, North Weymouth; Christine Fitzpatrick, 17, Quincy; Melanie Gore, 18, Weymouth.

Debra Hennessey, 16, Quincy; Joan Lally, 18, Dorchester; Leah Lambert, 16, Quincy; Edith Langellier, 19, Milton; Whitney Lee, 16, Quincy; Carol Matlack, 20, Braintree; Margaret Moore, 18, Hull.

Lori Murphy, 17, Rockland; Beverly Olivere, 18, Braintree; Anne Reilly, 18, Weymouth; Janet Reardon, 16, Quincy; Lorraine Reardon, 23, Quincy; Donna Sampson, 27, Marshfield; Patricia Saxonis, 16, Milton; Andrea Schulze, 16, Weymouth.

Judges for the pageant were Quincy-South Shore Chamber of Commerce Executive Vice President Ron Zooleck, Quincy Junior College President Edward Pierce, Miss Quincy Bay of 1978 Kathy Mann, Quincy Center Business and Professional Association President Jason Feldman and David Maloney, president of the Quincy Bay Race Week Association. Master of ceremonies was Tom Kennedy of WHDH radio.

Music was by Baron Hugo's orchestra.

The most prevalent single cause of loss of teeth after age 35, is periodontal disease. The tissues within the mouth usually affected are the gums, the tissue that holds the teeth to the jaw bone and the bone itself. Dental research has estimated that at least one-tenth of the adults in this country need treatment for gum disorders. Curiously, over 30 per cent more men than women lose their teeth because of periodontal diseases. First symptoms are often bleeding gums and or some gum erosion. Initial treatment often consists of deep scaling and curettage which often is sufficient to halt the advance of periodontal disease and allow restoration. To determine if gum disease is a threat to your teeth visit your dentist regularly. At the office of DANIEL P. SWEENEY, D.D.S., we know that you can't see gum disease at work. It's important to keep regular visits with your dentist and to follow good home care methods aimed at fighting the build-up of plaque-the #1 cause of tooth decay and gum disease. Regular cleanings and x-rays will allow your dentist to see what is happening below the gum's surface. The healthiest teeth need the support of good healthy gums. If they are to survive themselves. Visit us at 539 Adams St., East Milton Square or call 698-3636. DENTAL TIP: Your dentist will provide referral to an expert periodontist when such treatment is indicated.

Planning Board Discusses Marina Condos

The Planning Board was scheduled to discuss proposed condominiums at the Boston Harbor Marina at its meeting yesterday (Wednesday) afternoon.

The meeting was scheduled for 4:30 p.m. in the second floor conference room in the City Hall Annex.

The 142 condominiums were proposed in May by Boston Harbor Marina Industries, Inc. The marina is a planned unit development area (PUD), which means any development requires City Council and Planning Board approval.

Quincy Quiz

There are two winners of Quincy Sun T-shirts this week in the Quincy Quiz --- but no winners of bumper stickers.

The question that appeared to trip up most people was No. 1, the four state highways in Quincy. The answer is below.

Two of those who hit the answer right on the head were Betty Sawyer, 107 Waterston Ave., and Edgar W. Spargo, 17 Sherman St., both of Wollaston.

Spargo even added the information, which wasn't necessary, that Capt. William McIntyre (Question 2) grew up on Albertina St., South Quincy, and Pagano Towers (Question 3) is on the site of the old Washington School.

Each week two Quincy Sun T-shirts and two Quincy Sun bumper stickers are offered as prizes in the Quincy Quiz.

The first two readers (one a mail subscriber) to submit to The Sun office the correct answers to the week's five questions receive the T-shirt. The next two receive the bumper stickers.

One person in each home is eligible to compete in any one week.

This week's Quincy Quiz questions:

1. One of the first men buried in the Hancock Cemetery was Henry Adams. Who was he?
2. What historic building is located at 1357 Hancock St.?
3. In what section of Quincy is Perry Beach?
4. What is the name of the director of the Quincy Housing Authority?
5. Massachusetts Fields was the section of Quincy where the Massachusetts Indians used to gather. What is that section called today?

Answers to last week's Quincy Quiz:

1. The four state highways in Quincy, as recognized by the City Engineering Department, are the Southeast Expressway (Route 3), Quincy Ave. (Route 53), Washington St. (Route 3A) and Willard St. (Route 37). A small section of Route 128 on Quincy land is not included since there is no access from Quincy streets.
2. Capt. William F. McIntyre, for whom McIntyre Mall is named, was the head of the Quincy Police Detective Bureau and father of former Mayor James R. McIntyre.
3. Pagano Towers is in the Quincy Point section of Quincy.
4. Charles L. Alongi is Quincy's director of Recreation.
5. Hon. Thomas S. Burgin Parkway is the new name of Upland Rd.

RECREATION ROUNDUP

Playgrounds-District 4

Beechwood Knoll - Yarn dolls and God's eyes were the week's arts and crafts projects. Enjoying and making beautiful ones were Kara Sullivan, Dawn Sullivan, Maureen Glavin, Deborah Forester, Claire Murphy, Caroline and Alison Morash, and Lisa Anderson. The Senior Girls Basketball team won its first game by a 38 to 20 score over Fenno St. Team members include Linda and Laura Micele, Nancy Peduzzi, Brooke Smith and Kathy and Heather McGregor.

Fenno Street - The Midget boys baseball team looks strong. Adam McGregor and Mark Dymittio are battling it out for the starting pitcher spot. Dave Sachetti seems to have the catching duties sewed up. Kevin Caldwell, Mark (Tiny) O'Riley, Kevin Duffy, and Paul Murphy look like a solid crew for the infield. Jack Green, Brian Danna and Shaun Lynch will be in the outfield.

The Junior girls softball team looks like it is going places with MaryAnn Kelleher pitching and Shila Sullivan catching. Jean Welby, Amanda Reduzzi and Julie McGregor in the infield. Backing up the pitching are Julie Masters, the Gralton sisters, Tricia Koski and Kathy Duffy.

Heron Road - Forty youngsters showed up on the first day, and out of these people we found quite a bit of talent.

The first event was making shell people. David Cefail won first prize. Lynda Cefail, Jody O'Donnell, Deanna Roche, Andrea Roche, Jane Austin, Beth Bellew, and Deanna Nigro were creative, too.

Jokari is the most popular game. Deanna Nigro and Paul Hutchinson seem to be tops, but Deanna Roche and Eddie Accavatti are challenging them.

Arts and Crafts is also a big hit. Deanna Nigro, Amu Hutchinson, Suzanne Shea, Marianne Dennis, Shannon and Kerry Evans, Karen and Nancy Flaherty and Jane Austin made attractive placemats.

Mass. Fields - So far there have been two games - one basketball and one baseball - both of which were won by the Mighty Massies.

The baseball game played against Beechwood ended with a score of 9-0, with Pat O'Sullivan pitching a no-hitter and Billy Heffernan, Robert McDonald and Bob Buckley ripping Beechie pitching. Jimmy Cahill and George Kilroy were outstanding on defense.

The basketball game was played against Heron Rd. at Fenno St. Mass Fields won in overtime by the score of 43-39. High scores for Mass Fields came from Tony Faloo who had 16 points, Brian Reale 12 points, and Dan Linnehan with 10 points. Danny Marsters and Steve Cahill handled the ball well under pressure, and came up with the big plays when they were needed. The defense was sparked by Mike O'Hare and Larry Morton who came off the bench and did a good job.

Perkins - The first day on the park was a big success with over 100 youngsters signing up. Dr. Pepper came to the playground giving out tonic to all those who participated in helping to clean up the park. In a matter of minutes the park was spotless. The names of the hardest workers were put in a hat and the winners were Kevin Haddigan, Tim Roche, Eddie Calley and Christine Keddy.

Coach McConville is expecting good teams in all divisions. The Midgets won their first game 2-1 against Beechwood Knoll. The offensive power of Eric Seamans (3 for 3), Matt Collins, and Mark Molloy was too much. Fine defensive plays by Chris Fay and Tom Roberts helped the winning cause. Bob Roche was the star as he went the distance striking out 7 and allowing only 4 hits.

Paula and Maureen Tolon are working hard for their first junior girls softball game, while Robin and Chrissy Ross enjoyed sailing

District 5

Skydiving, Marathon, Bonfire Constitution Celebration Highlights

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

If you're the adventurous type, you could observe Quincy's second Constitution Celebration by skydiving into Quincy Center, running 26 miles and lighting a huge bonfire.

Most people will just want to watch, though.

The second annual celebration honoring the drafting of the state constitution in Quincy to be held Sept. 5-7, is shaping up as a busy and varied weekend. In addition to those events already announced, projects "on the drawing board," and not yet definite include:

- An ecumenical Mass, involving representatives of all city churches, at Veterans Memorial Stadium.
- A "mini-sidewalk bazaar" sponsored by downtown merchants and similar events which may be held in North Quincy and Wollaston.
- A massive pancake breakfast, or spaghetti dinner, or both, which could be held in Quincy Center.

"I think we're putting a pretty good schedule together," said James McIntyre, chairman of the celebration planning committee. Among the projects definitely scheduled for the weekend are:

- Concerts by the 215th Army Band (at noon Saturday, at City Hall); the Quincy Symphony Orchestra (7:30 p.m., Saturday at City Hall) and the U.S. Navy's Long Island Sound Rock Band (6:30 p.m. Sunday at Pageant Field.) The Sunday night concert will be followed by a bonfire at Black's Creek.

- The first "City of Presidents Marathon," beginning at 10 a.m. Sunday at City Hall.

- Open house at the Dorothy Quincy Homestead, from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday, and at the Quincy Historical Society, from 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday.

- An ecumenical service and pageant at United First Parish Church, at 11 a.m. Sunday.

- A demonstration of skydiving by Free-Fall Productions of Braintree.

Monday night's planning committee meeting included a presentation by Jerry Sprague of Freefall Productions, who told the group, "there's no guarantee we'll ever make this jump."

Poor weather or air traffic tie-ups could cancel the proposed jump at the last minute, Sprague said.

Ten skydivers will take the plunge if Logan Airport approves the use of a large enough plane. That would cost the city about $800, Sprague said. If the jump has to be cut to five jumpers, the price would be less.

They will land at Faxon Field, adjacent to Quincy Vo-Tech at Coddington St. and the Southern Artery, between noon and 12:30 p.m. on Saturday.

27-0-0 Record

Quincy Bantam Champs Wind Up Perfect Season

Quincy Youth Hockey's Bantam B team, undefeated South Shore Conference champion with a 27-0-0 record, recently held its breakup dinner at Walsh's.

The team, coached by Bill Lewis with Bob Watts assistant coach and Fred DiChristofaro trainer, scored 248 goals in the conference, while goalies John Palmer and Jim Cleary allowed only 38. The team was seeded number one in Division 2 in the state tournament.

Quincy was the only B team in the country to be chosen to play in the Bantam competition at Lake Placid. In the second round Quincy faced Braintree's A team, the best A team in the South Shore Conference.

Braintree was heavily favored but found itself in sudden death overtime before finally winning, 4-3. This game was looked upon as the turning point in the season as Quincy didn't lose another game.

The Bantam B's went on to win the final tournament of the season, defeating Nassau, Long Island, 5-2, in the finals.

Quincy's final overall record was an amazing 39-8-0 with 370 goals scored and 94 goals against.

Center Sean Aruda led the team in scoring with 47 goals, including five hat tricks, and 36 assists. Chris Hurley had 42 goals, including four hat tricks and 40 assists and Tom Murphy scored 36 goals, including three hat tricks, and had 26 assists.

Forwards Larry Costello had 11 goals and 21 assists, Tim Barry 26 goals and 31 assists, Dan Kelly 35 goals and 36 assists (two hat tricks), Mike Nourse 35 goals and 36 assists (two hat tricks), Bob McCabe 15 goals and 24 assists, Paul Marshall 32 goals and 28 assists (two hat tricks) and Brian Chase nine goals and 12 assists.

Defensemen Bill O'Brien had three goals and 11 assists, Peter Quinn three goals and 13 assists, Jim Kelly 10 goals and 21 assists, Steve White 10 goals and 31 assists, Dennis Cronin 13 goals and 16 assists and Bill Campbell five goals and 15 assists.

Goalies Palmer and Cleary had 10 shutouts and had a combined goals against average of 2.00. Palmer also had two assists.

Police Bow As Rally Falls Short

The Quincy Police softball team lost to Weston Sunday, 15-12, despite a rally which saw the team almost overcome a 13-3 deficit.

The loss was costly as Quincy would have moved into second place in the Eastern Mass. League with a victory.

Weston led, 13-3, after three innings but Quincy's bats came to life in the fourth. Tom Malvesti, a former Morrisette Legion all-star, hit a two-run homer. In the fifth Jim Bugle hit a three-run homer that brought Quincy to within two runs.

Chic Caporale has taken over the managerial reins from Gerald Queney, who has stepped down due to prior commitments.

Quincy's Joe Mannix will represent Quincy in the all-star game Saturday in Wellesley. He is considered one of the finest defensive players in the league.

Quincy will be home to Newton Sunday with a $1 admission charge benefitting Jim McGettrick's juvenile rehabilitation program.

Win 5, Lose 2

Morrisette In Up, Down Elevator

The Morrisette Legion baseball team, with five wins in a row, had finally overtaken Weymouth and moved into first place in Division 2 of Zone 6 competition.

However, the team then dropped two straight one-run decisions to Milton and Weymouth, after apparently having the games wrapped up, and dropped 1½ games behind Weymouth.

Morrisette took a 10-6 league record into Tuesday's game with Canton. The team played Norwell last night (Wednesday) and Friday will play at Weymouth at 6 o'clock.

Wollaston will host Holbrook Friday night at 8 at Adams Field.

Morrisette took a 3-0 lead into the final inning Sunday night against Weymouth but Weymouth tied it in the seventh and won it, 4-3, in the eighth inning.

Morrisette was one strike away from victory but Weymouth's Jim Stenson belted Gary DiNardo's two-out, two-strike pitch into deep right-center for an RBI triple and Scott Cardwell greeted reliever Bill Deitsch with a single up the middle to tie it, 3-3.

Then, in the eighth, Mike Conville singled home Dan Ronaghan with the winning run.

Stenson was the big man for Weymouth as he relieved starter Brian Smith (sore back) in the fourth and he pitched three-hit ball the rest of the way.

DiNardo had a five-hit shutout going into the seventh and hadn't allowed a runner past first base since the second inning.

"He deserved to win," Morrisette Coach Ray Caneano said. "He pitched a helluva game - the best he's pitched all year. I only made the change when the catcher (Bob Biagini) hollered over that he had nothing left."

Morrisette scored two runs in the third when DiNardo reached on an error, Mike Scurti hit an opposite field triple to left and Andy Carrera singled to right.

In the sixth Morrisette added its final run when Mark Millane walked with two outs, stole second and scored when Kevin Howlett's fly dropped between the outfielders.

Morrisette didn't go down without a fight. With two outs in the bottom of the eighth, Howlett and DiNardo singled but Stenson retired the next batter to end it.

It was just as disappointing for Morrisette last Friday night when it blew a 7-2 lead and lost in the final inning to Milton, 8-7.

Larry Hill was the big gun for Milton as he had a double and two triples and keyed the winning two-run rally in the seventh with a long triple to drive in Mike Hannon with the tying run and Hill scored the clincher on pinch hitter Craig DiBona's grounder.

"We never should have lost this one," Cattaneo admitted. "We're hitting the ball, but it's pitching and sometimes defense that's hurting us."

Morrisette staked starter Paul Earle to a 4-0 first inning lead on singles by Carrera, Biagini and Howlett, a walk, an error and a ground rule double by the eventual losing pitcher, Millane.

Morrisette scored three in the second when Carrera led off with an infield hit, Deitsch doubled, Biagini drove in two with a triple and Bill O'Connell laid down a perfect squeeze bunt.

However, Morrisette was blanked the rest of the way by Hannon and Matt Regan and Milton steadily chipped away at Morrisette's lead and finally pulled out the win.

Earlier Morrisette had walloped Hingham, 10-5, for its fifth win in a row.

Morrisette rolled to a 10-0 lead after four innings with Howlett pacing the attack with a two-run homer over the fence in left field at Adams Field and earlier had a two-run triple.

Wollaston topped Hingham, 11-6, to improve its record to 5-10.

Paul McConville was the winning pitcher, striking out six, and also drove in two runs with a single. Jim Hensley had three hits and three RBI and Steve Belcastro doubled home two runs.

Quincy defeated Randolph, 9-5, with Art Roberts driving in two runs with two triples and Steve Healey pitching fine relief ball.

John Costigan, Jamie Walsh and Pat Ennis all drove in runs.

Mariners Sweep Doubleheader

The Quincy Bay Mariners swept a doubleheader from Abington Sunday at Adams Field, making their South Coastal League record 12-8.

The Mariners, fighting for a playoff spot, will host Hingham Saturday night at 8 at Adams Field and Sunday will be home to Bourne at 1 o'clock at Adams.

Vin Todd pitched a four-hitter to lead Quincy to a 5-1 win in Sunday's opening game. Paul Vespaziani drove in a run with a triple and Fran Donovan, who had three hits, drove in runs in the third and sixth innings.

The Mariners easily won the second game, 9-1, as John Massolio went all the way for his second victory.

Vespaziani keyed a four-run first inning with a two-run triple and Mike McCormack had an RBI single in the first.

Player-Manager Bob Benn, who had five hits on the day, cleared the bases with a triple in the fifth.

Last Saturday the Mariners were walloped, 14-7, at Bourne.

Last Thursday Quincy and Plymouth played to a 6-6 tie in a game called by darkness. Ron Donovan pitched well for the Mariners, but poor defense allowed Plymouth to score several unearned runs.

• Houghs Neck's Softball

Manet Holds Slim Lead

Manet Shell leads the Houghs Neck Men's Softball League with a 9-2 record, one game ahead of the Quincy Yacht Club.

Last week the Yacht Club defeated Finlay's Variety, 10-3, with Bob Brill the winning pitcher. The winners clinched the win with six runs in the fourth inning.

Jim McNally sparked at short-stop and Jeff Craig and Richie Gibbons also stood out defensively as all the players turned in fine performances.

Manet Shell scored in the eighth inning to edge Louis Cafe,

11-10, with John Bogan getting the win. Paul Picarski drove in John Provost with the winning run after Provost tripled with two outs. Provost and Picarski had four hits each and Gary Keefe went three for three. Joey Brill, Jim Healy and Bob McQuinn had two hits each for Louis.

Houghs Neck Package Store blasted Chenette Plumbing, 14-1, with Pete Little pitching a four-hitter. HN scored 11 runs in the first three innings for an 11-0 lead.

John Ryan had three hits, including two triples, and Jeff Little hit a home run for the winners. For Chenette John Foster drove in the only run with a double. Losing pitcher Bob Blowers fielded his position well and made a great play to start a double play.

Data Rallies For 9-8 Win

By PETE ZOIA

Data Services, Quincy's Senior Babe Ruth League team, improved its record to 10-6 Sunday as it overcame an 8-0 deficit to edge Braintree, 9-8, in the stifling heat.

Quincy trailed, 8-0, after four innings as Jack McInnis' mates let him down on defense. Three errors in the first inning enabled Braintree to score three runs without a hit. Braintree added a run in the second, two in the third and two in the fourth.

Quincy, managed by George Derrane and coached by Joe Wilkinson, came to life in the fourth, registering three runs on five hits. Kevin McKinnon started it off with a double, followed by singles by Mike Crowley, Eric Swanson, Brian Tobin and Bruce Tobin.

Bruce Tobin took over the pitching duties in the fifth and blanked Braintree the rest of the game, allowing only two hits.

Data scored four runs in the fifth as Phil Caggiano and McInnis tripled, Crowley had a single and McKinnon walked.

Quincy tied it in the sixth on a walk to Caggiano, two infield outs and a wild pitch.

The winning run scored in the seventh when Crowley collected his third hit and he later scored when Brian Tobin's infield tap was fumbled.

Data Services will host Hyde Park tonight (Thursday) at 8:15 at Adams Field.

SPORTS FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

Brought To You By ROBERT COLMAN

Here's an amazing fact about the manager of the Baltimore Orioles, Earl Weaver. . . In his last 22 years as a manager, Weaver's teams have NEVER finished under .500 . . . Starting with Dublin in the Georgia-Florida League in 1958, every one of Weaver's teams so far, in the majors and minors, has won more games than they lost for a complete season. . . Will that streak continue this year?

One of the most unbelievable pitching performances of all-time was one by Stanley Coveleski, who pitched in the majors from 1912 to 1928. . . In one game, Coveleski, incredibly, went 7 innings WITHOUT EVER THROWING A CALLED BALL. . . EVERY pitch he threw was either swung at or was a called strike. . . No other big league pitcher ever had that much pin-point control for that long a time.

What's the longest game, by innings, ever played in pro baseball? . . . On June 14, 1966, in the Florida State League, St. Petersburg (managed by Sparky Anderson) and Miami set the all-time record with a game that went 29 innings. . . They played the equivalent of 3 full games plus 2 more innings. . . THE GAME TOOK 7 HOURS TO PLAY. . . The major league record was set in 1920 when the Dodgers and Braves played a game that went 26innings.

I bet you didn't know. . . That Colman's has everything you need for summer fun, summer vacationing, summer activities, summer sports! Shop Colman's for all your summer fashions for men, women and children. And . . . you will find Colman's prices the best anywhere on anything.

The Quincy Co-operative Bank Josiah Quincy, Jr. Awards have been made once again to an outstanding group of students. The Quincy Co-operative Bank takes great pride in the very wonderful group of winners honored for scholarship and good citizenship.

When we announced the original winners, we said:

"The Quincy Co-operative Bank believes that the future of the communities we serve is in the hands of our young people. The Quincy Co-operative Bank believes, too, that our schools provide the surest guarantee of future excellence of community leadership through the learning processes.

"When the statute was changed in 1976 to allow co-operative banks to provide scholarship funds, we moved quickly to set up $100 scholarships in the high schools of the communities where we have our main office and our branches. In addition, we provided a $1,500 scholarship for the Quincy Junior College to help a graduate go on to a four year college after completion of two years of studies here. We were happy to learn that this is the largest scholarship offered by the Quincy Junior College.

"We left the choice of all scholarship winners to each school administration. Naturally, we called each scholarship "The Quincy Co-operative Bank Josiah Quincy, Jr. Award." The awards were made for scholastic excellence and outstanding citizenship through school and community activity.

"Josiah Quincy, Jr. was the father of co-operative banking, and we named our Bank for him. Because our scholarship program is totally consistent with his ideals, we know that Josiah would have liked that."

This sums up the attitude of our Bank about our scholarship awards. But we do have to add one more comment: the $1,500 scholarship selection for the Quincy Junior College ended in a tie this year. The award was split between two young women, and from their comments to us, both are thrilled that they could share a very great honor.

We honored our scholarship winners recently at a luncheon. Each winner was accompanied by his or her Headmaster. Take a look at these fine young people whose pictures are displayed here; we are sure you will agree with us that the South Shore's future is in good hands.

New East - West Connector Plan:

Businessmen Petition For Hearing

● Raze 5 Downtown Buildings ● Put Road Through Sears

By TOM HENSHAW

Five downtown Quincy buildings housing 12 current or former business establishments would be demolished to make way for the proposed Revere Rd. Connector.

A public hearing on the route proposal by the State Department of Public Works has been all but assured after 45 downtown businessmen and others petitioned for it.

The connector would run from Granite St. through the Turnstyle Parking Area, over the MBTA tracks, across the Ross Parking way, under Hancock St. to join McGrath Highway at Chestnut St. Engineering maps from the State DPW that arrived Tuesday at the Quincy Planning Department show that these buildings and businesses would be demolished for the roadway:

- 148 Parkway, owned by 615 Hancock Realty Trust (Paul J. and James P. Cifirino and Luis C. Roeber) and housing the Bicycle Revival and Household Finance.

- About two-thirds of the Sears Roebuck Building, owned by the Faxon Trust, which is to be vacated in the fall when Sears moves its operation to South Shore Plaza.

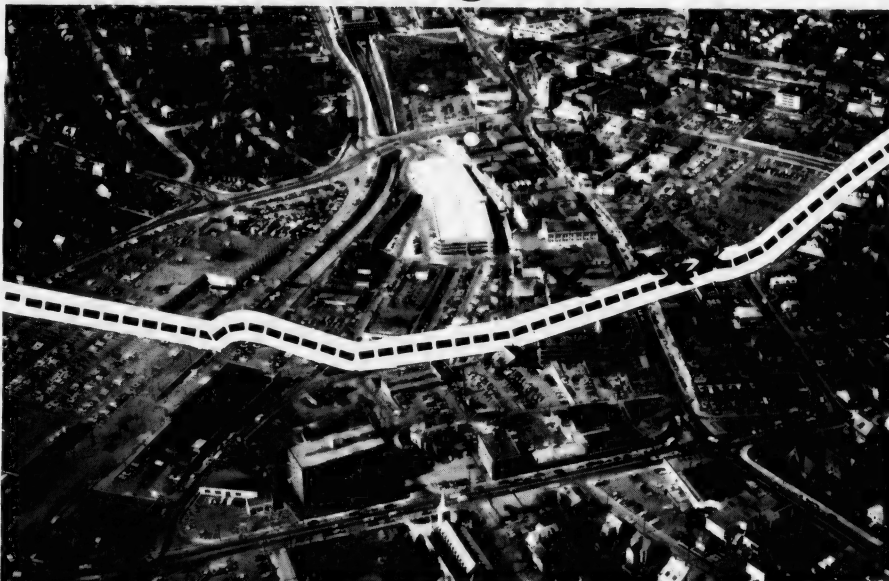

- 1570-76 Hancock St., owned by Gaetano Consoli and housing Napoli Pizza, Sportlight Cafe, Hair for All Seasons and South Shore Television on Revere Rd.

- 1562-68 Hancock St., owned by Ella M. E. Sherman, and housing Community Opticians, Import Village, Beacon Fabrics and a vacant store formerly occupied by Wooden Ships.

- 14 Revere Rd., owned by Stanley Bids, and housing Premier Furniture.

Two years ago, businessmen in the area rose up against a previous connector proposal and forced the city to sign an agreement that it would not promote the connector unless they were satisfied with it.

That proposal had the connector going through the Kincaide building to avoid Sears, then a key downtown store. When Sears announced its imminent

ROUTE OF PROPOSED Revere Rd. East-West connector through Sears Store to Granite St. is indicated by dotted line. Five Xs designate five downtown stores that would be razed.

departure, the route was changed. But at least two downtown businessmen announced that they still were not entirely happy with the plan.

"We're still against it," said Robert Colman of Colman's Sporting Goods. "We're still in the dark as to what it is. There has been nothing published or shown that's concrete. It's just as vague today as it was two years ago."

Colman and Jack London of Quincy Furniture Co. were two of the 45 merchants to petition for the public hearing.

"We are entitled to know exactly what the plans are," said London. "We don't know how many stores are affected. We want an opportunity to defend ourselves from going out of business or being relocated who knows where?"

The Quincy Center Business and Professional Association Board of Directors was scheduled to discuss the connector at a Wednesday morning meeting.

In addition to the roadway under Hancock St., about 190 feet of Hancock St. will have to be reconstructed on either side of the underpass.

"We hope that we can provide for continuity of business for the merchants," said Planning Director James Lydon.

Mayor Tobin called the connector one of the keys to the future development of downtown Quincy.

"The possibility of a Howard Johnson Hotel in the Ross Parkway and development of a shopping mall in the John Hancock Parking Area depends upon construction of the connector," he said.

The connector is designed to hook in with the Burgin Parkway (Upland Rd.) Extension, which in turn is designed to bring traffic from the South Shore into downtown Quincy.

Tobin said federal funding for the extension might be jeopardized if there were no connector since federal agencies frown on roadways that dump traffic in a parking area with no other outlet.

"The problem with the connector before," said Tobin, "was that it went through Kincaide's and several other business establishments to circumvent Sears."

"Since Sears has announced that it is leaving, we have been able to redesign the connector in a direct line to McGrath Highway so that less people will be affected."

He said a certain amount of suspicion on the part of downtown merchants is normal because "of their concern about the unknown. There has never been a new endeavor without some concern for more information."

Revenue Bonds Asked For Chinese Restaurant

The City Council was to be asked last night (Wednesday) to approve the issuance of $500,000 in industrial revenue bonds to finance construction of a Chinese restaurant in North Quincy.

The approval would not pledge the city's credit to the bond but would enable the Chu Chu Trust, developers of the site, to issue low interest bonds.

The restaurant is to be built at an estimated cost of $1,100,000 at the intersection of Hancock St. and Newport Ave. Extension in Atlantic.

Board members will consider some 18 items that have come to their attention during the summer recess.

Special License Board Meeting Aug. 5

City Clerk John M. Gillis has called a special meeting of the Quincy License Board for Tuesday, Aug. 5, at 10 a.m. at City Hall.

WANTED: $15,000 Business District Development Coordinator

The Planning Department is seeking a "business district community development coordinator" to act as liaison with the business community, particularly in explaining federal loan programs.

The post, which was advertised for the first time last Sunday, pays $15,000 a year and is funded through the federal Community Development Block Grant.

Planning Director James Lydon said he sees the position as sort of "an ombudsman to communicate with the businessmen of downtown Quincy, Wollaston and Norfolk Downs on a day-to-day basis."

"Government loan programs are some of the most complicated things we deal with today," he said. "We explain them at meetings but there is no one who can go out and deal with them individually."

Lydon said he is seeking someone who has experience with the federal loan programs and who has worked with business men before.

The job is expected to be filled in about a month, he said.

City To Relocate MBTA Bus Exit

Work will begin shortly to relocate the bus exit road at the Quincy MBTA station to improve traffic flow and provide space for the erection of the Constitution Memorial Monument near City Hall.

"The project will be completed with minimal additional expense to the city," said Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti, "because of the reuse of many of the materials already in place and the use of existing city forces."

Ricciuti said that buses leaving the station area now have trouble negotiating the right hand turn south onto Hancock St. By relocating the exit toward McIntyre Mall, he said, the turn will be made easier.

While work on the exit is in progress, MBTA buses will leave the station temporarily through the entrance near the Faxon building.

The relocation will enable the city to add to the City Hall Annex lawn and make room for the sculpture by Edward Monti memorializing the drafting of the Massachusetts Constitution in Quincy in 1779.

Fund Established To Aid Burned Out King Family

Contributions can be made at any Quincy Savings Bank office to the Kathleen King Fire Fund set up by concerned neighbors of the mother of two who was burned out of her North Quincy home Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. King and her children, Paul, age three, and Monica, age one and a half, were not at home when the blaze broke out at their one story house at 52

Edwin St.

Neighbors reported the blaze to fire officials who believe the fire started in the kitchen.

Almost the entire wood frame structure was gutted by the blaze which burned out towards the back porch and in towards the dining room.

Mrs. King, in charge of Carney Hospital's blood bank, and her children are staying with family until other accommodations can be found.

YOUNG OFFENDERS who have been sentenced in Quincy District Court to perform community service work clean the litter from Edgewater Drive Beach in Houghs Neck.

'More Meaningful Than Jail'

Young Offenders Sentenced To Clean Up Quincy Sites

By TOM HENSHAW

One of Quincy's top tourist attractions, the old Granite Railway Incline, is getting a badly needed sprucing up from young people who have been convicted of misdemeanors in Quincy District Court.

For the past four months, they have also been cleaning litter from beaches and playgrounds and aiding senior citizens as a community service function of Judge Albert L. Kramer's "Earn-It" program.

Tuesday, the youthful offenders, having scrubbed up the historic railway, dug holes and planted trees and landscaped the area with the aid of $1,200 in federal block grant funds.

"It gives the kids something more meaningful to do than just going to jail," says Ray Kelley, the court's job placement administrator who supervises the program.

Kelley and other supervisors work right along with them.

"We talk to them, counsel them," he says. "We even instructed the kids on how the old Granite Railway worked. We try to give them a stronger relationship to the community they have been ripping off."

The young people are mostly juveniles, mostly first offenders who have been convicted of misdemeanors such as violation of the open container law or disorderly conduct.

The judge passes sentence, only instead of jail they get community service time, anywhere from six hours to 80 hours or more. The average is 40 hours.

Those who have regular jobs work out their time on weekends.

Youngsters who have special talents are given special jobs, like reading for the blind or helping deaf or blind students at the Disabled Students Center at UMass-Boston.

This summer, youngsters with no special skills have cleaned up litter from six city beaches, including Avalon, Rhoda, Posey, Edgewater, Sandy and Palmer, in conjunction with the Park Department.

They pick up the rubbish, bag it and the Park Department truck hauls it away.

Some people were so glad to see the anti-litter detail, says Kelley, that neighbors brought out iced tea and other goodies for them on hot days.

"We know it's working when they ask you to come back again," he says.

"We try to place them where it will do the most good for them, too," says Howard Crossman, community service placement counsellor.

"If a kid has a problem related to alcohol we try to put him to work in a detox center. He'll remember the things he sees and he can be counselled while he works."

"If his offense is vandalism we'll send him to fix up or clean up a cemetery or a park."

One youngster, who had four hours left on his sentence and was faced with an eight-hour project on the Granite Railway, volunteered to stay the extra four hours to finish the job.

A total of 86 young offenders were sentenced to community service in June.

3rd Economic Conference In September

The City of Quincy will sponsor a third economic development conference sometime in early September as part of a continuing plan broaden the tax base by luring new building to the city.

Earlier conferences were held in May, 1978, and June, 1979.

The first conference is credited with initiating plans for the Campanelli-Stop and Shop office building which is to be built in the old Della Chiesa Parking Area.

The third conference, said Mayor Tobin, will be held in the morning and potential developers will be shown the large areas of developable land left in the city.

Tobin said he expects big things from the conference since the money market has eased and new Commercial Area Revitalization Districts (CARDs) have been approved in the city.

Recommendation Expected In September

Cable TV In Quincy Still 1½ Years Away

By TOM HENSHAW

Cable television in some 50 per cent of the homes in Quincy is still at least a year and a half away.

George Riley, chairman of the Mayor's Advisory Committee on Cable Television, told a hearing Monday night that his group probably will make its recommendations to Mayor Tobin around Labor Day.

After that, he said, the bidding process, including public hearings, will take more time and then it will be 15 to 18 months for the winning company to construct facilities in the city.

Monday night's meeting of Riley's committee was the first in which average citizens with some expertise on the subject were asked to give their comments and recommendations.

Arthur Chandler, owner of the Wollaston Theater, expressed concern that the showing of first run movies will drive him out of business.

"Already," he said, "I've had pictures pulled out of my theater even after they were scheduled because TV offered more. There's no way I can get first run movies in competition with cable."

"What happens to the Wollaston Theater when I go out of business?"

Paul Ricca, a member of the committee, told Chandler that he was probably getting all the competition he would ever get from the Home Box Office and Starcase movie offerings on pay television.

"We're talking about a lot more than movies when we talk about cable television," he said. "If all cable offered was movies then there would not be any need for it. Movies are here already."

Chandler also was concerned about the possible showing of adult movies on the cable.

"I can be censored now," he said, "but there is no way to censor X-rated movies on cable TV."

Barry Lemieux, representing American Cablesystems Corp., said that all companies offer a parental guidance lock device to block out undesired films.

But, he added, "I'm sure there is a black market around in keys."

Riley said none of the 13 companies who have submitted preliminary bids offer X-rated movies. There are periodic reviews and the possibility of license revocation if they do, he said.

Bart Caggiano of the Ward 2 Civic Association told the committee he was concerned that they "keep the taxpayer in mind whatever you do."

"We must insist that they hire local people," he said. "We would like to see a controlled price formula. We want to see that citizens get a fair shake in rates."

Riley assured him that the committee will recommend that the company that wins the bid hire local people.

"We can't stipulate that in the contract," he said. "All of the companies are talking about hiring 10, 20 or 30 people and all of them are interested in hiring local people."

Riley said that cable television has the capability of taking polls of its viewers but he wasn't sure how advanced the procedure is technically.

Peter Chisholm, representing Comcast Cablevision of Quincy, said the process, which is used by another company in Columbus, Ohio, is too experimental to be used in Quincy.

Riley said that the committee's recommendations probably will ask a basic 52 channels for Quincy cable.

"We'll have a new Yellow Pages just for the TV schedule," he said.

CCC Grants To Help Quincy Clean Litter

Quincy has received two grants from the Corporation for a Cleaner Commonwealth to clean up litter in the city.

One grant of $7,259 is to the South Shore Rehabilitation Center to spruce up Nickerson Beach and Squaw Rock in Squantum, and Kincade and Grasso Parks, South Quincy, the Lincoln-Hancock School yard.

The other grant is a share of $15,792 awarded to the Quincy CETA office to clean up the Germantown housing projects and locations in Weymouth and Scituate.

The grant to South Shore Rehab will pay the salaries of six work crew members and a supervisor and gasoline for a van to take the workers to the sites. All the workers are handicapped.

The project is being coordinated with the Quincy Park and Planning Departments.

CETA workers assigned to the Germantown cleanup will be paid by CETA funds but the CCC grant will pay for supervisors and equipment such as work gloves, rakes, saws, pitchforks, trash bags and wheelbarrows.

Former Probation Officer

Continues Battle To Regain Job

A former Quincy District Court probation officer is continuing his three-year fight to have his firing declared illegal.

John Goslin, 40, of Kingston was fired in March, 1977 after 13 years in the court.

He claims his dismissal hearing was illegally conducted. A Superior Court hearing has been scheduled for early September to rule on the dispute.

Goslin's firing came after QDC presiding justice Albert Kramer named Andrew Keln as chief probation officer in March, 1977.

Then-Superior Court Justice Robert Bonin, who presided at the Oct. 1977 hearing on the firing, ruled that Goslin had failed to supervise probation cases and had kept inadequate records.

Bonin reportedly called the dispute between Goslin and Kramer as one of "old versus new," and said Goslin criticized some of Kramer's new programs.

Goslin also made "aggravated vulgar and ethnic remarks concerning Kramer in the presence of others," Bonin reportedly wrote.

Stay Alive!

By Jack Silverstein

OXYGEN AIDS MEMORY

If decreased oxygen supply to the brain leads to loss of memory and reasoning power in older people, then increased oxygen should bring about an improvement. With this rationale, a team of clinicians at the VA hospital in Buffalo, N.Y., administered oxygen therapy to 13 institutionalized, senile men, all of whom had hardening of the brain arteries.

Therapy lasted for 90 minutes, twice a day, for fifteen days. Oxygen was administered through a face mask in a pressure chamber which enhanced the intake. Twenty five hours after therapy was discontinued, the men took a standard memory test. Scores for the men who received oxygen jumped 25 percent, while there was no change for another group of men who breathed ordinary air. When the 2nd group switched to oxygen, their retention scores also jumped.

How long do the effects of oxygen last? No one knows for certain, but the Buffalo researchers intend to find out.

The NQHS Plaque

Almost a whole week has gone by with scarcely a mention of one of the great municipal issues of our time:

Whose name goes in what order on the plaque at the newly renovated and enlarged North Quincy High School?

The preliminary design of the plaque has Mayor Arthur H. Tobin, Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti, School Supt. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon and members of the School Committee in that order.

From the uproar that erupted over that proposed billing you'd think someone was trying to hang a plague rather than a plaque on the $16 million building.

The discussion grew so heated at one point that School Committeeman John J. Sullivan threatened:

"We'll accept the keys, take over the building, tear down the plaque and put up our own plaque."

So there.

Personally, we don't think it really matters whose name comes first, second, third or last on the plaque, but who are we to debate priorities with those elected by the people to rule on such weighty matters.

We'd hate to see our city officials get so caught up in the great plaque controversy that they are forced to let minor matters --- like the tax rate, school closings, etc. --- pile up.

So, it is in a spirit of cooperation that we offer a suggestion or two to our harried officialdom:

How about tossing all the eligible names for inscription on the plaque into a hat and drawing them one at a time to decide the order in which they are to appear?

Or, if you don't care for lotteries, how about listing the names alphabetically?

Better still, let's put the plaque question on the ballot in the November election and let the people speak.

Who knows, it might even spice up the election for those who can't get excited over Carter, Reagan or Anderson and are planning to stay home.

There certainly wouldn't be a shortage of candidates for places on the plaque.

After all, the issue of North Quincy High School has been with us since 1962 when Arthur D. Little Co. suggested that all was not right educationally in the north end of the city.

The ensuing time span includes five mayors, at least five public works commissioners, two school superintendents, and dozens of school committee members.

Can you imagine the campaigning that would go on for the top spot on the plaque...?

Only problem is that you might need a plaque the size of a side of the new NQHS building to get all the names on.

If all of this sounds a bit silly, it is. And so is the great plaque controversy.

There's got to be other more important matters needing attention. Our city officials should give them equal time.

Quincy Quiz

Only one winner in the Quincy Quiz this week --- and he is a repeater.

A second Quincy Sun T-shirt goes to Edgar W. Spargo, 17 Sherman St., Wollaston, who also answered all five questions correctly last week.

Each week two Quincy Sun T-shirts and two Quincy Sun bumper stickers are offered as prizes in the Quincy Quiz.

The first two readers (one a mail subscriber) to submit to The Sun office the correct answer to the week's five questions receive T-shirts. The next two receive bumper stickers.

One person in each home is eligible to compete in any one week.

This week's Quincy Quiz:

1. Quincy has three Representatives in the Massachusetts General Court. Name them and the districts they represent.
2. What well-known building stands at 8 Adams St.?
3. McGrath Highway is named for Thomas J. McGrath. Who was he?
4. What is the name of the director of Quincy City Hospital?
5. In what section of the city is Pine Hill Cemetery?

Answers to last week's Quincy Quiz:

1. Henry Adams was the founding father of the famed Adams family in America, great great grandfather of President John Adams.
2. The Central Building which served as the town hall of Quincy from 1817 to 1844 and the East Norfolk District Courthouse in 1872, is located at 1357 Hancock St.
3. Perry Beach is in the Houghs Neck section of Quincy.
4. Clement A. O'Brien is the director of the Quincy Housing Authority.
5. The Massachusetts Fields section of Quincy is known as Norfolk Downs today. The new name was chosen in the 1890s in a contest sponsored by a land developer.

A Real Taxing Job

There probably isn't anyone around today who would be happy with the same money he or she was earning 10 years ago.

But City Treasurer - Tax Collector Robert Foy wouldn't mind if the pay scale for his job was rolled back to what it was more than 150 years ago.

He what?

That's right. He wouldn't mind it a bit.

Foy now draws $24,778 a year.

But back in 1821, Quincy Tax Collector John Salvi was paid at a rate of one and one-half cents per dollar collected.

Last year, the city's total tax levy was $62.5 million which would place Foy's pay in the neighborhood of $937,000.

That's a pretty nice neighborhood.

And, just think what $937,000 in 1821 dollars would be like.

FOY

QUINCY-MILTON historian William Flavin was in Richmond, Va. recently and he and his son, Scott, went to the Hollywood Cemetery there to visit the graves of President James Monroe and John Tyler.

While there, they noticed on a tour map the graves of Major General George Pickett and some 1,000 unknown soldiers of the Civil War.

A car with Virginia plates pulled up and the driver, who noticed the Massachusetts plates on the Flavin car, asked: "What's a Yankee doing honoring Pickett?" To which Flavin replied: "I believe respect and honor should be due for any person who fights for what he thinks is right."

The man extended his hand and spent the next two hours touring the cemetery with Flavin and his son. While they were at the grave of Confederate President Jefferson Davis, Scott called out, "There's the grave of Mathew Maury." Flavin and the man from Virginia both exclaimed, "Who?"

Scott explained that Maury was the father of oceanography and had tried to design submarines for the Confederacy. He also, in 1855, laid out routes for trans-Atlantic travel to avoid icebergs. The routes are still used today. He also discovered ridges crossing the Atlantic which support trans-Atlantic cables.

Scott had recently studied about him in school.

The man from Virginia, quite flabbergasted, mused: "Here we are learning Confederate history from a Yankee!"

JOHN CAPAVELLA, aide to Mayor Tobin, has a talented four-piece musical combo. The group was selected to play for Rose Kennedy's 90th birthday at the John F. Kennedy Library. No one asked the group to play "Happy Birthday" but they were requested to do something like 35 songs with the word rose in the title. Among those present were Joan Kennedy, whom Capavella says looked stunning. Thomas (Tip) O'Neill was there, too. He and Senator Edward Kennedy seemed to be doing a lot of serious talking. About next month's Democratic National Convention?

Give Carter Equal Space

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I have been living in Quincy for over four years and have been receiving your paper since arriving here.

Under rules of fair play, I think you should give some space for President Carter in his re-election campaign. Last week you gave a lot of play to Senator Kennedy's campaign.

As you may recall, Carter received over 40 percent of the vote in the primary. In November, our president will be re-elected. Now is the time for your paper to give equal time.

Harold Commends Quincy Auxiliary Police For 'Safety Tips'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The Quincy Auxiliary Police

Department is to be commended for the 12-page "Safety Tips" booklet distributed to Quincy school children to help the children have a safe summer.

This excellent booklet is another example of the fine job our Auxiliary Police are doing in the myriad of service programs in which they are involved. And, like all of their other programs, this project was accomplished on a volunteer basis.

We should all be proud and appreciative of the time and effort our Auxiliary Police donate to the city, and in this instance, on the one-of-a-kind safety program they offer to remind children on the importance of care during their school vacations.

I have entered copies of "Safety Tips" in our State Library so that other communities may see what an inspired and active Auxiliary Police Department can do for the citizens it serves.

Washington, Hyannisport Reaction

'Billygate' Could Force Open Convention

Editor's note: Sen. Paul D. Harold, a statewide alternate delegate to the Democratic National Convention, has written the following article especially for The Quincy Sun. It is based on his impressions during the Senator Kennedy delegate meeting in Hyannisport over the weekend and a visit to Washington, D.C. on Monday.

By Senator PAUL D. HAROLD

"It's a whole new ballgame," Sen. John Durkin (D-NH) told Sen. Edward Kennedy delegates gathered for a strategy session at Hyannisport this past weekend.

The Kennedy campaign for President, which seems to have died two or three times since the Iowa caucuses in February, has again taken on new life.

"Billygate," added to longstanding national economic problems, and President Carter's poor showing in polls, is the last ingredient that could force delegates to dump an incumbent President.

The move to open up the New York convention began as a Kennedy strategy, but in the last few days has taken on a life of its own.

Kennedy delegates cited results of a recent CBS poll that showed 296 Carter delegates would vote for an open convention, thus releasing delegates from voting for that candidate to whom they were pledged in the primaries.

With another 98 Carter delegates leaning on that issue, Kennedy is within a hair's breadth of freeing the delegates and thus enhancing his chances of nomination.

But the question now plaguing Kennedy supporters is whether an open convention would turn to Kennedy or to someone else.

In Washington, a group of congressmen, some worried for their own re-elections and others genuinely interested in the nation's future have put together a Committee for an Open Convention. They raised $200,000 in less than 48 hours.

It is estimated that as many as 150 congressmen may join this committee before the week is out.

Rejecting an incumbent President would indeed be an unusual turn of events, but when put in perspective, would not be any more unusual than what has been happening during the nomination process to date -- the unprecedented effect that Iranian politics has had on U.S. politics.

Some Democratic leaders fear that the public reaction to giving the nomination to someone who hasn't run the course in primaries would hurt the party more than a weak incumbent.

The only precedent they can point to was in 1952, when the convention bypassed Sen. Estes Kefauver, who had run in all the primaries, and gave the nomination to Adlai Stevenson, who hadn't even been a candidate prior to the convening of the convention.

Rep. Morris Udall (D-Ariz.), who will be keynote speaker at the convention and himself a former candidate for President, somewhat deflated the open convention balloon when asked whether he would accept the nomination.

If nominated, he said, he would run "straight to the Mexican border."

Brownell Hits 'Unjust'

Fare Plan On MBTA Red Line

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D-Quincy) has denounced the MBTA's so-called "get away" fare plan on the Red Line as "grossly unjust" to riders who board the trains at Quincy stations.

Under the "get away" plan, inbound passengers boarding the trains in Quincy are required to deposit two 50-cent tokens while the trip back from Boston requires only one.

Brownell said he has received many constituent complaints about the plan.

"Apparently," he said in a letter to MBTA acting Chairman Barry Locke, "many commuters ride in on the T but use other forms of transportation on the way home."

"The result is a grossly unfair one-way charge of $1."

The "get away" plan was instituted June 30 when the MBTA raised fares on the Red Line from 50 cents to 75 cents and the system was chosen as the most practical way of collecting. Brownell proposed another

The inbound commuter, he said, could pick up a 25-cent transfer from the collector after he has deposited his two 50-cent tokens. He would surrender it at his destination and receive 25 cents in cash.

On the return trip, the commuter would deposit one 50-cent token and pay 25 cents in cash to exit in Quincy.

"This system," said Brownell, "would quite simply alleviate the unnecessary burden on the one-way commuter."

No Penny Shortage In Quincy Banks

The spot shortage of pennies that has been plaguing some sections of New England apparently has not extended to Quincy.

"We have ample supplies of pennies," said Ronald McKee, treasurer of the Quincy Cooperative Bank. "Our customers are bringing them in all the time."

Other local banks reported no shortages.

The shortage of one cent pieces -- what are they used for these days, anyway? -- is so bad in some places that the Massachusetts Bankers Association has issued an alert about it.

"Although most of the missing pennies are in piggy banks," said the bankers' alert, "there are others who are hoarding the coins in hopes of melting them down for a quick profit."

Pennies are made up of 95 per cent copper and 5 per cent zinc, the value of which in metal is currently about six-tenths of one cent.

"The prices of these metals would have to increase by 2 1/3 just to meet the value of the metal in the coin and this doesn't take into account the energy required to melt the coins or to separate the zinc and the copper," said the MBA.

"As a result, hoarding cents for profit under these circumstances is an unproductive financial venture."

But if you do want to bring your pennies to the bank, the QCB's McKee advises you to roll them up in paper provided for that purpose. It saves the teller's time.

Crackdown On Quarry Parties

Police Chief William Ferrazzi announced that 10 members of the Auxiliary Police will be assigned to weekend duty in the vicinity of Faulkner's and Cashman's quarries for the rest of the summer.

The area in West Quincy has been the scene of noisy parties, nude swimming and brush fires in recent weeks.

The fire menace was such that Fire Chief Thomas F. Gorman Jr., urged residents to form a "vigilante committee" to help apprehend those who start fires that threaten the 50 homes in the neighborhood.

Harold Winerip, 65, Boston Herald American Copy Desk Editor

Funeral services were held Sunday for Harold Winerip of Wollaston, copy desk chief and writer for the Boston Herald American.

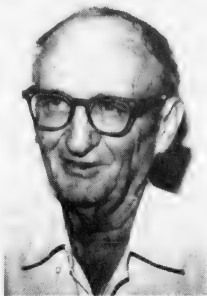

Mr. Winerip, 65, died July 25 at Quincy City Hospital, one week short of his planned retirement from the Herald American.

Born in Roxbury, he was graduated from Revere High School in 1932. Although accepted at Boston University, he instead chose to launch his newspaper career, writing a column for the Boston Advertiser and free-lance articles for numerous magazines.

During World War II, Mr. Winerip served four years in the South Pacific with the U.S. Army 543rd Engineers, leaving the service as a sergeant.

After the war, he continued his free-lance career and, in 1949, entered Boston University's School of Public Communication. One year before graduation, he took a job on the copy desk of the then-Quincy Patriot Ledger, where he remained until 1960. He then worked on the copy desk of the Boston Traveler and, later, the Herald Traveler and Herald American.

Church, State Conflict Raised But: Donnelly, Harold Optimistic On First Parish Protection Bill

Action is expected shortly in Congress on legislation to place the historic First Parish Church under the protection of the National Park Service.

The addition of the 152-year-old granite building to the Park Service would complete federal protection of Adams sites in Quincy, which already include the Adams Mansion and the Adams Birthplaces.

At a hearing in Washington held this week before the congressional Subcommittee on National Parks, Congressman Brian Donnelly, sponsor of the legislation, State Senator Paul D. Harold (D-Quincy), and Richard Porter of Quincy, representing the congregation, urged passage.

Harold and Porter serve as co-chairmen of the Advisory Committee which is seeking to place the church under federal protection.

Harold was also instrumental two years ago in securing federal protection for the Adams Birthplaces.

The National Park Service, as anticipated, opposed the legislation, citing the cost and fears of conflict between church and state.

They estimated the cost of immediate repairs needed at the building at $600,000, and said it would take another $100,000 per year to administer and maintain the property.

The second reason for their opposition was the fact that, under the proposal, the congregation at the church would retain the right to conduct religious services in the sanctuary.

On the latter point, Subcommittee Chairman Rep. Phillip Burton (D-Calif.), said he wanted to use the Donnelly legislation as a vehicle to clarify the National Park Service policy respecting the acquisition of church properties.

A number of churches of historic value are under National Park Service auspices, and still conduct religious services. The policy in recent years, however, has been to avoid that situation due to questions of conflict between church and state.

Congressman Donnelly and Harold expressed optimism that the legislation would receive favorable action because of the support given by the subcommittee.

After the hearing, Harold met with the chairman of the full Interior Committee, Congressman Morris Udall (D-Ariz.), who pledged his full support when the full committee considers the legislation in the next few days.

Harold praised the efforts of Congressman Donnelly in winning support from the subcommittee, and in his continuing interest in historic sites in Quincy.

He said he has been in contact with all of the major elected officials who will be involved in the approval, to seek their support.

In addition to Congressman Udall, Harold met with U.S. Sen. Paul Tsongas (D-Mass.), who pledged his support once the Alaska Lands legislation is decided this week.

The House is expected to act on the First Parish Church legislation within the next few days, with the legislation going to the Senate by August 19, when the Senate returns from its recess.

RECREATION ROUNDUP

Specialists assigned to the Quincy Recreation Department's summer playground program, report on the following activities:

Archery - [Paula Constat]

Balloons were busting all over the city this week. And all for their favorite drink, Dr. Pepper. The shooters really went to town for their "Peppers".

At Pollard, Willie Cullen was the champ, with fine shooting from Kevin Salmon, Janice Carroll, Ron Harkins, Steven Perdios and Joey Stein. At Perkins playground archery is a big thing with Mike Malloy, Dave Coletti, Billy and Bobby Roche, Louie Gonales, Jennifer Fay, Debbie Noe, Lisa Brown, Mike Connolly, Sue Welliver. O'Rourke park also did an excellent job busting those balloons by Andy Eamos, Jim McSweeney, Bill Egan, Dave Ahern and Ricky Nabstedt. LaBrecque was covered with arrows last week from shooters Paul Miller, Joey Conti, Marc Abboud, Pat Faherty, John Spencer and Mark Walsh. At Quarterdeck there were merry men, Timmy Riley, Ronny Auppelle, Buz and Steve Rose, Sean Hensley, Peter Cannuff, Al Conant and Sue Cullen. Over to Faxon park shooters were Siobhan Sheils, Corinne Fichtner, Michael Thomas, Todd Glennan and a special round of applause for Leader Brian O'Connell who's shooting was unbelievable. Good shooting everyone.

Arts and Crafts - [Gerri Belmonte, Sue Brum, Janice Ronayne and Janice Siddens]

For the past two weeks the arts and crafts specialists have been keeping young artists on the playgrounds making sand terrariums and the all time favorite - gimp.

From Grasso park - also known as Columbia dome - Robbie Neal, Tommy VanBibber and Bobby Lally pulled through once again with super blue, black and green sand terrariums.

At Welcome Young playground, Timmy Marin was awarded first prize, Jennifer Fahey was awarded second prize and Paul Marin third prize for the "Most Creative Junk" project.

Many children from LaBrecque and Taffrail displayed their artistic talents. Patty Morrell and Gail Morrell, and Christine Campbell participated by making gimp key chains.

One of the most enthusiastic playgrounds in the city is Russell park, the Beardsleys and Barretts are two creative families. Excellent sand terrariums were created by 20 Russell carsals. All did a super job.

Sports - [Anne Baccari and Mitch Finnegan]

There may have been problems in Moscow, but Quincy's version of the Olympics went off without a hitch. More than 200 finely-tuned and highly skilled athletes recently walked through the hallowed gates of the Peaffman Oval and onto the track at Veteran's Memorial Stadium. In a morning that saw many Junior Olympic records shattered, one of the highlights was the record-setting fifth consecutive victory in the 3-legged race by Anthony Battistone and Brian Glavin of Pond Street. That victory helped Pond St. lead the District (5) to the District Championship.

Russell Park captured the individual park championship with three first place trophy winners and two second place finishers. The Russell park coaches attributed the stellar performance of their small but feisty team to their scientific training program which they have borrowed from the East German Olympic Team.

In the world of racquetball, many youngsters continue to show their skills in the fast-paced and exciting sport at the Playoff Racquetball Club in Braintree. David Gaines of Squantum, John Ennis of Montclair, Christine McSweeney of Atlantic and Pat Bull of Welcome Young have all shown the great talent in District 2, which seems to have eluded their supervisor, Whitey McGuigan. John Ciccone and Jennifer Downey of Pond St. and Rich Pettitelli and Chery Kerr of Elm St. exhibited the great talent of the District 5 contingent.

As the racquetball program draws to a close, the playgrounds are gearing up for the Pepsi Hot Shots, the Eddie Pelligrini Baseball Clinic and Frisbee Golf Day at the Russell Park Country Club. We hope to see you there.

Tennis - [Joanne Ruane and Larry McCarthy]

With the upcoming Quincy Recreation Tennis Tournament just around the corner, the city's best players are preparing their strategies. With ground strokes perfected, the players are working on serving and game plans. At the tennis clinic Monday and Wednesday mornings, there is tough competition to be found. Larry Taglieri and P. J. Hussy are top seeded in the junior boys division.

New players are constantly flocking to the courts. Among these new talents are Teddy Baron of Forbes Hill, Deanna and Andra Roche and Shannon Evans of Heron Rd. and Dan Jenkins of Kincaide. Although new, these players will present a challenge in the end of the summer tournament.

The tournament begins August 7th and runs through August 14th with the city finals on the 15th. That leaves two weeks for hard practice and psyching up! Good luck to those who enter and we'll see you on the courts.

Golf - [Thomas McBride]

Some of the big action in the golfing world is on the Quincy Parks and Playgrounds this week. The eyes of the P.G.A. look toward the majestic grandeur of the Furnace Brook Golf links for the potential crop of golf's next stars being groomed under the watchful tutelage of the Quincy Recreation Golf Specialist Tom McBride. Among the current standouts are Pat Logan and Kevin White of O'Rourke. Todd Borge also of O'Rourke raised some eyebrows this week on the very tough 368 yard par and third hole by dropping a five iron 20 feet from the pin. He had to settle for par as his birdie attempt came up inches short.

Jimmy Paolucci, a new face on the tour looks to be one of the longer hitters on the tour, negotiated the difficult 380 yard seventh hole with a drive and an eight iron to get him into putting range. Jim Kelly and Kevin Johnson continue to improve. Intent on tying up their short game in hopes that it will save them a few strokes come tournament time. Breaking into the golfing spotlight are the Segalla brothers Keith and Kevin along with Ted Morrow all of Forbes Hill who are finally getting some well deserved recognition.

"The Only Bank You Will Ever Need"

Atty Peter Eeley In Race For Governor's Council

Atty. Peter Eeley of 69 Forbes Hill Rd., Wollaston, has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the 4th District seat on the Governor's Council, the post held for 33 years by the late Patrick (Sonny) McDonough.

Eeley noted that he is the only attorney in the race for the $4,000 a year job on the Council one of whose roles is to pass on the Governor's appointments to judgeships.

"The approval or disapproval of judgeship nominees is a matter of great concern to me," said Eeley.

"As a former Norfolk County assistant district attorney and now as a practicing attorney, I have handled over 1,500 cases before judges at the superior, district and probate court levels.

"I have a deep appreciation for the incomparable impact these appointed men and women, by their decisions, have upon a person's life. I know the court system. I know its problems.

"As the only attorney in the race, my commitment is to furthering a strong, independent judiciary.

"When I approve a life-long judicial appointment, it will be on the basis of qualifications, philosophy and judicial temperament, not politics."

Eeley noted that in 1979 the Governor's Council approved 25 judgeships and that already this year 16 persons have been approved for lifetime judicial posts.

Eeley also noted that "the council's authority to approve criminal pardons and commutations is awesome."

He said that in 1979 out of 139 full and complete pardons applied for, 22 were granted; also 31 commutations were applied for in 1979 and one was granted.

"That may be 22 pardons and one commutation too many," said Eeley, who indicated he will take a hard line against pardoning or commuting convicted felons.

Eeley then elaborated on other law-related Council duties.

"The Council approves appointments to the state Parole Board," he said. "I will approve the appointment of no one whose philosophy places concern for a convict's rights above concern for the general public's safety in paroling a convicted criminal."

Eeley, emphasizing his commitment to appointments based on qualifications, discussed the Council's authority in approving appointment of the State Youth Services Commissioner, district court clerks and appellate tax board members.

"Not many taxpayers are aware of the Council's important oversight of state spending," he said.

"We, as Councillors, have the authority to review and question every dime the Commonwealth spends. No appropriation can be made without our approval.

"With an inflated economy and welfare outlays consuming 45 to 50 per cent of our state budget, I will exercise the power of appropriations review, with scrutiny, on behalf of the over 750,000 residents and taxpayers in my district."

Addressing the Council's involvement with veteran's benefits, Eeley said:

"Many veterans are financially hard-pressed today. The Governor's Council is in effect the Supreme Court of Veterans' benefits. A veteran who has been denied benefits by the local veteran's agent has ultimate appeal to the Governor's Council."

"As a councillor, I will always give every consideration to those who have become disabled while serving their country in the armed forces."

Eeley said he and his wife, the former Rene O'Laughlin, are looking forward to a summer of knocking on doors, attending local gatherings and meeting as many of the more than 750,000 district residents as possible. "I believe I have something to offer this district," said Eeley. "I believe I have qualifications which distinguish my candidacy and ability to do the job from others in this race."

"I look forward to doing the job with the same thoroughness and energy with which I'm approaching this campaign."

Renovations To Start At Safford St. Home For Handicapped

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Renovations at 216 Safford St., Wollaston, site of a proposed home for the handicapped, are expected to get underway this week, according to Quincy Housing Authority Administrator Clement O'Brien.

The start of the renovations marks the end of a three-year struggle for the authority, which first considered the project in 1977.

The home, when renovated, is expected to house eight mentally and physically handicapped adults and one or two live-in supervisors, according to O'Brien.

The OHA will supply maintenance for the building, which will be managed by the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens.

A $113,107 contract for renovations with the Lawrence J. Rogan Co., of Dorchester received state approval last week, O'Brien said.

"We sent out an order to proceed to the Rogan company," O'Brien said. "We expect renovations to begin within a week."

The project was delayed by community opposition and a long-running legal battle with city Building Inspector Allan MacDonald, who withheld a permit for several months.

Noting the opposition, OHA member Carmine D'Olimpio said, "I'm proud that this board did not buckle under to the political pressure."

Pedestrian Light Due For Wollaston Beach Crossing

The long-sought pedestrian traffic signal in front of 861 Quincy Shore Drive at Tony's Clam Shop will be installed next week, it was announced by Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D-Quincy).

Brownell asked the MDC to install the light after residents of the neighborhood on Wollaston Beach contacted him about the safety hazard for bathers crossing the street at that point.

The signal was to have been installed at the start of the current beach season but it was postponed when a needed part was delayed. The part was scheduled to arrive July 28.

Brownell said the light is part of his ongoing safety design program for Quincy Shore Drive and will serve as a speed control for autos using that stretch of roadway.

Cancer Crusade Tops $26,500 Goal

Quincy's Cancer Crusade has already exceeded its goal of $26,500, with nearly a month remaining in the 1980 fund drive, announces Chairman Richard J. Koch.

Koch praised the crusade's ward and precinct captain and the 1500 volunteers who helped raise more than $12,000 in the house-to-house portion of the Cancer Crusade.

"The response of the public was tremendous in the door-to-door education and fund-raising effort," Koch said. "It was the most successful in the history of the Quincy Cancer Crusade."

Koch recently presented citations to the Hancock Bank and bank employees Kenneth McDonnell and Muffie Ventresca for their aid to the crusade.

Volunteers who have not made final returns are requested to do so and persons still wishing to donate may make checks payable to the American Cancer Society leave them at any of the Hancock Bank offices.

The largest portion of the Cancer Society dollar spent is for research with public education and patient services next while professional education and community service are also included in the annual expenditures, Koch said.

The American Cancer Society does not receive money from the United Fund nor is it government funded. The Society depends upon voluntary gifts to support its Cancer Control Program, he added.

Beat The Summer Heat: Take A Boat To The Islands

One way to beat the summer heat is an excursion to one of Boston Harbor's scenic islands.

The state's Department of Environmental Management offers water taxi service on weekends between Hewitt's Cove in Hingham and Georges Island and also between George's Island and Gallops, Lovell, Grave and Bumpkin Islands. The Hingham-to-Georges Island trip costs $2.50 per adult and $2 per child; the water taxi service between Georges and the other islands is free.

In addition, Dick Sutherland of Quincy, skipper of the water taxi "Irene", offers rides from Hewitt Cove to Georges Island and back on weekends at the same state-set prices.

The "Irene" departs Hingham at 10 a.m. Saturdays and Sundays and leaves Georges Island at 5:30 p.m. During the day it makes shuttle runs between Georges, Gallops and Lovell island as part of the Department of Environmental Management schedule.

The 42-foot diesel powered boat has a capacity for 49 persons.

For reservations and other information, call 479-3575.

Mariners Sweep Doubleheader At Bourne

The Quincy Bay Mariners, enjoying a good season, swept a doubleheader from Bourne Sunday at Adams Field to improve their South Coast League record to 16-9.

Quincy's hopes of making the league playoffs which begin Saturday, have been dimmed by its inability to use Adams Field for several home games, resulting in it being forced to forfeit at least two games. Last night (Wednesday) was the deadline for making up games. Quincy had four games to make up.

"We just can't get Adams Field," said player-coach Bob Benn. "There are three Legion teams and the Senior Babe Ruth League using it and they get preference over us. Not getting the field has made this a discouraging season for us.

"We deserve to be in the playoffs and I hope we make it, but it will be tough."

Sunday's doubleheader sweep was especially satisfying to Benn and his players, who recently dropped a 14-7 decision at Bourne in a game during which Benn charged the fans with verbally harassing the Mariners.

"Bourne beat us pretty bad and the fans really took it out on our players," Benn said. "They were all over us and it was terrible. Beating these clowns twice almost makes our season and it felt pretty good."

Quincy won the opener Sunday, 10-6, in a slugfest which saw a good deal of shabby fielding. Quincy had five errors, three in the first inning.

The Mariners got their offense rolling as Mike McCormack hit a two-run triple in the fourth and a two-run double in the fifth. Joe Seckler, Jim Maze and Tom Perry had two hits apiece.

Vinnie Todd pitched the route and did an excellent job, not giving up an earned run. He struck out four and walked only one.

In the nightcap Ron Donovan, who has had an outstanding year, pitched Quincy to a 3-2 victory.

The Mariners had to come from behind as Bourne had a 2-1 lead after five innings.

Maze led off the bottom of the sixth with a single, moved up on a wild pitch, McCormack walked and both runners scored on Seckler's two-run double down the left field line.

Last week the Mariners came up with their biggest win of the year, a 12-11 decision over league-leading Weymouth Elks (24-4), although they nearly blew a 12-4 lead.

Fran Donovan and Benn each went three for four and drove in two runs apiece, Paul Vespaziani and Josh Alberti also had two RBI each.

Ron Donovan retired Weymouth in order in the fifth to end the game, called because of darkness and rain.

Trailing, 12-4, Weymouth struck back with Fred Caffrey belting a bases loaded triple and John Hall hitting a two-run homer. Steve Finnegan hit a solo home run to climax Weymouth's great comeback try.

Kiwanis Wins A. L. Crown

Kiwanis captured the American League title in the Quincy Junior Baseball League with a 16-6 record.

In its final game Kiwanis defeated Colonial Federal, 7-5, coming from behind. Trailing, 3-2, in the fifth, Kiwanis scored five runs on singles by Ed Flavin and Dennis DeCoste and doubles by John Carroll and Mark McDonald.

Mark MacDonald was the winning pitcher and Gary McNamara pitched well in defeat. John Doherty was outstanding at shortstop for Kiwanis.

Morrisette Closes Out With 13-7 Record

Morrisette Legion's baseball team finished its regular season Monday night with a 5-4 victory over Braintree, giving it a 13-7 record.

Morrisette scored three runs in the bottom of the seventh for the win.

Whether or not Morrisette makes the state tournament depended upon Tuesday night's game between Weymouth, the Zone 6 Division 2 leader, and Canton, one of the top clubs in Division 1.

Weymouth would take the division title with a victory. A Canton win would necessitate a playoff game between Morrisette and Braintree for the division crown.

Paul Earle and Gary DiNardo combined for a six-hitter in the Monday win over Braintree.

Morrisette jumped off to a 2-0 first inning lead when Billy Deitsch walked, Bob Biagini singled to right, Billy O'Connell singled scoring Deitsch, Kevin Howlett walked to fill the bases and Andy Carrera was hit by a pitch forcing in Biagini.

Braintree scored a run in the sixth and then scored three runs in the top of the seventh. DiNardo relieved Earle, who had pitched well until that time.

In the bottom half Deitsch singled, Biagini reached on an error and O'Connell walked to load the bases. Kevin Howlett singled, scoring Deitsch. Carrera walked, forcing in Carrera with the tying run, and DiNardo singled in O'Connell to win his own game.

Biagini and O'Connell had two hits each for Morrisette.

In its previous game Morrisette dropped back into second place by dropping a 2-1 squeaker to Weymouth, the second loss by one run in a week for Morrisette at the hands of Weymouth.

Jim Stenson pitched a seven-hitter to top Morrisette for the second time. He gave up Morrisette's lone run in the third on consecutive singles by Carrera, Biagini and O'Connell. Weymouth scored both its runs in the fourth inning on Dan Ronaghan's two-run single.

Earlier Morrisette enjoyed one of its best nights as it pounded out 15 hits and bombed Canton, 12-4, as Biagini went four for five including a grand slam home run.

DiNardo, playing second base for the first time, collected a double and two singles and Mark Millane, Jim O'Toole and Earle had two hits each. Earle was the starting pitcher and the winner and Carrera pitched well in relief.

Millane scattered eight hits as Morrisette defeated Norwell, 7-2.

Morrisette scored two runs in each of the first three innings to win going away.

In the first Deitsch drove in Dan Boyle with a sacrifice fly and Carrera walked with the bases loaded. In the second DiNardo and Deitsch drove in the runs and in the third Howlett and O'Toole had the two RBI. Boyle drove in the final run.

"This has been a rather frustrating season for us," Morrisette Coach Ray Cattaneo said. "We have a fine hitting team but our pitching let us down at times and our defense also hurt us on a few occasions. Five of our seven losses were by one run and four of these came in the last inning. All in all, though, it has been a good year and I'm proud of what the boys accomplished."

Wollaston finished its best season since reviving baseball a few years ago when it edged Holbrook, 7-6, in eight innings Sunday to finish with an 8-12 record.

Wollaston scored the winning run in a weird inning which saw two Wollaston runners cut down on the same play. With Tom Smith and Sean Murphy on base through walks, John Kavanaugh singled to right field. Smith, however, was thrown out at the plate and Murphy was cut down on the basepaths. Kavanaugh wound up on second and scored the winning run on Rich Hallberg's single.

Bob Bolster, who had an excellent season, was the winning pitcher with five innings of shutout relief. He also doubled home the tying runs in the seventh, scoring Brian Reale and Hallberg with a solid hit to right-center.

Wollaston upset Weymouth for the second time, 5-1, helping Morrisette stay in the race, as Bolster pitched three-hit ball and struck out six.

Murphy drove in two runs and Peter Alibrandi and Glenn Segalla had RBI singles and each went three for three.

Earlier Wollaston had edged Holbrook, 2-1, with Hallberg pitching a five-hitter and Gus Gonzalez and John Sweet driving in the runs.

Hallberg, who struck out nine and walked only one, gave up an RBI triple to Dave Trenough for Holbrook's lone run. Reale had two hits for Wollaston.

Quincy, whose hopes for a fine season were foiled when it lost several players, bombed Wollaston, 12-3, as Steve Healy allowed only three hits and struck out five. Greg Madden drove in four runs.

Seven other players drove in runs, John Costigan, Tony Camillo, Art Roberts, Pat Ennis, Mark Baker, Jeff Giordani and Chris Petrillo.

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

Brought To You By ROBERT COLMAN

What famous big league baseball game was, oddly enough, decided by a great FOOTBALL player? ... It was one of the most unusual baseball games ever seen ... It was played between the Reds and Cubs on May 2, 1917 ... It's the only game in major league history when BOTH starting pitchers pitched a no-hitter for 9 innings ... This double no-hitter was hurled by Fred Toney of the Reds and Hippo Vaughn of the Cubs ... After 9 innings of no hits by either team, the Reds got 2 hits and scored the only run of the game in the top of the 10th -- and the winning run was driven in by Jim Thorpe, who's been called the greatest football player of all-time ... Thorpe was playing big league baseball that summer and his hit decided this unique baseball game.

Who was the oldest man ever to be a world champion in boxing? ... The record was set by Archie Moore who was the light-heavyweight champion of the world in 1961 at the age of 48.

How times have changed ... When one of the greatest pitchers of all-time -- Bob Feller -- signed his first contract to play major league baseball, in 1937, his bonus for signing was a one-dollar bill and an autographed baseball!

I bet you didn't know ... that Colman's has everything for summer sports, summer games at money saving prices. Summer fashions for leisure wear are a specialty at Colman's ... and at great savings.

Burgin Platner Wins 3 In Playoffs

Burgin Platner finished second to Kiwanis in the Junior Baseball League's American League, but is hot in the playoffs with three wins in a row.

Burgin squeezed by Foley Plymouth-Chrysler, 1-0, as John Cristiani pitched a no-hitter, struck out eight and walked six. He retired the first seven batters, walked the next three batters but struck out the next two to get out of the inning.

Losing pitcher Chris Marshall pitched well, giving up six hits, but in the fifth Robbie McDonald singled, was bunted along by Mike Barron and scored the only run on Cristiani's single. The other Burgin hits were a double by Jay Osgood and singles by Eric Roukey, Matt Ostiguy and A. J. Pugliese.

Mark DiMattio, Barron and Cristiani played strong defense for Burgin, while Mike Murphy and Dan Biagini came up with outstanding plays for Foley.

Burgin outslugged Keohane's, 13-10, after losing a 5-0 lead gained in the first two innings.

In the first Burgin scored twice on singles by Barron, Cristiani and Derek Holt.

It added three in the second when, with two outs, Osgood walked, Steve Hensley singled, Bob McDonald walked and Barron and Cristiani singled.

Keohane's scored a run in the second on a walk to Tim Morrison, Joey Rab's double and walks to Brett Heeney and David Brett.

Keohane's exploded for six runs in the third to take a 7-5 lead. Kevin Scibillo, Andy Keohane's added its final three in the sixth when Santry walked, Scibillo singled, Lenhardt walked and Jack Kilrain singled.

Ten-year-old Mark DiMattio came into pitch in the third inning for Burgin and did a fine relief job. Roukey and Ostiguy were strong on defense.

Burgin then walloped Kiwanis, 8-1, for its third successive playoff victory as Cristiani pitched another strong game. He pitched a four-hitter and in his two playoff wins he has given up just these four hits, struck out 16 and walked 12.

● Senior Babe Ruth Data Wins, Loses

By PETE ZOIA
The Senior Babe Ruth League resumed its regular schedule after playing in an all-star tournament in which the South Shore stars were eliminated after winning two games.

Quincy's Senior League entry, Data Services, broke even in two games to make its record 11-8.

Data edged South Boston, 4-3, with Mike Crowley going the route and striking out seven.

In the Quincy first Phil Caggiano doubled and scored on a single by Steve Picot.

South Boston scored three times in the first to take a 3-1 lead but Quincy cut the gap to 3-2 with a run in the fourth on an error, a single by Picot and a double by Jack McInnis.

Quincy won it with two runs in the sixth when Kevin McKinnon doubled, McInnis singled in the tying run, moved up and scored the winning run on Eric Swanson's single.

Crowley was outstanding after the first inning as he blanked South Boston the rest of the way. Quincy dropped a 5-3 decision to Milton, after tying the game in the sixth with three runs.

Superb bunting by Milton produced a run in the third and two more in the fourth.

Crowley, who started pitching for Data, was injured when he slipped fielding a ground ball and he was replaced by Bruce Tobin.

Quincy tied it in the sixth when Omnis, Mike Abboud, Wally Kilgallon and Brian Tobin all walked and McKinnon doubled. Abboud stole home with the tying run.

Milton won it with two runs in the seventh on a walk, two singles and a double.

Quincy wasted a good opportunity in its last time at bat but a strike-out, with two outs and the tying runs on second and third ended the game.

Quincy Police Fall Despite Rally, 9-7

The Quincy Police softball team, for the second week in a row, lost an Eastern Mass. League game despite a gallant comeback in the late innings.

Quincy lost to Newton, 9-7, Sunday in an eight-inning game, after overcoming a 7-1 deficit to tie the score.

The dramatic comeback was highlighted by Jim Bugle's two-run homer and Gerald Queneey's timely two-run double. Quincy had the winning run on third base with one out but couldn't push across the run.

HN Edges Hancock, 5-4

Houghs Neck scored a run in the bottom of the seventh inning to edge Hancock Bank, 5-4, in the Quincy Babe Ruth League.

Joe Conitt led off the seventh with a pinch hit double. Dwayne Wilcoxen bunted him to third and Marty McLoughlin singled in Conitt with the winning run.

Dale Adams came in to pitch for Houghs Neck in the fourth inning with Hancock leading, 4-2, and got the win with four innings of brilliant relief pitching. He blanked Hancock on one hit.

Losing pitcher Steve Higgins also pitched well, giving up seven hits.

Bugle, Tom Malvesti and Ed Kusser had three hits each. Chico Caporale was foiled in his debut as Quincy manager.

Quincy third baseman Edgar Roberts received the Jake Donovan MVP Award in the recent all-star game in which the South Division All-Stars defeated the North stars, 4-2. Roberts had two hits and made three outstanding plays at third base.

Quincy plays league-leading Natick Sunday with the $1 admission charge benefitting the Jack McTiernan physical fitness program.

He said the stones were not damaged, just tipped over, and they had been replaced in position by cemetery workers.

"We reported the vandalism to the police," said Smyth, "and we tried to locate the owners to tell them what happened."

Hailed As Catalyst Center Plaza To Bring Big Changes

By TOM HENSHAW

The new Quincy Center Plaza was hailed Tuesday as "the catalyst for downtown Quincy" and an important first step toward progressive changes in the heart of the city.

"Give us a half dozen years," said the Rev. Bedros Baharian, citywide development coordinator, "and you're going to see an awful lot of differences in Quincy Square."

The Rev. Baharian's civic enthusiasm was showing for the city had just wrapped up some two years of negotiations for construction of the first new downtown office building in 50 years.

Groundbreaking for the 10-story, $10 million Quincy Center Plaza, once known as the Campanelli-Stop and Shop Building, will be next month with the completion due for the late fall of 1981.

Mayor Arthur Tobin called it "the project that we feel is going to be the catalyst for downtown Quincy... by far the most complex development ever undertaken by a municipality."

He noted that it was the fourth office building started under his administration, the others being the National Fire Protection Association Headquarters in West Quincy, and the Monarch and SCI Buildings in North Quincy.

"This is the first, the toughest, the most important step to bring commercial development into the heart of the city," said the Rev. Baharian.

"The second is to get the East-West Connector highway completed. That will make the downtown mall a reality. Then the hotel will be a reality. Each step helps the rest."

"It is impossible to overstate the significance of this project in downtown Quincy," said City Council President Leo J. Kelly, noting that Quincy may soon be declared the fourth largest city in the state.

"Never before have so many public and private elements been blended in such a way."

Indeed, just about everyone has had input into the project on the former Della Chiesa Parking Area, including the federal government which contributed $3.79 million for a parking garage.

The federal funds were obtained through an Urban Development Action Grant (UDAG), which drew praise from Cong. Brian J. Donnelly (D-Dorchester) as a

Tobin, Council Commissions May Agree On Hospital's Future

Mayor Tobin and the City Council, who have had rival blue-ribbon commissions studying the City Hospital, may wind up with the same recommendations once the dust of controversy has cleared.

The Council's commission, headed by Atlantic banker John W. Kane, proposed that the hospital either be managed by a voluntary, non-profit association or be sold to a private, non-profit corporation.

"I read the report," said Tobin Tuesday. "I don't necessarily agree with statements contained in the report. But, ironically, we both may wind up with the same conclusions."

Tobin's first reaction to release of the report was to call it a "hatchet job," noting it referred to the "politicizing" of the hospital and questioned the quality of his "political" appointments to the administrative staff.

"If you want to call it 'politicized,' yes, I guess I'd have to agree," he said. "It's a municipal hospital. It has been under the auspices of the city of Quincy since 1919."

"I don't think the members of the committee were saying that it was politicized under Mayor Tobin. I was the first mayor to focus attention on doing something about the hospital."

"I could really not pick the report but I don't see what's to be gained."

"I just happened to mention the report to three of the city councillors and one councillor pooh-poohed it and the other two told me that they threw it in the waste basket."

"Should I comment beyond that?"

Dr. Russell Irons, who is a member of the Mayor's Commission that is studying the hospital, agreed that the city should not be running it. The Mayor's commission has not yet reported.

"I agree with most of the report," said Dr. Irons. "I feel the hospital ought to be depoliticized. It should not be a municipal hospital."

"I think it has been proven that the municipal stewardship has

Adams Birthplaces Changing Colors

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

The John Adams and John Quincy Adams birthplaces will each, in the next few weeks, become a house of a different color.

But, there is plenty of evidence that John and Abigail wanted it that way.

The John Quincy Adams birthplace will be painted a "stone color - grayish yellow" next week, according to Carole Perrault of the National Park Service. The John Adams birthplace will be painted white by mid-September, she adds.

The little farmhouses at the foot of Penn's Hill have been red for as long as anybody can remember - at least since the late 1800's.

But research shows that John Adams, the country's second president, and his wife Abigail specifically asked for the grayish and white colors, according to Miss Perrault. Further evidence indicates that the farmhouses actually bore those colors during the early 1800's, she said.

Miss Perrault, a architectural conservator for the National Park Service, has spent most of the last year trying to restore the birthplaces' to their condition during the Adams' lifetimes.

Two letters written by Abigail Adams, dated on the same day in 1800, suggested the grayish-yellow color for the John Quincy Adams house, she said.

And an 1824 excerpt from the memoirs of John Quincy Adams stated that the two OLD SHINGLES from the roof of John Quincy Adams birthplace are removed by workers of the Ormsby Roofing Company of Newton. They were replaced by white cedar hand-planed shingles. It was the first phase in renovations aimed at restoring the John Adams and John Quincy Adams birthplaces to their appearance during the Adams' lifetime.

cottages had been painted white, at his father's request. By then, of course, the distinguished family was living in the mansion on what is now Adams St.

In addition to the paint jobs, both birthplaces are getting new roof shingles, according to Miss Perrault. The white cedar shingles are being hand-planed to simulate the original colonial look she said.

The tar shingles which had covered the John Quincy Adams birthplace were removed Monday.

"shining light" in urban development.

"This is going to be a great boon to the downtown area," said Donnelly.

"Quincy has never allowed its downtown to deteriorate in comparison to other cities across this country. This will be a catalyst in the revitalization of downtown Quincy.

"The city administration is not going to stop here, nor is my office going to stop here.

"We have developed a reputation in Washington as a city on the go, a positive place to do business and a place with a strong fiscal management.

"They will look favorably on any application or program that this city brings down to Washington."

Downtown businessmen were equally enthusiastic.

"This will be the catalyst to make Quincy Center a viable downtown area," said Jason Feldman, president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

Association.

"We haven't been out of the action yet. We owe the Planning Director (James E. Lydon) and the chairman of the Planning Board (the Rev. Baharian) a vote of thanks for their perseverance."

"We are looking forward to being part of a tremendous revival," said Bernard Solomon, vice president of Stop and Shop. "Mayor Tobin has shown a great deal of perseverance and staying power. This was not an easy production."

"All I can say is 'fantastic!'" said Paul D. MacElhiney, president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

"This is one grand step to improve the situation in downtown Quincy. It should encourage more people to get on board the downtown Quincy bandwagon."

"It's very exciting," said Martha Reardon, the Chamber's manager for business and transportation. "It's a good example of what can be done when the government and the private sector work together."

Happy Acres Campers Repair Vandalized Bocce Court

Eleven campers at the city's Happy Acres Day Camp spent three days last week repairing vandalism done by other youths at the Pageant Field bocce court.

The wooden railings surrounding the bocce court were dismantled, ripped apart and used for firewood," by vandals sometime this winter, according to Richard Koch, executive secretary to the city Park and Recreation Board.

The day camp, which provides recreation and other activities for retarded youths during the summer months, is held near the bocce court at Pageant Field, the site of several incidents of vandalism this spring and summer.

Repairs at city parks are often delayed because of shortages of funds and manpower, Koch said.

Camp staff members came to him this summer with the idea of letting campers perform the repairs, he said.

Koch liked the idea, and the park department supplied all the materials necessary for the three days of work—including about 200 feet of wood and gravel to provide a new base for the court.

The project was a good deal for everybody, said Koch, noting that the park department got the court repaired earlier than expected, the campers got the experience and satisfaction of performing a worthwhile project.

Helping in the work were campers Dale Bortolotti, John Cicerone, Darrel Geek, Anthony DiBona, Stephen Jones, Peter Lewis, David Polk, Richard Smith, Arthur Hill, Arthur Leary and John Sledge.

Supervising and assisting were camp staffers John Lewis, Dan Cuddy, Dave Noonan and Philomena Hastings, and Happy Acres Director John Osgood.

The campers cut the wood to size, placed them alongside the court and nailed them together and painted them. They also refurbished the court's gravel base.

The campers' aid meant the court was ready for the Aug. 10 picnic of the Quincy Sons of Italy, who find the bocce competition an highlight of the annual get-together, Koch said.

2 Establishments Told To Cut Motorcycle Noise

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

The managers of two Quincy eating and drinking establishments were instructed to clear up noise problems from motorcycles on their premises at a special summer meeting of the License Board Tuesday.

John F. Norris of Norris', Inc., 1049-1051 Hancock St., and William Savonen of Fil's, 214 Washington St., were instructed to do their part in eliminating problems that were disturbing neighbors.

Failure to do so, said Police Chief Francis X. Finn and Building Inspector Allan MacDonald, would result in the establishments' having their hours of operation cut back.

The matter was brought to the board's attention by City Councillor Daniel Raymondi following complaints from neighbors of the two establishments. Bottle throwing and other disturbances were also reported at Fil's.

Finn said he would check out the situation at Fil's this week end.

In another matter, the board granted a beano license for Sunday evenings to St. Mary's School, West Quincy. Rev. John J. McMahon told the board the games would be held in the church hall as are the Tuesday night beano games held by St. Mary's Church.

City Clerk John Gillis told the board that City Councillor Francis McCauley favored the request and that Quincy Lodge of Elks, which also has Sunday night beano games, were opposed. School committee member Frank Anselmo spoke in favor of the request.

In other action, the License Board:

- Placed on file a request from Madeline R. Fennessy for a lodging house license for 144 Phillips St., Wollaston. Miss Fennessy must apply to the Zoning Board of Appeals for a variance since the area is zoned residential.

- Granted a license to Peter E. Kowalik for The Dance Studio, 747 East Quantum St. The studio can not exceed more than eight students at one time, and must comply with the requirements of the Building, Fire and Health Departments.

- Granted a tag day license to the Quincy Youth Football League for Friday, Sept. 19, and Saturday, Sept. 20 (rain dates Sept. 26 and 27). William J. Peters, representing the league, said activities will be conducted only at shopping centers. Health Commissioner Dr. Robert P. McKeogh did not vote on the request.

- Granted a second hand license to Sandra M. Charron for Sandra's Antiques, 210 Washington St., restricted to furniture, china and glassware. The sign must also meet the Building Department's approval.

- Granted the transfer of a common victualer-all alcoholic license for the Sundowner, 51-57 Granite St., from Horrigan & Kelleher to Lumat, Inc. Dorothy M. Higgins will manage the sports oriented establishment to be known as Luke's Lounge.

- Granted a change of manager for the Wollaston Legion Post, 35 Weston Ave., from William LeClair to Michael T. Larkin.

- Referred to Police Lt. David Rowell a matter concerning President Chevrolet's failure to pay outstanding license fees.

- Instructed Charles and Michael Hudson to pay outstanding license fees for a repair shop at 93-95 Federal Ave., and to clean up the premises.

- Granted, subject to an inspection by the Joint Inspection Team, a lodging house license to Joseph P. Baglione for 60-62 Spear St. Baglione must provide off street parking for tenants.

The board also granted common victualer licenses to the following Boston Harbor Marina merchants: Bert Goldberg for Goldie's Pizza; Gerald P. Dermady for a salad bar; Peter G. Nichols for a snack bar; and Richard F. Riman for an ice cream shop.

The board will begin its regular weekly meetings, Tuesday, Sept. 2.

Landlords Must Disclose Fire Insurance Info To Tenants

Landlords are required to disclose the names of their fire insurance companies to their residential tenants within 15 days of a written request under a new law now in effect notes Senator Paul D. Harold (D-Quincy).

Under the law, a landlord or lessor of any residential property, except owner-occupied dwellings of four units or less, must supply the names of the insurance companies covering the building and the amounts of coverage, in writing, within 15 days of a written request by a tenant, lawful occupant, or code enforcement officer, Senator Harold said.

The former law required disclosure, but set no limit on how long the landlord could take to respond to a request.

Tobin, Council Commissions May Agree On Hospital's Future

been inadequate. The hospital board should be autonomous with the capital to run it. Clearly, something drastic has to happen."

Hospital Director Anthony DeFalco said he feels it's virtually impossible to sell the hospital. He recommended a municipal trusteeship divorced from the city government.

"I believe that the model should be Glover Hospital in Needham," he said. "A board of trustees runs that hospital. They are given a lump sum budget by the town meeting to run it as they see fit."

DeFalco said the capital needs of the hospital and its labor contracts would make it unattractive to a non-profit environment.

City Councillor Joanne Condon, chairman of the Hospital Committee that commissioned the report, said that it has at least partially changed her mind about the hospital as a municipal facility.

"I had been an advocate of keeping the hospital," she said. "The city should be able to run its departments and the hospital should be one of those departments."

"But everybody who looks at the problem seems to be coming up with the same things and that's the direction we'll be heading in, I suppose."

DeFalco and Harold Coose, the assistant director for personnel, reacted strongly to the report's suggestion that they were political appointments and not really qualified for their jobs.

"It is our understanding," said the report, "that the present chief administrative officer (DeFalco) was essentially appointed by a former city administration and that at that time he had no experience or training in the administration of a hospital."

DeFalco was named hospital director in 1977 by former Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia.

"I think the observations of that committee are pretty shallow, superficial and probably politically motivated," said DeFalco.

"I've held some top assignments in this country, both in state and federal government and in the private sector. I operated two different businesses very successfully.

"I have some credentials that are far in excess of the needs for running a hospital."

He quoted the chairman of the board of trustees of the American Hospital Association as saying, "today's hospital is a business enterprise requiring a corporate organization and leadership structure similar to those of other businesses."

"One of the most successful hospitals I've seen is Framingham Union and that administrator came out of industry some 12 years ago and all of his top assistants came out of industry," he said.

"We were told," said the report, "that the person appointed personnel manager (Coose) had little if any prior personnel management experience or hospital management experience and that he was the former legislative aide to the Mayor."

Coose said he found it unfortunate that the commission "chose for reasons not known to me to ignore my over 20 years in the private sector in managerial and supervisory capacities with both line and staff authority for

Brochures Available For QJC Fall Evening Program

Brochures are now available for Quincy Junior College's fall evening program which begins Tuesday, Sept. 2.

Among the credit and non-credit courses being offered are business administration, computer science, criminal justice, hotel-restaurant management, technology, psychology and sociology, history and government, English literature, secretarial science, fine arts, mathematics and science.

Advising is available, and students can take one to four courses each semester. Most courses meet one night a week.

According to Richard Mula, dean of continuing education, the evening division student body includes "those just out of high school, senior citizens and many in between."

"Although many of our students have specific goals in mind, a surprising number of people come to take courses for self-improvement and growth," said Mula.

McGrath Calls For Tighter Control Over State Programs

City Councillor Stephen J. McGrath has called for tighter legislative controls over state mandated programs that have been imposed on cities and towns in areas from public transportation to the environment.

McGrath said, "Property taxes increase to cover these programs and the municipality is forced to make cutbacks in other areas to keep local taxes bearable. Local services are displaced to pay for mandated programs. The net effect is that state government substitutes its priorities for local ones."

McGrath, candidate for state representative in the second Norfolk district, said political accountability and fiscal responsibility are lost when the state can "unilaterally direct" a municipality to shoulder the cost of a program it has adopted.

McGrath promised that as a state representative he would push for legislation that would require either: local acceptance of future unfunded mandates before they become law; or that the state fully fund the cost of future mandates, or a two-thirds vote of both the House and Senate be necessary to institute a mandate.

McGrath also called for a fiscal note process that would inform legislators, local officials and taxpayers of the estimated costs of the first four years of a state mandated program, prior to adoption.

"When voters receive their local property tax bill," McGrath said, "more than half of the local tax rate has been set on Beacon Hill. It's about time that the level of government that spends the money, takes the responsibility for raising it!"

Underwater Recovery Team A Real Bargain For City

By TOM HENSHAW

A 21-year-old art student from Squantum was wading the low tide from Squaw Rock to Thompson's Island one August afternoon when he was caught by the current and swept into deep water. He drowned. The time was 1:20 p.m.

By 3 p.m., the first four members of the Quincy Underwater Recovery Team were in the swift-running water. At 6:15 p.m., the body was recovered 100 yards out in the channel. Divers had devoted 75 man hours to the task.

The cost: Nothing. The Quincy Underwater Recovery Team, 42 divers strong including two women, may well be the biggest bargain the city has in municipal services. All the divers are unpaid volunteers who use their own personal equipment on the job.

For a budget allotment of $1,000, trimmed to $800 in this year of austerity, that doesn't even cover expenses. Quincy, and surrounding towns on a mutual aid basis, receive upwards of 2,000 man hours a year of underwater recovery, repair, study and instruction.

Not long ago, a team of three divers, Dive Chief John Blackadar, Asst. Dive Chief Jim Walker, and Dale Saad, the most experienced of the two women, recovered for Quincy police five stolen cars from Town River off Mound St. Beach. Dive time; 36 hours.

A Coast Guard utility boat on a search and rescue mission in the Neponset River was disabled when its propeller shaft became entangled in a mooring cable. A few moments work by divers Roy Chamberlain and Blackadar restored it to active duty.

During the Blizzard of February, 1978, the team put in what must be a record 493 hours, most of them out of water evacuating people over the snow in boats. After that they spent 90 hours in Scituate, seeking a firefighter who drowned in the storm.

"If we were paid, it would cost Quincy a minimum of $15,000," says Blackadar, who is 40, lives in Hanover, works for an engineering firm in Newton and has been diving seriously for the past 23 years. "There's no money in it. We dive because we want to."

Members of the team come from all over southeastern Massachusetts and from all walks of life.

Jim Walker, who lives at 24 Bell St., Houghs Neck, works for IBM. When an emergency breaks it's his wife, Jan, who rounds up the members of the team by phone. At least six are usually needed for a job. It it's in the ocean, it's a lot more.

Bob Massarelli of 150 Phipps St., Quincy Center, is in heavy equipment repair; Paul Sebra of 163 Suomi Rd., West Quincy, is a salesman; Wayne Furness of 75 Presidential Drive, Quincy Point, an electrician; Roy Chamberlain, a Brockton garage mechanic, teaches diving in Quincy.

Dale Saad, also from Brockton, is studying for a master's degree in environmental engineering, and the second woman on the team is Jennifer Hall of Scituate, a member for only four months.

"Members are spread all around," says Blackadar. "If anything happens most anywhere we can have someone on the scene quickly."

The dive team was formed in 1962 after the crash of an Electra in Boston Harbor demonstrated the confused state of diving in Eastern Massachusetts.

It came to be the Quincy Underwater Recovery Team, with links to Civil Defense and the Police Department, largely because so many of its key people lived in Quincy and so many emergencies occurred off its 27 miles of shoreline and in its quays.

Members of the team are drawn from the ranks of the 140-member South Shore Neptunes, who are headquartered in the old stone field house at O'Rourke Field in West Quincy. If you want to join the team you first join the club and prove yourself.

Team membership fluctuates.

"We have a call list," says Blackadar. "When we realize that someone is not showing up enough times when he is called, he's tossed off the team. We have a waiting list to get on."

Newly assigned team members are given small chores to do at first. It's about four months before they are permitted to take a full-fledged role in an operation.

Jennifer Hall recently passed the four month mark.

"Jennifer just had her first drowning in Cohasset," says Blackadar, like a squadron commander describing how one of his flyers just shot down his first enemy plane.

And Blackadar is the commander, make no mistake about that.

"I'm a dictator," he cheerfully admits. "Diving can be dangerous work. They have to do what they're told. It's show up, suit up, take orders. If they don't like it we tell them we hope they have enough nerve to resign from the team before someone gets hurt."

"I don't want to have to knock on a door and tell a wife, 'I just lost your husband.' So far, I never have."

QJC Offering Non-Credit Courses

The Quincy Junior College Division of Community Services is offering non-credit courses for people interested in brushing up on skills and receiving an introduction to college courses.

Among the courses are English for Everyday Speech and Writing, Basic Mathematics Review, Speed Reading, bookkeeping, keypunch, typing, shorthand, Massachusetts Real Estate Salesman's Course, and Public Accountancy Workshop, Part II.

The courses are open to anyone who may benefit from them, and the credit-free approach to learning makes it possible to learn in an informal, non-competitive environment.

According to Richard Mula, Dean of Continuing Education, "Many people who begin at Quincy Junior College start by experimenting with one course and then, finding they enjoy the course, and the college atmosphere, enter a degree program."

While some people can jump right into a college credit course, others want to start out with non-credit courses.

For more information and a college brochure, call 786-8741.

Teachers Get 'A' On Apparel

'No Need' Here For Teachers' Dress Code

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Although none have yet appeared on any best-dressed lists, Quincy teachers don't seem to draw many complaints for their choice of clothing, either.

That's one reason the Quincy school system seems unlikely to follow the lead of the Rockland School Committee, which last week approved a voluntary dress code for its teachers.

"I see no need for the institution of a teacher dress code," said School Supt. Lawrence Creedon Monday. "I don't see it as a major problem."

The Rockland dress code specifies, for men, dress shirts with ties, or turtleneck sweaters, and sport or suit jackets or sweaters. Women teachers are advised only to avoid "overly revealing or distracting garments."

Rockland School Supt. John Rogers reportedly said one reason for the dress code was increased complaints from parents about "unprofessional" clothing, like blue jeans.

But Barbara Wigmore, president of the City-wide Parents Advisory Council, agreed with Creedon:

"As far as I've seen, the teachers I've come in contact with are dressed very well. And I spend a lot of time around the schools. I haven't seen any blue jeans yet."

"I'm pretty proud of Quincy in that respect," she said.

"I've never had a complaint from parents," added School Committee member Joan Picard. "Almost all of the teachers we see around the schools dress appropriately."

Some schools, have "unwritten dress codes" agreed to between the teachers and principals, she said.

"I don't think it's a problem in Quincy," said Robert Garner, Quincy Education Association president during 1979-80.

"Most, if not all, of the teachers I see are dressed for business," added the teachers union president. "Most of the men wear a tie with a jacket or sweater. I do occasionally see a woman teacher wearing slacks, but most of them wear dresses."

"I have not noticed any teacher, particularly of the male gender, not properly dressed," said School Committee member John Sullivan. "And if I had, I certainly would have made some noise about it."

"I've always been a supporter of proper dress, a jacket and tie, not only for teachers, but for students, too," Sullivan said. "I am still sorry that we relaxed the dress code for students."

"However, I have never heard a parent complain about a teachers' dress."

Sullivan added that he would support a dress code similar to Rockland's "if there is a need for it—but I don't know that there is a need for it, to the best of my knowledge."

"Quincy has not had a formal dress code for teachers in my 25 years of experience in the system," said Creedon. "I think there should always be a concern for what is appropriate, but I would hope that it wouldn't have to be spelled out."

"I support appropriate dress," he said, "but I would not want to be arbitrary and unilateral and impose my standards on others."

"Teachers should certainly dress acceptably," Creedon added. "They're not in the process of acting as shock agents and they're not going into private practice at public expense."

"Our feeling is that when a teacher accepts a position in the community, he should accept that community's values and that his clothing should reflect those values."

"But over the past several years, there has been a change in what is acceptable for people going to work," Creedon said.

"I remember when I was in the Navy, stationed in Washington, D.C. in a non-air conditioned building, we were required to wear jackets and blouses, all buttoned, and ties."

"Now, I see them dressed in short-sleeved shirts, with ties and no jacket. I see clergymen dressed the same way. Times change."

Sunbeams

The Guys In The Big Cowboy Hats

No wonder there are so many people today who are still convinced there was a conspiracy involved in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

All of the odd things that happened back then still make a lot of people wonder.

Now, the recent CBS movie "Four Days In Dallas" makes you wonder if there isn't a new conspiracy. A conspiracy between CBS and the Dallas police to cover up the latter's stupidity.

CBS version of the President's assassination and Jack Ruby gunning down Lee Harvey Oswald would have you believe Ruby just happened to be at the Dallas police headquarters at the right time by pure chance to get Oswald.

The way the movie depicts it, the Dallas police decided on Sunday morning two days after the Friday, Nov. 22, 1963 assassination to move Oswald out of the police station and that they were keeping it a secret for Oswald's protection.

And Ruby just happened to be in a nearby Western Union office telegraphing a girl acquaintance some money and saw a crowd gathered outside police headquarters down the street and wandered down.

But, that's not the way I remember it. And if you were glued to your TV set back then, I'm sure you don't remember it that way either.

I remember watching television on that Saturday night and someone—maybe Walter Cronkite or David Brinkley—reporting that the Dallas police were going to move Oswald Sunday and gave the exact time they were going to do it.

As a former police reporter, I turned to my wife and said: "Don't believe it. They'll sneak Oswald out of there in the middle of the night before someone pops him."

The next morning we turned the TV set back on and a newscaster was saying something like: "They'll be moving Oswald in a minute or two as scheduled."

I couldn't believe it. "Somebody's going to get him," I muttered. "Those dumb . . . !"

I had hardly gotten those words out when the newscaster was suddenly shouting:

"They shot him. They've shot Oswald!" I could see the Dallas police in their big cowboy hats rushing for Ruby.

My reaction to the scene: "Big cowboy hats and little brains under them."

This was one of the stupidist police procedures in history. You just don't announce to the world the exact moment you are going to move a prisoner like a President's murderer at a fever pitch time. You're inviting trouble.

JACK RUBY steps up unchallenged to shoot Lee Harvey Oswald in Dallas police headquarters.

The jerkiest police department in the smallest hick town in Massachusetts would have been smart enough to let everyone think they were moving Oswald at a certain time and then sneak him out at a different time just in case there was someone like Jack Ruby lurking around.

I often wonder if the guys in the big cowboy hats did it because they liked being on television. Or did it for the convenience of television.

And now, nearly 18 years later, both the Dallas police and TV apparently would like you to forget the stupidity of it all.

But because of the Dallas police stupidity and whatever TV had to do with it, the conspiracy theory is still with us and questions remain unanswered.

If Oswald had lived, investigators would have had the chance to question him -- and question him -- and maybe the real story would finally have come out.

But Ruby's bullet silenced the best source of information and cheated history's right to know.

You can thank the boys in the big cowboy hats for that.

Readers Forum

Against Open Convention

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

During the past several weeks, many people have criticized President Carter over his brother's behavior and antics.

Even though he has won the majority of delegates in primary elections and the majority of these primary elections, a movement has begun to deprive him of his renomination supposedly because of this criticism. Should one man be punished for the sins of his brother? If that were the case, many people would be deprived of a career because of a relative's transgressions.

Is there anyone of us who can say that we have no relative who has done something embarrassing in the past? The Constitution provides that no one shall be found guilty of a crime by his associations with others, does this right not extend to everyone?

Also involved in this movement is a dangerous precedent, that of disenfranchising the voters of this country. It has been a hard-fought battle encompassing many years to get the average voter to count in presidential primaries and elections. Andrew Jackson, although winning a vast majority of the votes of the people, was defeated in his first run for president because the politicians did not believe the average citizen had enough knowledge to decide for themselves who was to run their country.

For countless years, the major decisions of party nominations were done by the few, ignoring the majority's will. With the call for an open convention, we are dangerously close to setting our hard won democratic rights back to its beginnings, back to the days when the privileged few ran the country and ignored the rest, back to the days when the smoke-filled rooms instead of the election booths decided the fate of our country.

Over the past 204 years our country has evolved into one of the freest and most open in the world, where everyone has a voice in his or her government. Let us not wipe out all those years of work in one week in August.

Green Light For Center Plaza Took Over 2 Years To Flash

By TOM HENSHAW

The final agreement to build the Campanelli-Stop and Shop Building was more than two years in the making, a mountain of paper work built up even before the first shovelful of dirt has been turned.

It involved not only Campanelli, the contractor, and Stop and Shop, the prime tenant, but the city of Quincy, the federal government, the Building Trades unions, numerous banks and investment houses, even the MBTA.

"This was one of those projects where three or four times it seemed like the thing wasn't going to go through," said City Councillor Daniel G. Raymond, who was instrumental in the critical agreement reached between Campanelli and the unions.

It all started in May, 1978, at the city's first Economic Development Conference at the Neighborhood Club when the Rev. Bedros Baharian directed the attention of potential developers to the Della Chiesa and John Hancock Parking Areas.

"The city," he said, "is willing to offer either or both of them to any developer on a lease basis for $1 a year as long as you give us a minimum of 200,000 square feet of new buildings on each space."

A few days later, Frank Crowley, vice president in charge of real estate for Stop and Shop, approached then Planning Director Walter J. Hannon about the possibility of moving his company's operations from South Boston to Quincy.

Stop and Shop had an option on a piece of property in the State Street South complex in North Quincy, where they already had leased some space, but they figured downtown Quincy would be better.

That brought into the picture Campanelli Inc. of Braintree, which in the past had built warehouses and super markets for Stop and Shop.

But putting up a downtown office building in this day and age is not just simply a matter of putting up a building.

The city would be losing 115 badly needed parking spaces from the Della Chiesa area and Campanelli would need 500 more to service the tenants of the new building. Where in downtown Quincy could space be found for 615 more cars?

BIG DAY FOR QUINCY CENTER is celebrated by, from left, Bernard Solomon, vice president of the Stop & Shop Company; Robert DeMarco, managing partner of Campanelli Enterprises; Congressman Brian Donnelly and Mayor Arthur Tobin. They observe a model of the Campanelli-Stop & Shop office building scheduled for construction in the Della Chiesa parking area.

The answer appeared to be an Urban Development Action Grant (UDAG) from the federal government to construct a seven-floor parking garage partly over the MBTA tracks near the Granite St. crossing.

The UDAG was filed for $4,534,000, which included not only the garage but engineering for Phase 2 of the adjacent Upland Rd. Extension, land acquisition, site assembly and a contingency fund of $300,000.

"We included some things in the application that were negotiable," said Planning Director James E. Lydon. "It was more or less frosting that we could take down to Washington and negotiate away."

When the frosting was trimmed, the UDAG leveled out at $3.79 million.

But there were still problems. For one thing, the Department of Housing and Urban Development, which held the purse strings, was not happy with Quincy's past record on affirmative action.

"HUD had been on the city for some time in regard to community development block grants," said Lydon. "We hadn't made great strides in affirmative hiring or awarding of contracts."

"There was no direct threat to the UDAG that I remember but there was always the implied threat. We revised plans and we started to meet some of the goals we had set for ourselves."

Then there was the ratio of private funds to federal money on the whole project. The original Quincy proposal was 2 1/2 to 1. HUD would have preferred it to be closer to 5 to 1. It finally went down at 3 to 1.

"That was low," said Lydon. "That was low because of the strong commitment we had from the private sector."

The UDAG for $3.79 million was granted in March, 1979.

The Della Chiesa Parking Area does not front on Hancock St. There is another building in the way. Neither Campanelli or Stop and Shop wanted their building fronting on another building. Negotiations were started to purchase it.

Then it was discovered that City Councillor Francis X. McCauley, president of the Presidential Cooperative Bank, was also negotiating to purchase it for his bank, which occupied the building.

An investigation by Dist. Atty. William Delahunt found

Frank Coco, president of the Leukemia Society of America Inc., announces the appointment of Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford H. Marshall to the Board of Trustees of the Leukemia Society.

Marshall has been honorary chairman of the Norfolk County Leukemia Fund Drive since 1978. In his first year as chairman he raised more than $10,000 for the society and in 1979 he helped raise more money.

Marshall said, "I hope in 1980 we will raise more money than ever before for this noble cause. I am asking that everyone join with us in our fight to help stop this disease which kills more children than any other disease and it kills more adults than children."

In August, the Sheriff's Department and the Norfolk County Honorary Sheriff's Association will be distributing canisters to local stores and businesses throughout Norfolk County so that donations can be made there.

"I hope everyone in the County will get involved in this fundraising effort and help support the Leukemia Society," Marshall said. "All those who will personally benefit by their generosity and support will deeply appreciate their assistance."

Your Dental HEALTH

by Daniel P. Sweeney, D.D.S.

Fluoride is good for teeth. It helps prevent decay when it is absorbed into the tooth enamel. When fluoride is present, it is harder for germs to eat away at teeth. Fluoride solutions can be applied directly. The most common applications are through tooth paste or mouthwashes that contain it. However, a most effective way is to have it professionally applied after the teeth have been thoroughly cleaned by a dentist or hygienist. Supplemental chewable fluoride tablets are also available and are especially useful in areas where the water supply has little or no fluoride.

When you have questions about fluoride and your teeth ask your family dentist. He is aware of your needs, the community in which you live and any necessary supplemental treatments. Visit the office of DANIEL P. SWEENEY, D.D.S. when you have questions about proper treatments for the prevention of tooth decay and gum disease. Select a family dentist in whom you can have confidence and see us regularly for cleaning, x-rays and follow up when additional work is necessary. Your dentist will advise you on proper flossing and brushing methods and the proper choice, care and use of the toothbrush. Visit us at 339 Adams St., East Milton Square or call 698-3636 for an appointment.

DENTAL TIP: Chewable fluoride tablets should be consistently used during the entire time that teeth are being formed, usually until age 12-14.

Ryder's Set In New Store At Least Until 2000

"We plan on being here into the next century," says Charlie Ryder, who admits that he and his wife "put our money where our mouth is."

He and his wife Cindy recently moved their Ryder's curtain and drapery shop into expanded quarters at 1489 Hancock St., Quincy Center, the former Milton's store.

The day after the grand opening found Ryder's still packed with shoppers.

"It's been a busy two days," said Ryder, who first opened the old store at 1617 Hancock St., Quincy Center, in 1976.

Last Thursday's grand opening was "far and away the best day we ever had, -- simply superb," said Ryder.

"Friday and Saturday leveled off somewhat, but were still extremely good for the month of August."

The couple have been big boosters of the Quincy Center area ever since Ryder was manager of the former Grant's store for 13 years. That store closed in 1976 and the two, along with Amy Maher, another Grant's employee, opened Ryder's shortly afterward.

When, about a year ago, the Ryders realized they would have to expand that old shop, "we never considered leaving Quincy Center," he said.

They eventually found a new home in the long-vacant Milton's site, signing a 10-year lease with two five-year options which would, indeed, keep them settled until July, 2000.

The new location has doubled the store's floor space and allowed the Ryders to increase their variety of merchandise.

But, more importantly, Ryder said, the move demonstrates their faith in downtown Quincy.

"It's an exciting place," he says. "We've gotten great acceptance from both our fellow merchants and our customers."

"We think Quincy Center is going to be a very vital place in the next few years," added Mrs. Ryder.

"There are things to be done," Ryder said. "We're not naive enough to think that everything is going to remain the same around here."

"But, hopefully, the local merchants and city administrators can come to some agreement on what has to be done."

IN NEW SURROUNDINGS at 1489 Hancock St., Quincy Center, are Ryder's owners Charlie and Cindy Ryder and floor manager Amy Maher. They reported record sales during their first day in the former Milton's store.

McCauley innocent of any wrong-doing but added, "Councillor McCauley's actions in our opinion reflected a lack of sufficient sensitivity to the important conflict of interest issue."

McCauley ruled himself out of further participation in Council deliberations or voting on the project, a move that was to come back to haunt the Tobin administration later on.

The Rev. Baharian, who is also chairman of the Planning Board, forestalled any future negotiations for the property by moving to have it taken by eminent domain. The Council approved a $600,000 bond for the taking, which was to be paid back by Campanelli in installments.

Meanwhile, the Council was also called upon to declare the Della Chiesa Parking lot a "blighted area" so that Campanelli would qualify for a Chapter 121A tax incentive plan as developer.

The plan was worked out and announced in November, 1979, under which Campanelli would pay the city some $10 million in lieu of taxes over a 30 year period. The payment schedule goes like this:

1979 - Nothing

1980 - $12,000

1981 - $18,000

1982 - $20,000

1982-87 - $177,200 a year

1987-92 - $239,220 a year

1992-97 - $301,240 a year

1997-02 - $363,260 a year

2002-07 - $425,280 a year

2007-12 - $487,300 a year

The area, it was pointed out, now produced $62,000 a year in tax revenues.

It was in December, 1979, that members of the Quincy Building Trades Council showed up at a City Council meeting to protest that Campanelli had refused to guarantee community standards in wages, hours and working conditions on the project.

"Campanelli had traditionally been an open shop contractor," said Lydon, "and had not been a 100 per cent union employer. The City Council had passed a resolve to the effect that the job would be a union job."

Councillors Raymondi and Leo J. Kelly were designated to get Campanelli and the unions together to thrash out a settlement.

"At that point," said Lydon, "everybody was worried about the life of the project."

After some two weeks of negotiation, prodded by Raymondi and Kelly, a compromise was worked out. Campanelli agreed to meet "local standards" in conditions of employment and the Building Trades acknowledged a one job, no strike agreement.

But the agreement meant that the cost of the job would go up about 10 to 14 per cent and, after some cliff-hanging, it was agreed that Campanelli, Stop and Shop and the city would split the price hike three ways.

While the labor-management dispute was being settled, it was discovered that the $3.79 million UDAG would not cover the full cost of a seven-level garage. There was funding for only five levels.

"We had gone to Washington with very preliminary cost estimates," said Lydon. "By the time we got to pricing out the actual construction, we found that we were at the low end of the spectrum."

There was funding for only 558 parking spaces now, barely enough to cover Campanelli's requirements, let alone make up for the 115 lost in the Della Chiesa lot.

The Tobin administration went to the City Council for a $1 million bond issue to add two levels and 220 parking spaces to the garage but it was turned down by a 5-3 vote, with six votes needed for passage.

Ironically, the bond issue might have passed had McCauley, a supporter of the project, not taken himself out of the voting for fear of conflict of interest.

A minor hurdle was cleared in December, 1970, when negotiations with the MBTA for air rights over the tracks, which had started nearly a year before, culminated in a 99-year lease for $5,877.38 a year.

"The MBTA is just one huge bureaucracy," said Lydon. "It's difficult to deal with, even for a simple $5,000 lease agreement. You have to go through so many boards and individuals that it's just one long frustration."

Bids to build the UDAG garage were opened in January and the low bid of $3.95 million by Moscone Corp. of Quincy turned out to be $160,000 above the grant.

"We explored the possibility of acquiring additional UDAG funds," said Lydon, "but we were told that because the ratio was so low there were no more funds available to us."

"So we do not have the money on hand to make the entire payment on the contract but discussions with Auditor Charles L. Shea and Treasurer Robert E. Foy lead us to believe that there are sufficient funds in old bond issues."

Meanwhile, Campanelli was having trouble putting together the financial package to construct the building.

Downtown Quincy was designated a Commercial Area Revitalization District (CARD) chiefly to enable Campanelli to sell commercial revenue bonds for the project. But those low interest bonds proved impractical.

"Bond counsel indicated that Stop and Shop and Campanelli's commitment in the city of Quincy was too great to take the risk of going the commercial bond route," said the Rev. Baharian.

"The maximum investment that would be allowed was $20 million and the total investment that the companies have had in the city over the past three years would be $19 million.

"It left only a million dollars for anything that might happen in the next three years. They would not be able to do anything in the city, even build a new store, for the next three years."

Campanelli decided to go to the conventional money markets -- at a time when the prime interest rate was reaching for 20 per cent and the bond market had virtually dried up.

"The Boston Five had an initial agreement to purchase the bonds," said Lydon, "but they were in no position to execute the agreement when the economy started going crazy."

It was nearly three months later that Campanelli was able to put the package together, with State Street Bank providing the construction loan and John Hancock Insurance Co. the permanent financing.

SQUANTUM COMMUNITY ASSOCIATION charter is presented to new President Maureen Mazrimas by outgoing President William Golden.

Maureen Mazrimas Installed As Quantum Association President

Mrs. Maureen Mazrimas was recently installed as president of the Quantum Community Association in informal ceremonies at the home of new Treasurer Thomas Pelletier.

Also installed, in addition to Mrs. Mazrimas and Pelletier, were Vice President Gerry Marquis and Secretary Diane Lindblad.

Mrs. Mazrimas was presented the association's charter by outgoing President William Golden, signifying the change of officers.

She said the association's main concerns are to monitor the proposed condominiums at Boston Harbor Marina and to insure adequate police protection for Quantum. She invited residents to submit comments and suggestions on these and other issues.

She also urged Quantum residents to attend a Sept. 8 City Council meeting dealing with the proposed condominiums.

"The residents should make their ideas known—pro or con—on this very important proposal," Mrs. Mazrimas said.

Wollaston Visitor

That Pain Is Back In Town

By FRANK MORTIMER

They're here. It's a wonder we escaped them so long this summer. I saw one wobbling and bobbing along Wollaston beach. One means many. This pest likes to travel with his kin folk.

I'm not talking about mosquitos. A few of them have been known to make the rounds down Wollaston way. But mosquitos never wobble. As we all know, mosquitos get straight to the point.

No, the fellow I saw down Wolly is the most passive pain in the pants you are likely to encounter this summer. I'm talking about the jellyfish.

They always seem to show up just when the water is warm and best for swimming. The recent spell of hot days has heated the bay. But the water is still clean and sparkling, especially at high tide.

Oh, environmentalists will remind us, rightly, that the water is loaded with germs; but when thermometers read ninety-plus, you think cool, not clean. You employ what your high school teacher called, in reference to theatre, a "willing suspension of disbelief."

So there we were Saturday afternoon, my children and I, kicking and frolicking and fully convinced that the sea, on such a day, could not threaten us.

But it did.

There he was, parachuting in two feet of water, this blobbery pink adventurer; innocent in himself, but harbinger of hordes of blobbery pink adventurers.

My son, Jay, was delighted. He wanted to pick it up. He knows that some jellyfish sting. He wasn't afraid. He happily lifted the visitor in the palm of his hand.

Our baby was just as pleased. She pointed and tried to touch. No doubt of her motives either. She wanted a taste. She had been sampling pebbles for texture and flavor all morning.

"Can we keep him?" Jay asked.

"Keep him," I said, perhaps with less enthusiasm than a parent is supposed to show for a child's originality. "Keep him where?" I challenged. "On a leash?"

"In a jar."

We talked the matter over. We wondered if the captive's relatives might miss him (or her?). We wondered how the jellyfish himself would feel, cooped up in a jar.

The blob, true to his kind, showed no preference.

In the end, we set him free.

"Tell your friends they can all come," my son said.

"Tell your friends to try Cape Cod," I said.

Somehow I felt he would relay only my son's message.

Does Climate Affect Health?

Thinking of leaving town for health's sake? Think a change of climate is good for what ails you? Don't leave in a rush before you take this "fact or fallacy" test.

1. Southern climate promotes longer life expectancy for senior citizens ... I.A.C.T. From age 50 on, the Southerner has a longer life expectancy than his Northern counterpart. But up to age 50, the Northerner fights disease and other natural killers better than his neighbor in the South.

2. Cancer occurs less frequently in the areas surrounding the Gulf of Mexico ... I.A.C.T.

3. Diabetes and stress diseases such as ulcers and heart disease are less troublesome in tropical climates ... I.A.C.T.

4. The Southwest climate offers relief for hay-fever victims ... FALLACY. The dry desert air decreases the ability of the mucous membranes in the nose to fight off allergens.

WEEK OF AUGUST 7

AQUARIUS—January 21-February 19
Week includes delaying factor—beginnings and conclusions are both postponed. Family proves surprisingly generous—strings could well be attached. Be especially attentive to health on weekend.

PISCES—February 20-March 20
If planning to relocate, you could run into temporary snag. Use weekend to chase up debts. Domestic stalemate ends Tuesday and results prove dramatically satisfying.

ARIES—March 21-April 20
Temper can heat up in work environment and, for change, you may have to bend. Financial projects started now should have happy results. Neighbors pay spontaneous calls.

TAURUS—April 21-May 22
You'd be wise to face any suspicions head on. Interest in renovating picks up—an excellent time to make restorations. If thinking about a promotion, don't come on too strong.

GEMINI—May 23-June 21
You can be a bit too independent. If you don't share problems and successes, you could feel quite alone. Sign up with loved one for a physical fitness course, an academic program or dance lessons.

CANCER—June 22-July 22
A professional acquaintance could become personally closer. Weekend favors home improvement scheme—convenient, because pleasant company may drop in. Think twice before taking on big projects.

LEO—July 23-August 22
Don't rush; confusion or misunderstanding could wreck an otherwise brilliant professional or creative performance. You feel less than glamorous, but loved one enjoys the social limelight.

VIRGO—August 23-September 22
Most of the week's fun happens inside the home. Loved one's reputation is enhanced on weekend. If planning a proposal of any sort, spend extra time on the first draft.

LIBRA—September 23-October 22
Good time to launch a venture with friend or family member. Keep far away from controversy on weekend. Financial advisors may be less than sympathetic on Monday-Tuesday.

SCORPIO—October 23-November 21
You begin to grow curious about new places, new personalities—there's irresistible urge to be independent. Lucky streak lasts through weekend. Communication is problem on Monday.

SAGITTARIUS—November 22-December 22
Moneymaking opportunity opens up and travel is mixed with romance. But prepare for traffic delays on weekend, and watch out for rivals on job after Monday.

CAPRICORN—December 23-January 20
You win points on Thursday-Friday by knowing a little about a lot, but after weekend the accent is on specialization. Bad time for showdowns, good week for patch-ups.

BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK
A born leader...lucky in money matters...fierce when you don't get your way, gentle when there's no other means of securing what you want. Long-range goals favored over short-term plans this year. Educational accomplishment can lead to financial breakthrough by December.

Rotary Defeats Burgin Platner For Crown

Rotary, the National League winner, won the Quincy Junior Baseball League championship Sunday when it defeated Burgin Platner, the American League runnerup, 9-6, to sweep the playoff finals in two straight games.

Chris Doyle won it with a three-run homer in the top of the sixth inning. In the bottom of the sixth Mark Zimmerman and P. J. Hussey preserved the win and the league title with the defensive plays of the series.

Bob Carty was the winning pitcher, his second win of the playoffs.

Hussey had two hits and made several outstanding plays at shortstop. Joe Cullen, alternating between third base and first, had two hits and Billy Burkhead had two hits and also picked up two playoff wins in three relief appearances. Kevin Nichols had a hit and played a steady first base, and Joe Mulvey, Mike Joyce, Steve Minichiello, John Pennellatore, Mike Mullaney and Timmy Hall all contributed to the victory.

Rotary won the opening game from Burgin Platner, 7-5. Minichiello and Burkhead pitched three innings each with Burkhead getting the win. John Cristiani was the loser.

Hussey had three hits and scored twice, Doyle hit two home runs, one a grand slam, and drove in six runs. Cullen had a hit and played well at first base, while Burkhead, Hussey, Hall and Nichols made fine defensive plays to help halt Burgin rallies. Carty, Joyce, Mullaney, Zimmerman and Pennellatore all played strong defense.

Rotary earlier had eliminated Kiwanis, the American League winner, scoring four runs in the last inning to pull out an 11-10 victory.

Carty, who suffered one bad inning, a eight-run third, was the winning pitcher.

The big sixth was highlighted by Carty's solo home run, a two-run homer by Nichols and the game winning hit by Cullen, who had two doubles and two singles. He drove in Mullaney with the winning run.

Hussey had two doubles and two singles, Carty had three hits, Minichiello had a home run and Burkhead had two hits.

Doyle, who was outstanding behind the plate, continued his excellent catching. Joyce and Zimmerman made key plays in the outfield and Pennellatore, Hall and Mulvey all played key roles in the win.

Undefeated Old Colony Eyes State Championship

Old Colony (Quincy) DeMolay's softball team, which finished its second straight undefeated season with a 13-7 victory, over Weymouth, will seek the state championship Sunday when it faces Peabody in a rematch of last year's semifinals at Gordon College in Wenham.

Quincy advanced to the finals by blasting Wamesit Chapter of Tewksbury, 16-1, last Sunday at Montclair Field.

Sparking Old Colony's 22-hit attack were Doug Eisen, with a triple and double and three RBI; Steve Olson, three doubles and three RBI; Steve DeMasi, two singles and a double and four RBI; Karl Olson, a home run and four RBI; Steve Pasivich, a home run and two RBI; and Rich Hallberg, three singles and a double.

Steve Olson and DeMasi played strong defense in the infield and Dave Abbott and Pasivich in the outfield.

Capt. Karl Olson had a three-hit shutout going into the seventh inning and wound up with a four-hitter.

● Houghs Neck Softball

Manet Rallies, 9-5

In the battle for first place in the Houghs Neck Men's Softball League last Sunday, Manet Shell rebounded from a 5-0 deficit and scored five runs in the sixth inning to top Quincy Yacht Club, 9-5, and increase its league lead to two games over the Yacht Club.

Wayne Stone, Bob Brill and Richie Gibbons led QYC to its 5-0 lead in three innings.

But Manet tightened its defense behind winning pitcher

John Picarski with sparkling outfield play by Steve Marsters and scored nine runs in the last four innings.

Igniting the Manet rally was a fifth inning two run homer by Joe Driscoll, three hits by Paul Picarski and two hits each by Gary Keefe and Connie Driscoll.

Finlay's Variety bombed Chenette Plumbing, 26-2, with Billy Knopp pitching outstanding ball.

Rusty Preble, Steve Stone and Mike McNally had home runs, Bob Nigro went five for five, John (Magic Glove) Lyons four for five and Tom Grady also four for five.

Houghs Neck Package Store erupted for 12 runs in the sixth inning to defeat Louis Cafe, 17-15, with Pete Little the winning pitcher.

John Ryan and Jeff Little had three hits each for the winners and John Duffy, Rick Lebel, Paul Lebel, Rick Pacetti and Kenny White two hits apiece.

Halloran To Play Football At NU

Ken Halloran of 274 Wilson Ave., Wollaston, will play football this fall for Northeastern University.

Halloran, a center, goes to Northeastern from Boston College High School, where he lettered in football.

"Ken is a fine prospect and after a fine spring, we expect him to develop into a good center," said head coach Bo Lyons, a former North Quincy all-scholastic.

In addition to his football exploits at B.C. High, Halloran, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth P. Halloran, was a hockey letterman for three years and captained the hockey team his senior year.

Track Club Carts Home 43 Medals

The Quincy Track Club continued its brilliant performances last Saturday when it took home 43 medals, including 13 gold, from the annual Brockton Summerfest meet at Marciano Stadium.

Several Quincy athletes turned in personal best performances. The stiff competition included the Sunrise Striders from Long Island, N.Y., who took a number of medals.

In girls 6-8 Karen Hendsbee took third in the 50. Fran Rodgers was third in the 100 and Cindy Bonner won the 400.

In girls 9-10 Kathy Hendsbee was second in the 50 and Sandra Libby and Corinne Radzевич tied for third in the long jump.

In boys 9-10 Sean Hunter was third in the 100 and Paul McLellan was third in the long jump with his best ever jump, 12-3.

In girls 11-12 Tracy Coull won the 100 and Janice Libby third, Denise Petta won the 200 with Tracy Wilson second, Wilson was second in the long jump, Karen Rodgers took second in the 800 with a personal best 2:43 and Terri

Rodgers took third in the mile.

In boys 11-12 Mark Lunnin took third in the 100, Jamie McArdle and Lunnin were 2-3 in the 200, Harry Morash took second in the 800 with his best effort, 2:35.4; McArdle took second in the long jump and Stu Coull was third in the 400.

In girls 13-15 Kristine Picarski and Maureen Roche were 1-2 in the 100, Roche won the long jump with her best ever, 15-5; Tammy Powers took second in the shot put and the relay team of Sharon Cronin, Petta, Picarski and Roche won, thanks to a great third leg by Picarski and some strong anchor running by Roche.

In boys 13-15 Fred Bickford won the shot put.

In open events Lianne Supple won the high jump, 200 and 400, Georgia Traficante took second in the high jump, Michelle Millane was third in the discus and second in the shot put with her best four kilo toss of 38-9, Lauren Andrews took third in the shot and coach Jeff Hennessy took second in the 800.

'Dry Run' Applications Available

Applications are still available for the 6.2-mile road race to be run Aug. 14 in conjunction with Quincy Bay Race Week.

The "Dry Run," sponsored by the Quincy Youth Commission and the South Shore Council on Alcoholism, will begin and end at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Registration is $4.50 the day of the race, $3 in advance. Proceeds will aid youths with alcohol abuse problems.

For further information, contact the Youth Commission at 773-1380, ext. 348 or the South Shore Council on Alcoholism, 472-6027.

6 Track Club Members In Jesse Owens Championships

The Quincy Track Club will be sending six members to the Arco Jesse Owens national championships Aug. 16 at UCLA.

The six, plus 30 other Southern N. E. youths earned expense-paid trips to Los Angeles for the nationals by qualifying at the recent regional championships at Boston University.

"This is the meet where all the rookies do well," said QTC Coach Jeff Hennessy, noting that all of his national qualifiers are relative newcomers.

The QTC, one of the top track clubs in New England, will have a dozen athletes in the U.S. Youth Games in Springfield the same weekend as the Arco Jesse Owens meet, and in last week's Owens regionals it also had three silver medal winners and 11 bronze medal winners.

Quincy's representatives in the Los Angeles meet will be Julie Supple, winner of the girls 12-13 high jump; Kristen McGhee, winner of the 10-11 girls long jump; and Bobby Roche, Kevin O'Brien, Sean Hunter and Stuart Coull, who made up the winning boys 10-11 relay team.

All of the youngsters are understandably excited about going to the West Coast.

"Kristen McGhee is brand new," Hennessy said. "She's done very well jumping so far (she won with a leap of 11-2). I think she has a lot of potential in the jumps. I don't think it is a real surprise that she won."

"I'm going to hang it up in my room," said McGhee, who will be a fifth grader in the fall at the Pollard School, displaying her gold medal.

Supple, a resident of Hingham, is another new QTC member.

"She's never really jumped before this year," Hennessy said. "I introduced her to the high jump just to give it a try and she's come a long way." She had the unfortunate task of eliminating teammate Mary Beth Bonner. Both jumped 4-1/4 and Julie, whose personal best is 4-6, won a jumpoff at 4-1.

"It was too bad for Mary Beth, but she has another year in that same age group," said Hennessy.

The relay team had easy sailing. "They ran 60-flat and won going away, said a pleased Hennessy. "They won more decisively than our girls' team did last year—and they killed everybody."

Roche, on the second leg, broke it open. He had a 25-yard lead at the drop of a hat. It was the best passing I've seen on a relay and the team worked hard on their hand-offs."

Roche's sister Maureen won the 50-yard dash two years ago and made the nationals. Last year Coull's sister Tracy went to LA as part of the QTC team.

Quincy's other medalists were Kristen Dever, Eileen Morris, Kerry Doherty, Noreen Connolly, Tracy Wilson, Terry Hamilton, Karen Rodgers, Elaine Hennebury, Kristen Lenane, Lorrie McNeill, Mark Lunnin, Tina Hamilton and Fred Bickford.

Dever and Hamilton were barely edged out. Dever leaped 14-10 in the 14-15 girls long jump but lost out by 1/4 inches. Hamilton also just missed in the 14-15 girls 100, getting off to a slow start and just missing after coming back strong.

Despite some excellent competition from area clubs, the QTC again dominated the Waltham Track Club Junior Invitational Meet last Saturday, bringing home 36 medals and 16 ribbons.

The 9-under boys provided much of the firepower as they swept three events in their age group.

Hunter, Sean Munroe, Jack Henaghan and Paul McLellan combined to take the top three spots in the 50 and 100, and McLellan, Henaghan and Ernie Light swept the long jump. Frank Calabro won the silver medal in the softball throw.

In 9-under girls Karen Rodgers won the 100, Cindy Bonner took third in the long jump and Dot Bonner took third in the softball throw.

The 10-11 boys also took the lion's share of awards as Mark Lunnin and Stu Coull placed 1-2 in the 50, Jamie McArdle and Lunnin were 2-3 in the 100, McArdle was second in the 220 and won the high jump, Mike Rugnetta took second in the 440, Harry Morash won the 880 and Lunnin won the shot put.

In girls 10-11 Tracy Wilson won the 50, Janice Libby won the 100, Terri Rogers took seconds in the 440 and 880, Tracy Parker and Mary Beth Bonner took 1-2 in the high jump, Wilson took second in the long jump and Noreen Connolly, Tina Calabro and Tracy Fostello swept the shot put.

In 12-13 boys John Delapelle took second in the high jump and in 12-13 girls Tammy Powers won the shot put.

Kevin Dunn placed third in the 14-17 boys mile.

Brought To You
By ROBERT COLMAN

Here's one hard to believe, but it's true... There was a big league baseball team that was in LAST place as late as Aug. 30 one year -- and yet they still won the pennant... The New York Mets were in last place on Aug. 30, 1973—but despite that, they, incredibly, won the pennant that season.

Did you know that the Sugar Ray Leonard-Roberto Duran fight in June turned out to be the richest one-day sports event in HISTORY? ... Between the live gate and world-wide closed circuit television, the fight earned over 30-million dollars... Not even a Super Bowl or World Series, or any other fight, has ever grossed that much.

One of the most unusual lineups ever seen in a big league baseball game was the one San Francisco used one day in 1963... In leftfield was Felipe Alou... In centerfield was Matty Alou... And in rightfield was Jay Alou... That's the only time in major league history that 3 brothers played for the same team at the same time... And not only did the Alous play alongside each other in the outfield, but they also batted in succession in the batting order.

I bet you didn't know... that Colman's is running up to 50% OFF sale on summer sporting goods, sportswear, fishing needs, camping items, in fact, everything for summer sports has been drastically reduced. Shop now and save up to 50% OFF.

It Rained On Morrisette's Title Chances

Morrisette Legion baseball team finished its season with a 13-7 record but rain last week prevented it from at least a chance at winning the Zone 6 Division 2 title.

Weymouth (13-6) was scheduled to face Canton but the game was rained out and the state director voted to freeze the standings, thereby giving Weymouth the division crown by half a game.

"It was too bad Weymouth didn't play Canton, as a Canton win would have tied us with Weymouth and forced a playoff game," Morrisette coach Ray Cattaneo said. "But, we can't complain as Weymouth did beat us twice down the stretch."

"This was a rather frustrating season for us, as five of our seven losses, including both Weymouth games, were by one run and most came in the final inning. We had a real good hitting team but our pitching and defense let us down on a few occasions. But I'm proud of what the boys accomplished and it was a good season."

Bob Biagini, North Quincy High's Suburban League all-star catcher last spring, paced Morrisette with a .468 average in his last season of Legion eligibility. Bob led the team with 27 RBI, 25 runs scored, 27 hits, six three base hits and two home runs.

Mark Millane batted .392, Bill O'Connell .358, Andy Carrera .313, Kevin Howlett .308, Gary DiNardo .306, Dan Boyle .283, Billy Deitsch, .238, Mike Scurti .232 and Jim O'Toole .227.

Among those batting only sparingly, Paul Earle had a .375 average and Tom Canavan a .289 mark. They were followed by Steve Pecevich, Mitch Johnson, Hugh Campbell, Bob Ready and Mike Morris.

Gary DiNardo was the workhorse of the pitching staff and had a 5-3 record. Two of his losses were heartbreakers and with a bit of luck would have finished 7-1. Earle and Millane were 3-1 each, Paul O'Toole 2-1 and Carrera, a versatile player and one of the team's most valuable players, was 0-1.

Morrisette loses four top players, Biagini, O'Connell, Carrera and Deitsch. Biagini, O'Connell and Deitsch played for three years and Carrera for two.

Thirteen players will return led by pitchers, DiNardo, Millane, Earle, Morris and Johnson.

Also coming back will be Canavan, Scurti, Howlett, Jim O'Toole, Boyle, Campbell, Pecevich and Ready.

Wollaston enjoyed its best season since reviving baseball a few years ago, finishing with an 8-12 record.

The highlights of Wollaston's season were two wins over Weymouth and one over Milton, which won the Zone 6 Division 1 crown.

Quincy expected a good season but several players quit and the team finished with a 7-12 record. Quincy was forced to forfeit to Milton in the last scheduled game as it couldn't field a full team.

Milton and Weymouth were paired in the opening round of the state playoffs over the weekend and Milton won the series in two games, 2-1 and 10-8, to advance in the tournament.

Applications Available For Presidents' Marathon

Applications are available for the first annual City of Presidents Marathon, to be run on Sept. 7.

The 26.2 mile-race, sanctioned by the New England A.A.U., is being run as part of the city's second Constitution Celebration.

Applications are being accepted by the City of Presidents Marathon Committee, 79 Coddington St., Quincy Center.

The race is sponsored by the South Boston Savings Bank and the Patriot Ledger, in cooperation with the City of Quincy.

Over 75 awards, including the Mayor's Trophy, to the overall winner, and trophies donated by The Quincy Sun to the first male and female Quincy runners, will be presented.

Also awarded will be silver bowls, "Presidential" plaques and merchandise donated by local businesses. T-shirts will be awarded to all participants and medallions and certificates to all finishers.

The race begins at 10 a.m. in front of First Parish Church, Quincy Center.

Football Kick-a-thon For MDA Sunday

Over the years volunteers have swam, spelled, answered telephones, played softball and done almost everything else to fight muscular dystrophy.

This year, Jack Leone of Wollaston and Rick Iacobucci of South Quincy plan a new fundraising event, a football "kick-a-thon", scheduled for Sunday, Aug. 10 at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Starting at 2 p.m., the pair will attempt 100 extra points apiece, at a distance of about 20 yards. Sponsors will pledge a certain amount for every successful kick through the goalposts. The public is invited to the event.

Persons interested in either sponsoring one of the two or trying their own luck as kickers should call Leone at 773-4793 or Iacobucci at 472-4793. Sponsor forms are also available at The Quincy Sun office, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The event is being sponsored by the Quincy-South Shore Jerry Lewis Telethon committee.

Leone, 16, is a member of North Quincy High School's Class of 1981. As placekicker for the varsity football team last year, wearing only a sock on his right kicking foot, he made 12 of 13 extra points and four of six field goals.

Iacobucci, 22, is a Boston College graduate who will take graduate courses in physical education at Arcadia College in Nova Scotia this fall. He hopes to placekick for that school's football team.

The pair have been working out together this summer in preparation for the fall football season.

"We take 100 kicks apiece everyday anyway, so we figured 'why not do it to raise money for muscular dystrophy?'" Iacobucci said.

The pair hope to make the event an annual tradition.

Brownell Seeks Repeal Of 10% Gasoline Tax

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D-Quincy) announces he plans to file legislation for repeal of the recently enacted 10 per cent tax on the wholesale price of gasoline.

"I do not believe the state needs additional revenue and I suspect there may even be a surplus this year," he said. "I will not join in the pernicious argument that we should pay more for using less gasoline."

Brownell voted against the new 10 per cent tax on the wholesale price of gasoline, which replaced the flat 8 1/2 cents per gallon on the wholesale price. At present, the new tax adds approximately two cents per gallon to the retail price, but this figure will automatically increase as the wholesale price makes its predicted climb.

Drug Raids Hit 'Major Distribution Points'

"We accomplished our mission," said Lt. David Rowell as Quincy detectives returned from simultaneous drug raids Friday on five places in Quincy and Dorchester. "These were major distribution locations."

One of those locations, 190 Rock Island Rd., Houghs Neck, was raided for the second time in two months and police arrested a 15-year-old juvenile for conspiracy to violate the drug laws.

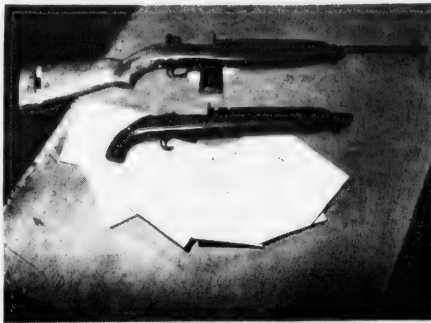

Arrested at a second Quincy location, 117 Doane St., Germantown, was Mrs. Patricia E. Ciliberto, 25, charged with illegal possession of a controlled substance, Class B.

She pleaded innocent Monday when arraigned in Quincy District Court and was released in $100 personal recognizance. The case is continued until Sept. 10.

Raiders also hit three locations in Dorchester and arrested four men and three women, including Harvey G. Astrofsky, 38, who was also arrested May 6 in the drug bust at 190 Rock Island Rd.

Lt. Rowell said a sawed off carbine was found at 190 Rock Island Rd. and sent to the State Police lab for examination. A similar gun was confiscated at 993 Dorchester Ave.

Arrested in Dorchester were: Harvey G. Astrofsky, 38, who listed his address as 190 Rock Island Rd., Quincy, charged with

Patricia L. Nee, 30, of Dorchester, possession of Class B and Class D substances with intent to distribute.

Stanley Astrofsky, 19, and Jean Merrill, 21, possession of a controlled substance, Class A. They all pleaded innocent.

personnel."

He noted that he had spent 20 years as a legislative aide to Tobin when he was a state senator, adding "this position provided me with a valuable work experience."

Tobin and DeFalco also defended Coose's performance in the hospital personnel slot.

"Mr. Coose has a background in personnel and management," said Tobin. "At least four of the city councilors have from time to time praised his work at the hospital. It's unfortunate that their commission did not see fit to interview Mr. Coose."

"Harold Coose has been an outstanding job," said DeFalco.

"It's improper to categorize him as a political appointment. He spent 25 years in private industry, much of that time in personnel work."

"It's too bad the commission made no effort to see what type of personnel programs we have put in place since he has been here."

The commission's report cited as "the larger and overriding problem. Who runs Quincy City Hospital?"

Hospital bylaws, said the report, "would appear to spell out broad areas of administrative authority for the board of managers, the chief administrative officer and various standing committees."

"These broad powers seemed not to coincide with the realities..."

"City ordinances," replied DeFalco, "very clearly place all powers to operate the hospital in the mayor's hands. The board and I act in advisory roles to the mayor."

"I do have a major role in the area of appointments because if I felt someone was not qualified I would say so and that person would not be given a chance."

DeFalco said he was concerned particularly with a remark in the report attributed to commission member Dr. Gerard L. Gaughan that "patients with heart disease cannot receive adequate care at Quincy City Hospital."

"I don't see any quotation marks around it (in the report) nor do I know whether or not he made that statement," said the director.

"That sort of statement will be forwarded to our Quality Assurance Committee and to the Review Committee to determine first if the allegation was made and what is the allegation."

"I believe the care levels are being observed and obviously I don't agree with that statement."

The City Council's Hospital Committee will meet Monday, Sept. 22, and chairman Condon said that members will spend the entire evening discussing the report.

"The mayor makes the final decision," said Condon. "He's been quoted on that several times and I'm not going to disagree with him. But I would hope he would seek some input on this."

Starts Liens Process

City Says 80 Owe $1.25 M Back Taxes

The city has started the process of placing liens against the property of some 80 Quincy taxpayers who owe more than $1.25 million in unpaid real estate taxes for the year 1978.

Included in that sum is more than $1.1 million claimed by the city from General Dynamics in a tax dispute that was recently heard in Superior Court. A decision is expected in October.

The list of taxpayers charged with delinquency and the amounts they owe is published today by The Quincy Sun in a City of Quincy legal notice as the first step toward possible foreclosure.

"Once this is published," said Tax Collector Robert E. Foy III, "we have 30 days to put the lien on over in Dedham court. It's recorded in the Registry of Deeds."

"Six months after the recording date, the city has the right to foreclose. Then it's turned over to the solicitor's office, like we did last year."

As a result of last year's action, Foy said, the city collected a half million dollars in back taxes.

"That was the first year we really went after them," said Foy. "It was an increase over the year before when we got $150,000."

As part of a "get tough" policy with tax delinquents, the city earlier this year filed suit against three taxpayers who, it is charged, owe more than $600,000 dating back to 1970.

They are John J. Duane and John J. Duane Realty Corp., $484,075.20; Vini St. Pierre as an individual and as trustee for Boatyard Realty Trust, $57,414.54, and Joseph Koskow, $77,238.16.

The Tax Collector pointed out that, if the General Dynamics case is left out, the city is owed only some $160,000 in back taxes for 1978.

"General Dynamics is in court claiming overassessment," he said. "There is no question about the tax being paid."

"We have to advertise it on a technicality to protect the tax collection, even though the case probably will be settled in court and they'll pay the tax or we'll refund it according to the settlement."

According to law, while the overassessment claim is in litigation, General Dynamics is required to pay taxes on an average of the assessment for the three prior years.

If the city wins the case, the company pays all; if the company wins, the city refunds the overpayment. It could cost the city a bundle of money or it could be a windfall in free cash.

The delinquencies advertised today include: $1,267,869.74 in property taxes; $2,697.65 in water liens; $64 in street betterments; $36.50 in sewer assessments; and $44.34 in interest.

Bay State Low Bidder

Study Committee Recommends Private Ambulance Service

A study committee has recommended that the city ambulance service be contracted out to a private firm, according to Mayor Arthur Tobin.

The city is now preparing to put that recommendation into effect, Tobin said.

The nine-member committee noted that the police ambulance service costs $250,000 a year, compared to a $56,000 low bid by the Bay State Ambulance Service and concluded that "the same professional expert services can be provided to the citizens of Quincy at far less cost" by a private company.

The group recommended that Tobin accept the Bay State Ambulance Service as lowest qualified bidder.

Members of the committee were Police Chief Francis Finn, Auditor Charles Shea, Henry Bradley of the Police Department, Treasurer Robert Foy, Councillor Francis McCauley, City Solicitor Robert Fleming, City Purchasing Agent William K'elly and John Felci, training director for Quincy City Hospital.

All except Bradley voted to recommend the private service, Tobin said.

"I'm pretty excited about this," said Felci, who said the private service could be in operation by early fall.

Under the agreement, Felci said, ambulances would be supplied and staffed by Bay State Ambulance, a Malden-based firm. Control of the staff's training and medical services would shift to Quincy City Hospital, however.

The Police Department would retain its present ambulance as a backup, Felci said. Policemen

Mayor, McCauley Clash

Tobin: Capavella's Job To Improve Hospital's Image

By TOM HENSHAW

John Capavella, the Mayor's press aide, was named to a public relations post at City Hospital to improve the image of the hospital which has suffered from bad publicity.

Thus Mayor Tobin explained the controversial appointment that was made public shortly after the City Council's Blue Ribbon Study Commission roundly condemned "political" appointments to the hospital.

Capavella had already been at his hospital job more than a month before the report came out, Tobin said.

"There is a problem at the hospital that has to be addressed," said Tobin. "The census (patient count) is down. One of the reasons is the bad publicity that the hospital has been receiving."

"When Quincy residents tell me that they just went into the University Hospital in Boston to have an operation because they wouldn't go to Quincy City Hospital, that tells me something."

"The hospital's image has to be turned around. That's one of Mr. Capavella's functions. I'm very concerned. I asked him to do that. I will not back down from that."

"If I think something has to be done that's in the best interests of the city of Quincy I'm going to do it and there's nothing illegal in what I did."

"I'm not going to waste my time sitting here answering questions from the press and the Council as to why I did this and why I did that."

Tobin declined to specify the job title Capavella holds at the hospital or how he will be paid in the vicinity of $17,000 for a post that apparently is not funded in the hospital budget.

"There is no additional burden to the taxpayers," he said. "All we did was encumber funds and put him in this job and say these are going to be his duties and do it."

"There's nothing wrong with that. It's been done for years."

But those answers did not satisfy City Councillor Francis X. McCauley, one of the Mayor's most outspoken critics on the Council.

McCauley fired off a letter to City Auditor Charles L. Snea asking a ruling from City Solicitor Robert Fleming on "the employment status" of Capavella.

"I would also appreciate."

wrote McCauley, "if you will furnish me with the following information:

"The date of Mr. Capavella's employment at the hospital."

"The job title under which Mr. Capavella is being paid."

"The annual salary, job title and department under which he was being paid prior to taking the city hospital position."

Tobin provided the answer to one of McCauley's questions, telling The Sun that Capavella "has been working up in the hospital for over a month before

McCauley Key Vote

City To Make New Bid For 2 More Floors On UDAG Garage

By TOM HENSHAW

The next step in the development of Quincy Center Plaza may be a new bid by the city to build two more floors on the UDAG parking garage over the MBTA tracks.

Last March, the city sought a $1 million bond issue for that purpose but it was rejected by the city council by a 5-3 vote with six votes, two-thirds of the Council, needed for passage.

The key vote --- or non-vote --- was that of Councillor Francis X. McCauley, who abstained fearing conflict of interest since his bank occupies a building on the Quincy Center Plaza site.

The Rev. Bedros Baharian, citywide development coordinator, said last week that the Tobin administration is going to go for the two floors and their some 200 parking spaces in the near future.

"If Councillor McCauley feels he is out of the picture in the development, maybe he will be able to vote next time," said Baharian, adding that he feels McCauley is in favor of the project.

But McCauley, whose Presidential Cooperative Bank is still negotiating with Campanelli, the developer, for space in the new building, said he still wasn't sure when he would be free of conflict of interest.

"I'd have to talk with the city solicitor on that," said McCauley. "Let's say we decided to move down the street. The question is does this in effect take me out of the conflict of interest situation? That's something I'd have to talk to the city solicitor about."

"My general impression is I've stayed out of it this far, it's best not to get involved in it at all. I was cleared on the thing once. I don't want to leave myself open to be whacked again by somebody."

McCauley was "whacked" by fellow councillors in December, 1978, when it was discovered that his bank was negotiating to purchase its building, which was to be demolished for the Center Plaza project.

Dist. Atty. William D. Delahunt found no wrong doing on the part of McCauley but added that his "actions in our opinion reflected a lack of sufficient sensitivity to the important conflict of interest issue."

McCauley took no further part in discussion or voting on Center Plaza or related projects.

The Tobin administration deemed a seven-story garage necessary to provide at least 500 parking spaces for tenants of Center Plaza and to make up for 115 spaces lost in the taking of the Della Chiesa Parking area.

The five story garage currently planned has 558 spaces.

Private Ambulance Service Urged

who now staff that ambulance would return to street duty.

Tobin said he had no quarrel with the services now provided by the police department.

"It's like us putting sanitary disposal and street sweeping out to contract," he said. "It's to do the service at less cost to the taxpayers."

The move will require City Council approval for transfer of funds from personal services to expenses, Tobin said. A request for that transfer is being prepared by Kelly, he said.

Also in the works, Tobin said, is a public relations brochure to inform the public of the change-over.

"This is part of the package of going to a private contractor," Tobin said.

Construction Up $4M Permits Issued For 3 Condos, Germantown Luxury Apartments

Construction and other building work took a $4 million jump in July over the previous year, according to the monthly report of the city Building Department.

Permits for work costing an estimated $4,774,115 were issued last month, while $670,786 in work was approved during July, 1979.

Permits for five multi-family dwellings - costing an estimated $3,925,000 - were issued last month.

Three of those buildings are part of the same development - 12-unit condominiums, costing about $360,000 each, at 148 and 154 Quincy Shore Dr., North Quincy, and a 16-unit condominium, costing an estimated $480,000, at 150 Quincy Shore Drive.

They are part of the planned 173-unit Colonial Village condominium development now under construction by Quincy Shore Associates and O'Connell Brothers.

Also approved was a 132-unit "luxury apartment" building at 61 Palmer St., Germantown to be built by Clipper Associates and O'Connell Brothers. That building will cost about $2,640,000.

The fifth multi-family dwelling approved was for a five-unit building, costing $85,000, at 208 School St., Quincy Center.

Also approved during July was a $375,000 office building planned for 34 Willard St., West Quincy.

Other permits approved last month are: One single-family dwelling, costing an estimated $35,000; 69 residential alterations, costing $230,285; eight other alterations, $131,800; nine removals, $18,180; five signs, $4,000; 19 miscellaneous, $54,850.

During the month, 117 permits for work costing an estimated $4,774,115 were issued. Construction was up over $4 million since July, 1979, when 126 permits worth about $670,000, were issued.

Brownell Asks Nut Island Odor Probe

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D-Quincy) is calling on the MDC to eliminate a foul odor that is being emitted from the Nut Island Sewerage Treatment Plant in Houghs Neck.

In a letter to MDC Commissioner Terrence J. Geoghegan, Brownell called it

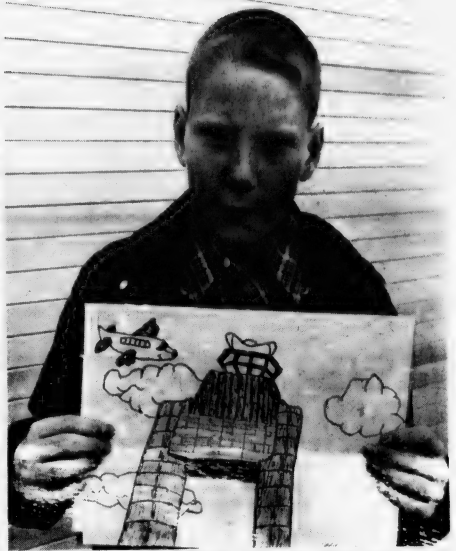

"unhealthy and totally unfair" to expect residents of Houghs Neck to put up with the nuisance.

He said he had received a number of complaints about the odor from residents.

"Recently," said Brownell, "thousands of dollars were spent on rejuvenating this treatment plant. Obviously, there should be no mechanical reason why odors continue to plague the Houghs Neck community.

"I respectfully request an immediate investigation to ascertain the reasons for the recurrence of this unacceptable situation."

EDDIE CERIANI of 34 Schlager Ave., West Quincy, displays his winning entry in a Massport poster coloring contest. Eddie, a student at the Willard School, submitted his drawing after a tour of Logan Airport. He won a "behind the scenes" tour of the airport and lunch aboard the Massport fireboat, the "Howard W. Fitzpatrick." He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Primo Ceriani.

YOUR PERSONAL PHARMACY

There are important reasons why the American Medical Association suggests that you have one personal pharmacy from which you obtain all the medicines and health aids needed by your family.

When one pharmacy fills all your prescriptions, the record file contains all the information needed for the pharmacist to help protect you. Some people are allergic to certain drugs. Others may be getting prescriptions from more than one doctor and the medicines could conflict with each other.

Your own personal pharmacist is also aware of your own special medical insurance or medicare coverage and can be extremely helpful in assisting you in record keeping and advice.

We hope that you will choose us to be the personal pharmacy for your family.

Would Restrict Conversions Condo Conversion Ordinance Possibility In September

Two city councillors are planning to file, possibly next month, an ordinance that would restrict the ability of apartment house owners in Quincy to convert their buildings from rental units to condominiums.

The possibility of a "condo conversion" law for Quincy is being studied by Councillors Stephen J. McGrath and James A. Sheets at the request of Jane Reikard, executive secretary of the Rent Grievance Board.

Mrs. Reikard said the sudden interest in such an ordinance was touched off by the announcement that St. Moritz Apartments in West Quincy was about to be converted to condominiums in which tenants would have to buy their own apartments.

"I'd say that half of the St. Moritz tenants have lived there for many, many years," said Mrs. Reikard, "and they were quite upset that they were going to lose their homes. It is almost impossible to find comparable apartments elsewhere."

John Albanese, owner of St. Moritz, has been very helpful to tenants, she said, permitting elderly tenants to stay an extra year in their apartments and even subsidizing them for $50 a month in rent over that year.

Her concern, said Mrs. Reikard, is for tenants of other apartment houses whose owners might not be so understanding.

"What I'm concerned about is that longtime Quincy people may be forced out of the city by these conversions," she said. "I don't think it's fair. They helped to build the city and I think they should have the right to enjoy it."

"I know that we have lost some of our Quincy people because right now it's almost impossible to get an apartment even if you can afford to pay $750 a month."

Sheets and McGrath were brought into it because St. Moritz is in Sheets' Ward 4 and it is reported that 419 Newport Ave., in McGrath's Ward 5, is also about to be converted to condominiums.

"When people think of apartment dwellers they think of transient people," said McGrath. "That's not always the case. Often you have people who have lived in the same apartment for quite some time."

"If we can't come to an agreement with some of the owners who are converting then I think the ordinance would be introduced as a last resort."

He said it is quite possible such an ordinance could be filed as early as September.

The study by McGrath and Sheets has consisted mostly of an examination of "condo conversion" ordinances in effect in other eastern Massachusetts cities. The most favored one appears to be that of Malden.

The Malden ordinance specifies that no one shall be evicted from an apartment for condominium conversion unless there is a vacancy rate in the city of 3.5 per cent or more.

The vacancy rate in Quincy, according to Mrs. Reikard, is less than 1 per cent.

Malden also specifies that the displaced tenant must have two years written notice of eviction, and three years in the case of tenants over 60 years old who have lived in the apartment for five years or more.

McGrath said the Cambridge ordinance "has an outright ban on displacement of people over 65. They have the right to stay where they are for life."

The city of Quincy, too, has a stake in condo conversion. It means more tax receipts.

"Generally," said Chief Assessor John P. Comer, "we receive twice as much in taxes from a condominium."

"Condos are assessed like a single family home. Apartments are assessed on the basis of income. That's why we like to see the condominiums."

The cost per month is generally much higher in a condominium than in a rental apartment.

In addition to payments on the mortgage principal, there are interest payments, taxes on apartments as well as grounds, maintenance costs and management fees.

$62,028 In Wiring Approved During July

The city Wire Inspection Department issued 99 permits for work costing an estimated $62,028 during July, according to its monthly report.

In 152 inspections, 19 defects were noted, 31 Mass. Electric Co. certificates of approval issued and $918.25 in fees collected. Also, 15 reinspections were made.

Police Warn:

Senior Citizens Beware Of Flim Flam Artists

Quincy Police warn senior citizens to beware of flim flam artists working the area.

Within the past two weeks, four separate flim flam incidents in which senior citizens have been victimized were reported. Using the ruses described to gain entrance to a home, the suspects then distracted the victim, and an accomplice went through the home. The ruses:

- Two women asked for a drink of water, one was sick and had to take some medication.
- One claimed to be the daughter of a neighbor. The reason she had never met her before was because she had been living abroad for an extended period of time.
- One woman asked for a drink of water, then followed the victim into the kitchen.

After the suspects left, further investigation revealed that valuable items were stolen. In each case, the victim said the flim flam artists were persistent, and when asked to leave used delay tactics. They appear to be nice and comment that the home and belongings are beautiful.

The suspects are two white females, between 20-30 years of age, and are of foreign descent.

Police urge that before admitting any stranger into their homes, that senior citizens check identities. When callers ask for a drink of water or to use the telephone - do not let them enter the home. Instead have them wait outside and bring the water to them or make the telephone call yourself.

If you have had a similar incident happen or if one occurs, contact the Quincy Police Department, 479-1212.

McCauley First Mayoral Robin?

Trying to spot the first mayoral candidate of a coming city election year is something like trying to find the first robin of spring.

Don't look now, but is that Frank McCauley bob, bob bobbing along?

The Committee to Elect Francis X. McCauley is planning a fund-raiser for mid-September -- exact date to be set soon.

Question: Elect McCauley to what?

It would seem rather early to kick off a campaign for re-election as a city councillor.

But really not too early to start raising some bucks for a run for mayor. Something between $60,000 and $75,000 -- maybe more -- would be needed.

Ask McCauley himself and he tells you: "I'll be running for something next year. That's for sure. If it isn't one, it will be the other."

But a source close to him says: "He's giving serious thought to running for mayor."

McCauley did that last year -- gave it thought -- and decided to run for re-election instead. He easily topped the city council at-large race with 14,931 votes. John Quinn was runner-up with 12,069 and former Mayor Joseph LaRaia finished a distant 11,210 (just 197 votes ahead of political newcomer Richard Koch, Jr.) to take the third seat.

McCauley would have to be reckoned with if he steps into next year's mayoral ring.

YOU MIGHT SAY Ronald Reagan and George Bush have a sartorial as well as political tie these days. Both apparently like the South Shore Chamber of Commerce neckties presented to them when they spoke at the Chamber Presidential candidates breakfasts last spring.

Reagan was recently seen in a photo in a national newspaper with Frank Sinatra and Dean Martin sporting his Chamber tie. Bush has been seen twice in Time magazine photos wearing his at a convention press conference after being picked by Reagan and in Kennebunkport, Me.

The Chamber traditionally presents its tie with its decorated trademark seagulls to guest speakers at its breakfast or luncheon membership meetings. During the Presidential series they were presented to John Anderson, Howard Baker, John Connally, and Philip Crane. Ted Kennedy has one from a previous appearance.

BROWN

Every guest speaker but one who has received the tie, has worn it at the meeting. Lone exception was California Gov. Jerry Brown.

Speculation is that Brown didn't wear the tie because he has a valet who picks out his clothing combination for him each morning.

And the valet wasn't with him when he was presented the tie.

THE LATE Ted Johnson of Wollaston had a brilliant and active career with the

JOHNSON

Massachusetts State Police. So, it is not surprising to see him prominently in photographs illustrating "French And Electric Blue", the history of the state police authored by William F. Powers. The photos include that of the special detail assigned to Charlestown

State Prison for the electrocution of Nicol Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti in August, 1927.

Johnson, who joined the state police in 1926 was a champion marksman and an outstanding light heavyweight fighter. As a detective he worked on many famed cases, including the Millen-Fabian murder case. Ted retired in the early 1960's, finishing up his career in the State Fire Marshal's office. He died in July of 1965.

INCIDENTALLY, Ted's brother, Russ, of Quincy still hears from President Jimmy Carter each Christmas. Russ was chairman of the South Shore

Protestant Men's Prayer

Breakfast in May, 1973 and arranged to have the then

Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, a virtual political unknown, as the keynote-speaker. Carter had never been in this area before. He later referred to Russ as his first friend in Massachusetts. Carter sends a Christmas card each year.

CARTER

THINK IT WAS HOT? Well, it was -- even by Texas standards. Texas has sweltered in the 100's for over a month as you know. But Tony Miller, formerly of Merrymount now living in San Antonio came here for a visit. And, he told Jason Feldman he thought it was hotter here than in Texas. Guess our heat is just hotter.

MBTA Approves Relocation Of Quincy Station Exit Road

Work has begun to relocate the bus exit road from the Quincy Center MBTA station and eliminate an eyesore between City Hall and McIntyre Mall.

The MBTA recently gave permission to block permanently the road and move the bus exit to a spot on Hancock St. opposite the Quincy Savings Bank.

"For the last two years," said Mayor Tobin, "since the city constructed the City Hall Annex, requests have been made to the MBTA to abandon the road because of its proximity to City Hall, a distance of about eight feet.

"With the South Quincy station nearing completion, it is thought that most of the buses traveling south could be dispatched from South Quincy, utilizing the soon-to-be constructed ramp system at Center St. and the Southeast Expressway.

"It has been mutually agreed that the position of the road posed a threat of danger, especially in icy conditions.

"The elimination of the road and the expansion of McIntyre Mall will contribute to the beauty of the improved City Hall area."

Part of the Mall reclaimed from the roadway will be the site of the Constitution Bicentennial monument designed and carved by Edward Monti.

Tobin To Receive Mental Health Center Award

The Board of Directors of South Shore Mental Health Center has chosen Mayor Arthur Tobin as a recipient of its 1980 Distinguished Service Awards.

The award, to be presented Sept. 28, will honor Tobin for "your leadership qualities, concern for the quality of services offered to residents and your personal commitment to public service," according to a letter from the directors to Tobin.

Last year's awards were presented to former Mayor Thomas Burgin, Boston Police Superintendent Edward Connolly of Milton and Randolph School Supt. Dr. John Zoino.

The first crossword puzzle appeared in the New York World in 1913.

Constitution Almost Target Ship Squantum Woman Brought 'Old Ironsides' Home

By GORDON F. NELSON

In the recent parade of the Tall Ships in Boston Harbor, led by the venerable USS Constitution, brought to mind Mrs. Lillie B. Titus, the dynamic Squantum woman who was instrumental in returning Old Ironsides to her home port of Boston.

Mrs. Titus, who was a member of the Huckins family, was president of the Massachusetts State Society, U.S. Daughters of 1812, when she introduced the resolution in 1897 to have the ship brought back to the city where she was built 100 years before at Hartt's Shipyard.

Constitution was towed to the port of Boston from Portsmouth, N.H., on Sept. 21, 1897 -- "now old and dismantled," as Gov. Roger Wolcott noted -- and Mrs. Titus and her Society immediately set about to have her restored to serviceable condition.

John D. Long of Hingham, the Secretary of the Navy, notified Mrs. Titus on Dec. 4, 1899 that:

"The Department has today recommended to the Congress the early passage of an act authorizing your society to undertake the restoration of the old frigate Constitution by popular subscriptions, the work to be done under the supervision of and as directed by the Department."

The Act for the Preservation of the Frigate Constitution was signed by President William McKinley on Feb. 14, 1900, authorizing the Navy to "place the Frigate Constitution in the same condition as regards her hull and rigging, as when she was in active service."

The catch: The Massachusetts State Society, U.S. Daughters of 1812, had to raise a sufficient sum of money to complete the work.

Unfortunately, the subscription drive failed, even though each subscriber was offered an attractive certificate, depicting Constitution under full sail and signed by Mrs. Lillie B. Titus, in return for his contribution.

Mrs. Titus appeared before a meeting of the Bostonian Society on Jan. 12, 1902 on behalf of a petition asking the State Legislature to grant $300,000 to rebuild Old Ironsides as a training ship. This attempt to raise funds also was unsuccessful.

Constitution had so deteriorated by 1905 that the Navy recommended she be towed out to sea and used for target practice. At last the public took notice of her plight and forced Congress to appropriate $100,000 to save the historic vessel from destruction.

Mrs. Titus, who was born in Roxbury in 1854 but adopted Squantum as her home early in life, was active for many years in Quincy affairs, particularly those related to the history of the city.

She was the first state president of the U.S. Daughters of 1812, which was organized in 1892 to unite the descendants of the men who fought in the War of 1812 and to foster pride in that chapter of American history.

She was an organizer and first president of the Adams Chapter of the Daughters of the Revolution and she conceived the idea of the DR operating the birthplace of John Adams, which the organization did for many years.

It was also through the efforts of Mrs. Titus that the Myles Standish Cairn was erected in Squantum Park in 1895 and the Abigail Adams Cairn was built on Penns Hill, South Quincy, a year later.

A Mayflower descendant, one of her last acts was to attend a convention of the Howland Family Association, of which she was secretary and treasurer, in Plymouth just before she died in 1923.

Mrs. Titus and Old Ironsides had an earlier relationship, too.

When Constitution put to sea for the first time in 1798, Lt. Richard C. Beale of Quincy was one of her officers. When Constitution captured a ship called the "Niger" later that year Lt. Beale was given command of the prize and brought her to Norfolk, Va.

The Beale family had come from England to settle in Squantum in 1784 when Richard was 11 years old. The family moved in 1792 to a beautiful house on Adams St., next to the Adams Mansion.

In 1854, the year in which his granddaughter, Lillie, was born, Capt. James Huckins -- for whom Huckins Ave. was named -- purchased the Beale's "Summer Hill Farm" in Squantum, which was to be Lillie's home in later life and the house in which she died.

Quincy's Yesterdays By Tom Henshaw

Della Chiesa, McIntyre Clash

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa charged that City Council President James R. McIntyre was "playing politics with Quincy's economic future" by using stalling tactics against the so-called "West of the Tracks" development.

"I regret that the Mayor has introduced personalities in this issue which involves so much municipal money," retorted McIntyre, who was preparing to run against Della Chiesa for mayor in the fall elections.

The West of the Tracks development was a $700,000 plan to provide more parking space and better traffic approaches to the undeveloped area owned by the Grossman interests across the Old Colony tracks from the Ross Parkway.

SEEK NAVY INTERVENTION

The Shipyard Workers Union warned that members may stop work in East Coast shipyards where naval vessels are under construction unless the Navy Department intervenes in its contract dispute with the Bethlehem Steel Co.

The Navy had declared its neutrality in the dispute which saw members of Local 5 and Local 90 working without contracts at the Fore River Shipyard.

"Unless you dissuade the company from imposing upon its employees the outrageous deterioration in working conditions which the company has demanded our union cannot long prevail upon its members to remain at work," said union officers in a telegram to the Navy.

'Ginger Snap' Children's Program At Squantum Church

Children at the First Church of Squantum this summer have participated in a new Sunday morning program, "Ginger Snap". The program takes place toward the end of each morning worship service while the adults are listening to the sermon.

It consists of informal recreation and refreshments and is supervised by three church young people, Susan Scott, Sarah Mildram and Nancy Ellis.

"Ginger Snap" allows us to offer the worship experience to very young children without making it too long for them," notes Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, pastor. "And we are very proud of our three young teachers for making it work so well."

On Sunday, Church adults participated in another "Service From the Psalms", the sixth in a series, and the pastor preached on "The Secret of Christian Bible Study." Margot Robinson, Mary Megias and Robert Chamberlain, all from St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church, provided special music.

Guests were Ralph and Del Dougherty.

Next Sunday's service begins at 9:15 a.m., and the sermon will be, "A Network of Love".

Capavella's Job To Improve Hospital's Image

the commission's report came out."

McCauley termed Capavella's appointment "just another situation of politics as usual at the hospital. I don't think we need any more of those patronage jobs up there."

He said that Hospital Director Anthony DeFalco told him the title of Capavella's job is "deputy comptroller for communications."

"A comptroller is a financial man," said McCauley. "Capavella is not a financial man. There is no position up there for a public relations man. The Council cut that out a year ago."

"It's just a continuation of what the Mayor has been doing since he's come into office. He's filling the hospital with political appointments, ignoring the Board of Managers and Mr. DeFalco."

"Now he tells us we need a public relations man because admissions are dropping off. If he'd lay off the politics maybe people would have more confidence in the hospital and we wouldn't need a PR man."

Two other councillors, Joanne Condon, who is chairman of the Council's Hospital Committee, and Stephen J. McGrath, also were critics of the Capavella appointment.

"Most certainly, it's a political appointment," said Condon. "It's an appointment from the Mayor's office. There appears to have been no advertisement for the job and no outreach for other people."

"But most importantly, there appears to be no job."

"The job requires an ordinance, unless there is an ordinance that I'm not aware of. It also requires a financial order, which would go through the Council. I'm not aware of that either."

"To the best of my knowledge there is no public relations position within the budget, no funding available for such a position and no request was made this year."

"That does not mean I don't think it (the PR post) is a necessity at the hospital. But there was no request; there's no funding; there's no position."

Condon called the disclosure of the appointment, coming so close on the heels of the blue ribbon commission's report, "positively incredible."

McGrath said he was not sure of the exact nature of Capavella's appointment "but if it's a public relations position, I'm not happy with that. The Council specifically deleted a job like that two years ago."

"I think it's unfortunate that the Mayor has done that in light of the Council's criticism of some of the hiring practices up there. It's an unfortunate way to do it, especially with a PR position."

Council President Leo J. Kelly noted that he was one of the minority that voted for the PR post two years ago.

"I still think we need it," he said, "but I don't know if that's the way to go about it."

Tobin, in turn, was critical of the councillors' criticism. He said he had not heard from Condon and McGrath, questioning him on the Capavella appointment.

"The last time I heard from Councillors Condon and McGrath they were asking me for something," he said. "If it bothers them maybe they'll contact me and I'll answer them."

Tobin included former Mayor, now City Councillor Joseph J. LaRaia in his criticism of McCauley, though LaRaia has not yet commented about the Capavella case.

"I expect criticism from those two," said the Mayor. "Isn't it ironic they question my appointments."

"Has anyone of my appointments brought shame and disgrace on the city of Quincy? Have any of my appointments been under investigation or indictment?"

"Why don't you ask Mr. McCauley why he didn't question Mr. LaRaia's appointments?"

"City Hospital has taken a bum rap because it makes sensational reading. Half the ding-a-lings who are criticizing the hospital don't have the faintest idea what the hell they're talking about."

"They talk about politics at the hospital. Quincy City Hospital has been a municipal hospital, mired in politics, since 1919. That's 11 years before I was born."

"There are stories around where mayors fired the hospital board of managers, fired directors, put their own sons up there. I didn't do any of this."

Tobin quoted Condon as asking why he did not go to the Council to create a public relations job at the hospital for Capavella.

"I went to the Council," he said. "The Council didn't want to put a public relations job there."

"But the medical staff at the hospital believes it's necessary. So I did it. It's as simple as that. I did it."

"I'm not going to get bogged down in bureaucratic red tape when something has to be done in this city."

Biggest Turnout In 43 Years

Record 700 Boats Expected For QBRW

By TOM SULLIVAN

Quincy Bay Race Week President Dave Maloney of Town River Yacht Club feels this week's 43rd edition of Race Week which opened Wednesday and continues through Sunday will be the biggest in its history.

"I feel we will have 300 boats on the inside line and 400 on the outside line, more than ever before," Maloney said. "Interest in sailboating is up at every club and I think we will see more boats in nearly every class.

"Interest in the ocean racing is particularly high. This year for the first time ocean racing will be spread over two days, Saturday and Sunday, at 10 in the morning off Hangman's Island.

"I just hope the weather man is kind to us. Last year we had outstanding competition, but two days of racing had to be cancelled due to the elements. We are hoping for a full schedule this year."

Maloney also expects more boats to appear in the popular Marine Parade on Sunday.

Boys, girls, men and women of all ages will be among the competitors.

Racing is being held each day from one of the participating clubs.

Gala Night will be held Friday night at Quincy Yacht Club with Maloney and Quincy YC Commodore Bill McKeon as hosts.

Rendezvous Night will be held Saturday at Town River with Maloney and Swan again hosts.

The colorful Marine Parade will be held Sunday with boats rendezvousing between Town River and Wessagussett Yacht Clubs at noon.

Trophy Night will be held Sept. 14 at Town River Y.C. with all winners and guests invited.

43 Years Of Tradition

Quincy Bay Race Week is marked by 43 years of tradition and yachtsmen have a lot to live up to in this week's racing.

QBRW has been an outstanding success since it was established in 1938 by the Quincy, Wollaston and Squantum Yacht Clubs, which formed the association.

In the years that followed, Town River and Wessagussett joined up to make the event an area success.

Six years ago Braintree and Metropolitan clubs were added to the association, completing the seven-club association.

GELCOAT-IMRON-AWLGRIP Finishes

Ever wonder why so many boats in the average marina are white? Probably not... if you've noticed what happens to a colored vessel after a couple of years on the water! Sun and sea take a heavy toll on the average marine finish. That's why so many leading boat yards, marinas and manufacturers are discovering AWLGRIP... in its equally brilliant colors. No need for painting. AWLGRIP has been tested and proved over a number of years on all types of boat surfaces. In fact, the aluminum America's Cup victor, Courageous and the wooden defending champion Intrepid both chose AWLGRIP for their above-waterline finish. Glass Retention - Even the most hot and humid climates... combined with the weathering force of salt spray... can't diminish the luster of AWLGRIP.

retains its gloss for years to come. Just as its cousin ALUMGRIP is the finish of most corporate jets and airlines, AWLGRIP is becoming the preferred coating of the discriminating yacht owner. Corrosion Resistance - Salt water and salt spray simply don't face AWLGRIP. Neither does the caustic quality of urine, heat and humidity. Gasoline and chemical spills, likewise, don't harm a sparkling AWLGRIP finish. Maintenance - AWLGRIP's hard, non-porous surface won't harbor fungus, mildew or mold. Even dirt and grime can not hold on to AWLGRIP's sleek finish. Simply wash with soap and water... or use an industrial cleaner if desired, with no fear of harming the coating.

Ocean Racing Saturday, Sunday Off Hangman's Island

One of the most popular features of Race Week each year is the ocean racing, which stimulates continued interest in the cruising type of sailboat.

Interest has so increased in this type of racing that, for the first time, it is being spread over two days. Saturday's and Sunday's racing will begin at 10 a.m. off Hangman's Island.

The City of Boston Bermuda Cup, a beautiful and historic punch bowl, has been in the custody of the Quincy Yacht Club for 50 years. It was presented by the City of Boston around 1905 for a yacht race from Boston to Bermuda. This race was never held and in 1911 the city again put the cup up for an ocean race to be held Labor Day 1911 to become the permanent possession of the winner. That race was won by Hollis Burgess, a Quincy Y.C. member, in his sloop Marie L.

Burgess generously made the Quincy Y.C. trustee of the cup which was to be placed in annual competition as a perpetual trophy. In 1968 the QYC presented the trophy to the QBRWA for Race Week competition. This beautiful and valuable trophy is to be presented to the annual winner to be held by him until the succeeding Race Week.

The winner is to be presented a suitably engraved trophy for his permanent possession.

Last year's winner was A. Sullivan.

Last Year's Outside Winners

Last year's Race Week outside line winners:

(Atlantic Photo Service)

The Frank E. Remick Trophy was presented in 1959 to the QBRWA by Frank S. Remick of Quincy to stimulate interest in competition between cruising-type sailboats.

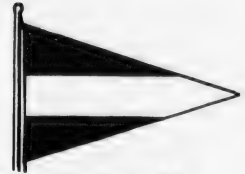

Last year's winner was R. Sunberg.

The Harry Warner Memorial Trophy race is for cruising type trimarans. The trophy was presented to the QBRWA in 1968 by the Warner family and the Town River Yacht Club as a perpetual trophy. It is to be annually engraved and is to be held by the winner until Race

Week of the following year when it is to be returned to the association.

Last year's winner was Dr. Merrill.

Sailors Competing For Coveted Trophies

Hundreds of sailors -- men, women, boys and girls -- are competing for a number of handsome and coveted trophies this week during the 43rd edition of Quincy Bay Race Week.

The Capt. James Berwick Finlay Memorial Trophy was presented to the Quincy Yacht Club in 1948 by Albert W. Finlay, his father, for competition during Race Week.

This handsome trophy is presented in loving memory of a son who, during his lifetime, did much to advance the sport of yachting on Massachusetts Bay, to the yacht or yachtsman considered to have performed some single act of sportsmanship during Race Week.

It is to be suitably engraved annually and will remain in the custody of the Quincy Yacht Club. A suitably engraved keeper trophy will be awarded to the winner for his permanent possession.

Last year's winner was Don Mathewson.

The Fred Hunt Memorial Trophy is a perpetual award presented since 1966 by the Patriot Ledger in memory of the late yachting editor who served more than three decades.

This trophy is awarded annually to a person who has demonstrated a high degree of sportsmanship and a willingness to help others in the advancement of the yacht racing sport and who has contributed to the success of Race Week. It is to be held until the succeeding Race Week by the home club of the winner who is to be awarded a suitable keeper trophy for his permanent possession.

Last year's winner was Albert Woodman.

The Commodore Isadore Bromfield Trophy was presented four years ago to the QBRWA by the Commonwealth National Bank of Boston. It is awarded annually to the Race Week winner according to the deed of gift. The winner is to be presented a suitably engraved trophy for his permanent possession.

Last year's winner was Dick Callahan.

The 1300 Trophy has been presented each year since 1960 to the QBRWA by Radio Station WJDA to demonstrate its great and cooperative interest in Race Week and to aid in the stimulation of racing interest among the junior classes.

This beautiful trophy is awarded annually to the winning skipper in the Turnabout Class and becomes his permanent possession.

The winner last year was Holly Bumpus.

The Reynolds Memorial Trophy is a perpetual trophy presented to the QBRWA in 1966 by the family of John Reynolds, an ardent supporter of and skipper in the Day Sailor Class until his untimely death in 1965.

This trophy is awarded to the Race Week winner in the Day Sailor Class and is to be held by him until Race Week of the following year when it is to be returned to the association.

A suitably engraved keeper trophy is to be presented to the winner for his permanent possession.

Last year's winner was Alex Randall.

METROPOLITAN YC officers, Rear Commodore Bert Davidson, Vice Commodore Joe Gordon, Commodore Bernie Kritzman and Fleet Capt. Steve Burger.

King May Present Governor's Cup

Last year Quincy Bay Race Week experienced a "first" when Gov. Edward King awarded the Governor's Cup.

King hopes to be able to present the award personally again this year, although at press time he was unable to make a firm commitment.

"The governor said he enjoyed making the presentation last year and would like to be able to do it again, but he had to check his schedule," said Robert Hutcheon, vice president of the Race Week Association.

The cup will be awarded to the winner of a race which has not yet been chosen. The race week committee will meet Saturday morning to choose a race to be so honored.

The presentation will be made Saturday at 5 p.m. at Squantum Yacht Club.

Successful Season

Mariners 3rd In Stan Musial Championships

The Quincy Bay Mariners completed a successful season last week by finishing third in the state Stan Musial League championships.

The Mariners, one of four South Coastal Baseball League teams selected for the double elimination state tournament, had finished the league season with a 16-9 record and were selected, along with league champion Weymouth, which won the state championship for the second year in a row: Bourne and Braintree.

Quincy won its first three tournament games, then was eliminated when it dropped its next two.

The Mariners started off by winning both ends of a double-header at Holy Cross College.

They started off with a 7-5 victory over Nashua, N.H., as Vinny Todd went the route and pitched a strong eight innings, tying in the ninth when Nashua scored two runs.

Rightfielder Joe Seckler was the hero for the Mariners, doubling home two runners in a three-run eighth inning, then throwing a perfect strike to Todd Mills, nabbing Woody Colton trying to stretch a single into a double. The bases were loaded at the time, preventing a big ninth inning for Nashua.

Paul Vespaziani had three hits for the Mariners and Player-manager Bob Benn and Fran Donovan had two hits each.

Quincy easily won the second game, 9-3, over South County of Webster, as Ron Donovan pitched a strong five-hitter and received fine support from his mates, who pulled off three double plays.

Bob Kallstrom and Benn hit tremendous home runs, Bob Mayor had two doubles and Vespaziani had two singles.

Ron and Fran Donovan are the sons of Shorly Donovan, a standout in the old South Shore League.

The Mariners returned to Adams Field where they defeated Watertown of the Bay State League, 10-6, with Ron Peterson, who pitched for Whitman of the South Coastal League, the winning pitcher.

The league tournament qualifiers were allowed to fill out their rosters with players from the league teams which didn't qualify.

Peterson had only one bad inning, a five-run fifth, and struck out nine.

Quincy had its hitting shoes on as Vespaziani, Mike McCormack, Mills, Mayo and Fran Donovan had two hits each. Benn hit his second home run of the tournament, a vicious blast over the fence.

Midnight arrived for the Cinderella Mariners as state champion Weymouth scored an easy 7-0 victory at Adams Field, with Jim Doherty blanking Quincy despite giving up 10 hits. He struck out 14.

Weymouth, led by player-manager Frank Niles, made some of the finest defensive plays seen in these parts in many years.

Kallstrom, Mills, Vespaziani and Fran Donovan had two hits each for the Mariners.

Quincy was eliminated Saturday when Watertown avenged its earlier defeat and easily won, 8-0, at Waltham. Ron Donovan was the losing pitcher.

In the Watertown fourth two errors and a walk by Donovan filled the bases and Tom Queno belted a grand slam homer over the fence in left.

Jeff Pinkus, who pitched for Hingham during the season, pitched fine relief ball for the Mariners.

Vespaziani had three hits and Fran Donovan two for Quincy.

"This was a fine season for us, although pretty frustrating," Benn said. "We never had a sponsor and the boys all chipped in out of their own pockets just to play ball. They are a real dedicated bunch of kids. Also, we were hampered by not being able to get Adams Field for several home games and were unable to play four scheduled games.

"I'm very happy we made the tournament, as the boys certainly deserved it. And they made a tremendous showing by winning three games in a row."

Police Rally To Edge Braintree, 13-12

The Quincy Police softball team scored four runs in the last inning to edge Braintree, 13-12, Sunday in an Eastern Mass. League game.

The win moved Quincy into a fourth place tie with the State Police. Quincy and the State Police play Sunday in the season's finale for each team. The winner qualified for the playoffs along with Wellesley, Weston and Braintree.

The winner of the playoffs will represent Eastern Mass. in the state finals against the Western champion and the winner of that series will seek the New England title in Concord, N.H.

The victory over Braintree was highlighted by John Jazzma's triple with the bases loaded in the winning seventh inning rally.

Quincy started fast with six runs in the first inning with Ronald O'Donnell driving in two runs with a double and Buddy Moon driving in two with a single. Braintree came back to tie the score with three runs in the second and three in the fifth.

Braintree took the lead with three runs in the sixth but Quincy battled back.

Manager Chico Caporale had special praise for Gerald Quency, who has played flawless ball in the field for the last month while contributing some timely hits.

SPORTS FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

Brought To You By ROBERT COLMAN

One of the strangest things that ever happened in a baseball league happened in the Class A Florida State League in 1973. In mid-season that year, nobody knew who was in first place or what the standings were. The league's record-keeping got confused, and on one day in July, 5 different Florida newspapers carried 5 different sets of standings, and each newspaper had a different team in first place. After a league meeting, they finally got it straightened out.

Here's an incredible fact. In the 1904 Olympics, the United States won EVERY gold medal in ALL the track and field, boxing, wrestling, cycling, gymnastics and rowing events.

What are the 10 greatest golf courses in the U.S.? According to a recently published list, one group of experts chose, in alphabetical order, Augusta National, Ga. Cypress Point, Cal. Merion (East Course), Pa. Oakmont, Pa. Olympic (Lake Course), Cal. Pebble Beach, Cal. Pine Valley, N.J. Seminole, Fla. Southern Hills, Okla. Winged Foot (West Course), N.Y.

I bet you didn't know that Colman's Summer Sale is now going on. Save up to 50% OFF on summer sport items and summer sports wear. Come in now and save. You'll find what you need and save up to 50% now.

WEEK OF AUGUST 14.

AQUARIUS—January 21-February 19

Little too cautious this week, you could miss out on exciting social opportunity. Family members surprisingly helpful—and not a string attached.

PISCES—February 20-March 20

Try hard not to hold back feelings of love. Strangers and friends come for advice. Education, travel favored through weekend—and there's a romantic angle featured here, too.

ARIES—March 21-April 20

Wonderful week for hosting small parties or paying surprise visits to out-of-town loved one. Affections are at very sweetest on weekend. Recent financial setback reversed by Tuesday.

TAURUS—April 21-May 22

Dash of adventure, splash of color; this could be one of summer's most exciting weeks. Think twice before accepting any ego-flattering offer. Watch out for irresponsible borrowers Friday-Sunday.

GEMINI—May 23-June 21

Delightful travel favored all week, and a friendship may be renewed by Tuesday. Romantic spirits sag briefly—key is to hold onto sense of humor. More effort can turn job into success story.

CANCER—June 22-July 22

Matters blocked since May begin to move again. At same time, you're in mood to mingle—but may have to decline social invitations. Excellent week for making overdue resolutions.

LEO—July 23-August 22

You can count on loved ones to be supportive—though in a quiet way. Home improvement project could grind to halt on weekend. Work efforts may not be appreciated—but don't jump to conclusions.

VIRGO—August 23-September 22

Week is highlighted by breakthrough in communications problem. You can get in touch with that disappearing partner. Surprise guests could tire you on weekend—perhaps with laughter.

LIBRA—September 23-October 22

Week finds you restless, but if you manage to concentrate you can make financial coup. You're in mood to get away, but companion of your dreams may not be available just now.

SCORPIO—October 23-November 21

Express upbeat mood through decor or style of dress. Romance blooms, recreational fun is accented. The one disappointment relates to finance; firmer stand is needed concerning outstanding debt.

SAGITTARIUS—November 22-December 22

Loved one may be aloof, but it's wise not to press. Travel favored, despite minor delays, amusing complications. Good week for introspection—achieving new insights into characters of loved ones.

CAPRICORN—December 23-January 30

You seem to have hand in everyone's work—bringing generally good results—whether volunteering or not. Anything said off record can be taken seriously. Put imagination into business moves.

BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK

Dramatic, affectionate, self-assured, extravagant, optimistic, beauty conscious, proud, outspoken. You can reach major goal by November—provided you emphasize your strengths and don't brush off weaknesses.

BORN THIS WEEK

August 14th, actress Susan St. James; 15th, cookbook writer Julia Child; 16th, actor Robert Culp; 17th, actress Mae West; 18th, actor Robert Redford; 19th, actress Jill St. John; 20th, actor Van Johnson.

RECREATION ROUNDUP

News from the Quincy Recreation Department's Ryan Boat-house and the Lincoln Hancock Pool:

Ryan Boathouse - This season more than 800 children and adults have registered for lessons in rowing, sailing and canoeing at the William F. Ryan boating and sailing facility at Black's Creek.

In the final two weeks of the season a close competition is being held to determine the overall sailing champion for this year's program. Participants in two Tuesday and Thursday afternoon racing class have been honing their skills all summer long in preparation for the big final series. Among the strongest contenders for the championship trophy are: Cindy Olsen, Amy and Susan McGrail, George Dolbec, Greg McKinnon, George Wilson, Garth Petracca, Dan McCarthy, John Toland and Chris Roberts.

On Tuesday, Aug. 19, regular classes will be suspended to allow for the annual Nautical Day celebration. Program participants and their parents are invited to join in the festivities from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. There will be special rowing, sailing and canoeing events for all ages and a cookout at 12 noon. Red Cross certificates will be awarded to those who have completed the course of instruction this season.

On Tuesday evening Aug. 19, a Moonlight Sail will be conducted at Black's Creek from 6 to 10 p.m. for adult program participants. There will be a cookout at six to be followed by an adult sailing race. Last year's menu included: Steamers, Corn on the cob, Hot Dogs, Hamburgers and a variety of exotic desserts. We hope to have an equally appealing feast for this year's finale.

The boathouse staff would like to thank all of those who have made this year's program a success and we hope to see all of you on Nautical Day.

Lincoln-Hancock Pool - Non-swimmers Kerri and Jennifer McDonough, Kim Perry, Evan Styles, Billy Lane, Angela Scalisi, Jason Grotorian, Dudson McGonagle, Jason D'Angelo, Laura Sahadini and Lisa Sullivan can all do a large number of bobs without stopping. From looking at Annette Pascarelli, Marty Joyce, Jennifer Bartoloni, Jimmy Delaney, Karen Beguerie, Jimmy Costello, Brian Gitzpatrick, and Marie Cuomo they love to spend time under the water (5 to 30 seconds). Skilled rhythmic breathers are Michelle Mackey, Kerrie Wessling, Kelly Sartre, Danny O'Shea, Gervin Shaw, Barbie Jones, Lisa D'Afrigo and Brian and Michael Wood.

Beginners - John Driscoll, Gloria Battistone, Julie Jankord, Angela Ellington, Kristen Manzer, Amy Osgood, Steven and Michael Morad, Roberta Foley and Scott Bartoloni are swimming the length of the pool with little or no help. The more skilled jumpers are Joanne Shea, Irene Lutti, Jennifer Horigan, Karen Schurman, Kerry Mitchell and Karen and Susan Anderson. Our underwater lovers are Joey Shea, Myhannah Ha, Tina and Joey Fasano, Ellen Savage, Michelle Labadie, Jose Figueroa and Sean Conroy.

Advanced Beginners and Inter-mediates - Advanced Beginners had a practice test and only two people passed everything. They are Dana Guilfooy and Neal Plant. With practice Nicole Plant, Jon Belmont, Sandi McNiff, Lisa Thompson, Robin Guilfooy, Karen Eaton, Kathleen Egan and Jim Munroe will all be able to pass with ease. Intermediates also had a practice test. Marybeth Mattie, Deanna and Billy Ferrara and Lisa Rodophele were the only four that passed everything.

Non-swimmers & Beginners - First-rate kickers include Robyn Mayo, Kevin Cross, Tara Donovan, Joey Foy and Kevin Mantville. Most of these young swimmers can make it to the other end without any help from their instructor. When they get down to the deep end, the diving board veterans, Julie Marinilly, Paul Murphy, Brian Mantvill, Andy Forde and Julie Tangney climb up and show off to the crowd of anxious onlookers that there is really nothing to be afraid of. When that is done, it is time to go back to the shallow end. This can be accomplished by either doing the crawl stroke or finning on their back. After all this they still have time to see Erin McNeil, Paul McDonnell, Martin McGowan, Karen Tangney and Renee Barsanti jump off the racing blocks into the cool water.

Advanced Beginners - Deanna Crespi, Denise Carey, Chris Roche and Joe Matterazzo all have great crawl strokes while the best of the elementary back-strokers Ronnie Luisi, Jonathan Stein and Dawn Gardiner compete for the top spot. The advanced beginners do more than practice their strokes, they all learn safety in the water and some basic rescue methods. Jennifer Shores, Jimmy Ferrara, Susan Welliver and William Connelly have all learned how to keep themselves from drowning by survival floating. John and Mark Fahey used their surface dives to get to the bottom of the deep end to pick up hockey pucks while Maria Styles and Ann Marie DiPietro managed to pick them up in five feet of water.

Intermediates - The swimmers begin each class by doing 20 laps of the pool to practice their strokes. A few of the best crawl strokeers are John Keohane, Matthew Donovan and Patty Feeney. The second stroke done in their warm up is the elementary backstroke. This is where Pamela Conrage, Kristin Keohane, Seila Healy and Derek Borek excel. Besides swimming laps, the intermediates learned some skills that will enable them to further in swimming. They learn rescue safety skills, along with diving, survival floating and how to do turns. This class has caught on relatively quickly to all the new skills introduced to them so far.

All Classes - Non-swimmers have started to swim to the deep end of the pool. Some of those that can swim with a kickboard are Mike Kelly, Bobby Flaherty, Vishnu Reddy, John and Anthony Viapiano, Bonnie DiBona, Kathie, Carol, Beth, Patricia and Debra Callahan. Beginners have learned to jump off the diving board. Steve Conroy, Marianne Cormack, Dennis Keohane, Steve Delaney, Nicole Cibotti, John D'Angelo, Christopher Robbins, Mary Elizabeth Nee, Jeff D'Angelo and John Porcaro have all taken the big jump off the board. Advanced beginners John and Eric Lutti, Stella Salimbis, Judy Rogers and Patricia Thornton can dive and swim underwater. The Intermediates must, among other things learn two new strokes. Kevin Logue, Beth and Cheryl Manning, Denise Attardo, Sandra Wallace, Tammy Denelsback and Chris Foy have all learned the breast-stroke and sidestroke. The swimmers must improve everything they have learned and try to perfect it. Some of the kids becoming great swimmers are Cathy and John Ferrara, Linda Sayers, Michael Watt, Marie-Elena Dawson, Denise Hamel and John and Beth Pacino.

All Classes - Non-swimmers have shown a great deal of enthusiasm as they strive to become beginners. A few of those that mastered their superman floats are: Andrew Canniff, Jonathan Columbus and Brian Swanton. The beginners have shown a real desire to swim from one end of the pool to the other. A few who are beginning to do the crawl well are: Roy Cochrane, Konstantine Rigos, Lisa Connelly, Lori Sartre, Susan Luizza, Stephanie Tobin, Diane Young and Courtney Tierney. Rachel, Linda and Laura D'Amore, Christine Donovan and Kathy Feeney are doing well with their elementary backstroke. Larry Beguire and Christine and Angela Venezia are doing the crawl stroke well.

Constitution Celebration

Downtown Quincy, Wollaston, N. Quincy Plan Special Events

Mayor Arthur Tobin announces that the downtown Quincy,

Wollaston and North Quincy Business Districts have scheduled a variety of activities for the City's Constitution Celebration of September 5-7.

The Quincy Center Business and Professional Association is scheduling a Continental Breakfast for Saturday morning, Sept. 6, in co-operation with the Quincy Kiwanis, Lions and Rotary Clubs. Doughnuts, coffee and juice will be available to shoppers in the downtown area and served and prepared by the service clubs at a reduced rate.

Hancock St., from Granite St. to School St. will be closed to traffic Saturday, Sept. 6 and a sidewalk sale will be held.

In Wollaston, the theme will be "Bring your skates and disco roller skate on Beale St." There will be a pie eating contest, performances by Ziggy the Clown, pony rides, a band, a "Most Outrageous Disco Roller Skating Costume Contest" and a twenty-five cent movie at the Wollaston Theatre. The Wollaston Business District activities begin at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 6.

In North Quincy there will be a craft fair/sidewalk sale Friday and Saturday, Sept. 5-6. There will be free ice cream and lollipops for children, compliments of the North Quincy merchants.

On-street parking will be prohibited on Billings Rd. from Hancock St. to Pierce St. The North Quincy merchants will award 100 gallons of home heating oil to a shopper who fills out a coupon during the event. The craft fair/sidewalk sale is being organized by the North Quincy Local Development Corporation.

Mayor Tobin said: "The spirit of cooperation between the business and banking community and the City has been excellent. Each business district is sponsoring some kind of an activity in cooperation with the Constitution Celebration Committee, chaired by former Mayor and Senator, James R. McIntyre. They have made contributions to pay for the many activities, and have supported it all along."

The three-day celebration includes an Open House at the Dorothy Quincy Homestead, a dedication of Constitution Monument, concerts by the 215th Army Band, the Quincy Symphony Orchestra and the U.S. Navy Long Island Sound Band, a skydiving show, an art display, ecumenical services at the First Parish and Sacred Heart Churches, the City of Presidents Marathon and a bonfire.

Navy Board To Hear Discharges

A Traveling Board from the Navy Discharge Review Board will be in Quincy next month (September) to conduct hearings for some 50 former sailors and marines who wish to appeal less than honorable discharges.

The hearings will be held from Sept. 8 to 19 in the Naval Reserve Center, 85 Sea St., Quincy, for those individuals who have already applied for a review and have gone through the proper procedure.

The Traveling Board, which does not initiate applications for review, will visit Quincy again when there are sufficient applicants and when there are Navy funds and manpower available.

'Afraid To Go Out At Night'

Snug Harbor Seniors 'Fed Up' With Youth Harassment

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Senior citizen residents of Snug Harbor Court, Germantown, are "fed up" with youth harassment and an alleged lack of help from the Housing Authority.

"They (the QHA) don't do anything for us - nothing," said Mrs. Gertrude Murphy, president of the Snug Harbor Court Association.

Mrs. Murphy, 70, told a tale of vandalism, harassment and abuse.

"People here don't go out at night - they're even afraid to come home after dark."

"The kids throw beer bottles all over the place. One boy got a pellet gun and walked along shooting out the windows. The older boys get on top of the roof and 'do the disco'."

Residents who complain about the noise are frequently the targets of verbal and, occasionally physical, abuse, she said.

"We don't get any help, any how."

"I have to disagree with Mrs. Murphy," said QHA Administrator Clement O'Brien. "The authority has done a lot for her."

"We abhor the abuse and harassment of our senior citizen residents. But the Housing Authority does not have police powers. We cannot be there 24 hours a day and we don't have the funding for a security force."

"This isn't a housing problem - it's a city problem," added Larry Zusman, director of the Germantown Service Center.

"If the Housing Authority can't provide security, then the city's got to get a patrolman down here," said Zusman, who's been aiding the Snug Harbor residents group in its campaign for help.

A public hearing on the Snug

Harbor Court safety problems has been scheduled for 7 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 28 at St. Boniface Church Hall, Zusman said. Among those invited are Mayor Arthur Tobin, Police Chief Francis Finn, O'Brien, QHA Chairman Rev. William McCarthy, Councillor Leo Kelly, Rep. Thomas Brownell and Sen. Paul Harold.

The group's two major requests, Mrs. Murphy said, are for a full-time security guard and new locks for the 45-unit complex.

"We really need a night watchman down here," she said. "Other places in the city have one, some have two."

The QHA last fall arranged CETA funding for a watchman, who later quit, said O'Brien.

"Security is very expensive and

Rev. Corea To Replace Ryan On Hospital Board

DENNIS F. RYAN

The Rev. Dr. Peter V. Corea, 56, minister of Houghs Neck Congregational Church, has been named to the City Hospital Board of Managers to fill out the term of Quincy District Court Clerk Dennis F. Ryan, who resigned.

"Dr. Corea is a man who likes to bring peace and tranquility," said Mayor Arthur H. Tobin in making the appointment. "I think we need that at the Hospital at this time in order to get the various factions working together."

Dr. Corea was at the center of a storm four years ago, however, when then-Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia refused to reappoint him to another five year term on the Quincy Housing Authority, a post he had held for 10 years.

A native of Boston, Dr. Corea came to Houghs Neck from Woburn 34 years ago. He has served on a number of ad hoc committees in Quincy, most of them involved with some type of community planning and urban renewal.

Tobin announced Ryan's resignation "for personal reasons" Tuesday. The 69-year-old Ryan, who has been clerk of the Quincy District Court since 1951, has been in ill health recently.

The Mayor said Ryan resigned from the Hospital Board in a letter that was hand-delivered on Monday.

"He told me that he could not put in the time and energy required of him on the board," said Tobin, "and with the problems at the hospital he felt it would be in the best interests of the city to give me the opportunity to appoint a replacement."

"Denny is a very active, outspoken and involved person. He told me that's the way he operates; he has to be involved or he doesn't want to be on the board. That's his way."

"I asked him to reconsider and he said, 'No, this is the way I want

Quincy MBTA Stations May Get TV Security

The MBTA is installing closed circuit television for security in its South Braintree station and the Quincy stations may have it too on an experimental basis if a federal grant goes through.

The $153,000 Security Surveillance Television System, 80 per cent federally funded, is part of the original plan for the Braintree station. It will be monitored by Braintree police.

MBTA Spokeswoman Mila Dixon said the MBTA applied Aug. 8 for a $1.9 million demonstration grant from the Urban Mass Transit Administration for a transit crime impact project.

She said $1.8 million will go to continue the MBTA's Operation Rainbow, a patrol of detectives and decoys on the transit lines, while the remainder will go to formulate a transit security master plan.

The master plan, she said, will include a demonstration TV system, the equipment for which will be supplied by the grant and local police will act as monitors. Quincy would be included in the test.

"UMTA is very enthusiastic about this," said Mrs. Dixon. "We should know if we have the grant soon after the start of the new federal fiscal year Oct. 1."

FOUR WERE INJURED in a three-car pileup Friday about 7:20 p.m. at Quincy Ave. and Richard St. Treated and released at Quincy City Hospital were Karen Weitzman, 22, of Braintree, who was driving the AMC Hatchback at right; Laura Weitzman, 56, of Braintree and Rose Sakovitz, 85, of Malden, passengers in the AMC; and Richard Costley, Jr., 25, of 117 Federal Ave., South Quincy, driver of the Volkswagen at left. Kathleen Gaidis of 83 Water St., South Quincy, driver of the third car, was not injured. Police blamed the accident on sunlight which blinded the drivers of the three cars.

Not Interviewed By Commission Hospital Housekeepers Protest 'Poor Maintenance' Report

Housekeepers at City Hospital have protested through their union a charge by the City Council's Blue Ribbon Hospital Commission that they are not maintaining the hospital properly.

"The action of the Blue Ribbon Commission could be interpreted as malicious interference with the obligation of the contract of employment," warned union attorney James A. Shannon.

A protest petition signed by 28 members of the Housekeeping Department noted that the Hospital "just passed two inspections in three weeks and received a letter of commendation."

The report of the Blue Ribbon Commission, issued three weeks ago, said:

"Commission members also noticed poor maintenance, cleaning and housekeeping and questions how vigorously the Hospital pursues an established, supervised cleaning and repair schedule, despite the fact that there appeared to be a most adequate staff on hand for those purposes."

Shannon said in letters to each of the nine members of the city Council and Mayor Tobin that none of the housekeepers or their union officials were interviewed by members of the Commission.

"The fundamental right of confrontation has been ignored by this Commission in that the representative body of the employees did not have an opportunity to admit or deny any allegations which would lead the commission to the conclusion it reached," he said.

"In this society, one does not summarily criticize to such an extent that the person's livelihood is affected without giving a fair opportunity to respond and defend one's right to make a living through honest employment."

The petition also noted that the Commission did not interview any member of the Housekeeping Department and added:

"We are proud of our hospital. We not only wash floors, beds, walls, as well as other related duties, we also care for our patients beyond our job description. We love our patients and we want our Quincy City Hospital to be the best. We think we are the best."

Bids Trigger Controversy

Hearing Sept. 3 For Ambulance Service Bidders

Five bidders on a contract to serve Quincy for the first time with a private ambulance are being asked back to explain their bids Wednesday, Sept. 3, as the city moves to stem a growing controversy.

Two of the five bidders complained that their bids were lower than that of Bay State Ambulance which was recommended for the contract by a special advisory committee to the mayor on ambulance service.

Mayor Tobin said the two bidders, Metro Emergency Medical Systems and Brewster Ambulance Service, apparently thought they would have a chance to elaborate on their bids before the recommendation was made.

"We thought the best thing to do was bring them all back in and find out who can do what," said Tobin. "No damage has been done so far because that was only a recommendation, not an award."

"Evidently some of those people felt they should have gotten hearings before we made the recommendation," said City Councillor Francis X. McCauley, a member of the advisory committee.

"I don't know where that idea came from. The contract went out on bid properly. We reviewed the bids and settled on Bay State as being the bidder we thought was most responsive."

McCauley said the committee has set up a meeting at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, Sept. 3, in the City Solicitor's conference room at City Hall to hear the bidders' elaborations.

Meanwhile, City Councillor Stephen J. McGrath said he is considering a hearing by his Public Safety Committee to explore the whole idea of putting the city's ambulance service out to private bid.

Right now, primary ambulance service in Quincy is provided by police picking up the expense. Under private contract, the patient would be billed, mostly through third party insurance.

"My basic question," said McGrath, "is should we contract it out? It seems to me that the police do a fine job with it as it is. I'd like to see how they come to the conclusion that it is beneficial to contract it out at all.

"I think people feel better seeing a policeman pop out of the ambulance. Many ambulance calls involve police emergencies as well. I think the police pride themselves in how quickly they respond."

"In a city like ours, with three peninsulas, you have to have a response time of about five minutes minimum. The police can do that. Unless the money difference is excessive, I question why change it."

When he announced the committee's conclusions last week, Tobin said that use of the police ambulance cost the city $250,000 a year while Bay State's bid to provide emergency service was $56,000.

"A quarter of a million dollars is a steep amount of money for the taxpayers to bear," said McGrath. "I don't know why we can't do the billing ourselves in order to recoup the cost."

"I don't think people will object to the billing if it's explained to them. I understand that 85 per cent of the people carry some kind of health insurance. Some arrangement could be made for the people who don't."

The advisory committee's report, written by Police Chief Francis X. Finn, the chairman, said:

"After an exhaustive study by myself and the other members of the committee it was determined that the citizens of Quincy would best be served by contracting the emergency ambulance service to a private contractor."

"The first two ambulance calls would be handled by the private contractor and the third call would be handled by the police department, which will maintain two ambulances for back-up service."

"The private contractor will meet the standards of the chief of the Emergency Medical Services at the Quincy City Hospital and will operate under his authority."

Project Impact

22 Youngsters, Parents Prepare For Kindergarten

Twenty-two children and their parents took part in this year's Project Impact, a Quincy Public Schools summer program preparing pre-school kids for kindergarten.

While the children are taking part in activities similar to those they'll experience in kindergarten, their parents are able to discuss issues like child development, how children learn and how to make that first year of school go smoother.

'Impact', now in its fifth year, is held at the Lincoln

Hancock School. Parent and children "graduates" of the program took part in a recent "commencement ceremony" at the school.

John Quincy Adams Birthplace Gets New Look

One of the "little red cottages" on Franklin St. is still little, but no longer red.

The John Quincy Adams birthplace was painted "stone" - a grayish yellow - this week. The adjacent John Adams birthplace will, in turn, be painted white by mid-September, according to Carole Perrault of the National Park Service.

Research has indicated that those were the colors of the two historic sites during the Adams' lifetimes, according to Miss Perrault. However, both of the little farmhouses have been red for as long as anyone can remember.

Both houses are also receiving a set of white cedar, hand-planed roof shingles. The John Quincy Adams birthplace shingles were installed in early August, the John Adams birthplace will probably receive new shingles next week said Miss Perrault.

Woodward Headmaster Says:

Young Women Must Clear Hurdle To Compete For Jobs

By FRANK MORTIMER

In a sermon titled "Earthlings Are Funny People", Rev. Robert L. Johnston discussed a major hurdle that young women must clear to compete successfully for jobs requiring technical skills.

Some girls grow up believing that "women do not have the brainpower" to excel in math related occupations. Rev. Johnston said Sunday in a guest sermon at Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

He said a mother will sometimes greet poor math grades with the remark, "I'm not surprised. I flunked math too, and so did my mother."

Rev. Johnston is headmaster of Woodward School for Girls and former assistant minister at the church. He and his family are members of the church.

Rev. Johnston was the third in the church's annual August guest speaker series.

Carol Johnston, his wife, played guitar and sang during the service. Their son, Peter, joined her in singing "The Wedding Banquet" and "Turn, Turn, Turn", folk songs based on scripture.

Rev. Johnston used the difficulties some girls have in math to show how people set false limits on themselves.

"A sixth grade girl doesn't mind competing with a sixth grade boy," he said. "At that age the girls score as well as the boys on standardized math tests."

"But something very strange happens in the upper grades. Many girls stop competing with boys. They begin to play a different role, and shy away from advanced math courses."

A result, said Rev. Johnston, is that senior women score an average of eight points less than senior men on SAT exams.

Dr. Carol Lee Griffin, Director of Pupil Personnel Services for the Quincy Public Schools, will be the speaker on Sunday, Aug. 24.

All Sunday services are at 9:30 a.m. and are followed by a coffee hour and get-together.

Alicia Coletti Attending Non-Traditional Vocational Conference

Alicia Coletti, Quincy Public Schools Title IX 622 Coordinator, is attending a national conference in St. Louis, Mo., for individuals working to increase recruitment of students into non-traditional vocational programs.

Sponsored by the National Center for Research in Vocational Education of Columbus, Ohio, the conference will focus on making students aware of the increased number of careers opening up for both sexes. Examples of non-traditional enrollments are boys in health career programs and girls in wood or electricity programs.

"I expect this conference to

provide an opportunity to develop strategies and to recruit students into non-traditional programs and to identify barriers discouraging students from doing so," said Mrs. Coletti.

"Quincy is fortunate to have an excellent vocational technical school and students of both sexes should be made aware of the programs which will prepare them for the expanding opportunities in the job market in non-traditional areas."

Mrs. Coletti's participation in the conference is funded under Project Inter-Action through the U.S. Department of Education.

Project Inter-Action, a collaboration of The Network, Inc., of North Andover and the Quincy Public Schools, seeks to develop a model program of educational equity to be duplicated by other school systems.

The Quincy School System is one of only five such systems in the U.S. chosen to participate in the Women's Educational Equity Act Program of the U.S. Department of Education.

Hearing Sept. 3 On Ambulance Service Bidders

"The committee members voted 8-1 in favor of a private contractor. The negative vote was of Henry P. Bradley, of the Police Department, representing the Quincy Police Betterment Association.

"Bay State Ambulance was the only bidder to meet the qualifications we set forth."

William Kelly, the city's purchasing agent who was also a member of the committee, said the bidders on the contract were asked to submit base bids and alternate bids.

Base bids cover emergency ambulance service alone while the alternate bids cover emergency service if the bidder were also given the exclusive right to transfer patients from hospital to hospital or nursing home.

Kelly listed these bids:
Bay State Ambulance Service: Base, $84,677; Alternate, $56,000.

Brewster Ambulance Service: Base, $72,100; Alternate, Cost plus; Second alternate, $44,572.

Metro Emergency Medical Systems: Base, No bid; Alternate, zero cost to the city. Kelly explained that Metro would charge the city nothing for emergency service, depending on billings alone for its income.

Emergency & Medical Management Inc.: Base, $84,000; Alternate, None.

Norfolk-Bristol County Ambulance Service: Base, $153,797; Alternate, $125,000.

Kelly said the Norfolk-Bristol bid was rejected because it was too high and Emergency & Medical failed to submit a list of communities it was currently serving, as required by the specifications.

Kelly said that Metro listed contracts with two communities.

"In both cases," he said, "they were not primary responders. In other words, they were operating as backup to some existing system. It was the feeling of the committee that was not the type of service the city wanted."

Brewster listed one community, Boston, where it had a contract for backup service.

"We didn't think they had the kind of expertise we wanted," said Kelly.

Bay State listed six communities with which it had contracts as primary responders, Malden, Stoneham, Halyoke, Medford, Weymouth and Auburn. It also serves as backup to the police ambulance in Quincy.

The Bay State bid also estimated that it would make 3,150 trips during the year and that about 24.5 per cent of them would be uncollectible.

Metro and Brewster each calculated 4,000 trips. Brewster figured 10-15 per cent uncollectible; Metro 10 per cent. Emergency & Medical Management estimated as much as 40 per cent uncollectible.

"Metro figured they'd collect 90 per cent of the billing they sent out," said Kelly, "whereas the others vary from 15 to 40 per cent. Who knows, maybe they can. But we're trying to look at these things and find out."

John Felci, training director at City Hospital and a member of the committee, said average rates charged to patients for ambulance trips vary according to classification.

Those with Blue Cross-Blue Shield are charged $40, welfare patients $44 and those with other forms of insurance $40. There is also a charge of $2 to $3 a mile.

Medicare patients are charged from $70 to $88 a trip, with no mileage allowance.

Jaywalking Turtle Really Got Around

By FRANK MORTIMER

Employees of Blue Hills Trailside Museum are not surprised when someone walks in with a cardboard box containing a lost or wounded animal.

It happens all the time, and the museum handles such cases with as little fanfare as you find in a hospital emergency room.

The creature is examined for wounds, a little red book is brought out, and the facts are duly recorded: Type of animal. Where found. Name and address of finder.

Nearly a thousand wild animals are brought in every year, according to Animal Care and Maintenance Supervisor Norman Smith.

Now and then a really unusual case is reported. Like the time a deer was captured near the Southern Artery in Quincy. Or when a family of great horned owls was found living in the bleachers at Fenway Park.

It was just such an occasion on a recent Saturday afternoon, when an Allston man and his wife came into the museum with a 10 lb. snapping turtle in a tall box.

Wait a minute, you say.

What's so special about a 10 lb. snapper? You can remember the time, last year, a Quincy youth won a bet by fetching a 30-pounder from the pond behind Central Junior High. He carried it to his friend's house in a shopping cart, and collected his money. Now there's a story.

The experts at Trailside Museum also took the moderate view. Until they heard just how Stephen Green, of Highgate St., Allston, came by his reptile.

"I was riding my bicycle along Commonwealth Ave. I saw the turtle crossing the street at the Brighton Ave. intersection. He almost got hit by a car. He climbed the curb, crossed a sidewalk, and stopped in a corner between two brick buildings."

A jaywalking turtle?

"I'm sure he found the turtle where he said he did," said Smith. "It probably came from the Charles River."

Then what business did the critter have on the corner of Comm. Ave. and Brighton Ave., over a mile from the muddy Charles?

"Searching for a place to lay its eggs," explained Smith. "Turtles are territorial animals. They don't just lay their eggs anywhere. They move along until they find a nice sandy spot. They cross the territory of other turtles. The biggest one stays."

Very interesting. But Steve and his wife, Bonnie, were still concerned. "Do you have a place for it here?" she asked.

"Afraid not. Take a look at our snapper before you leave."

The turtle in the concrete pond outside the lobby was twice as big. He looked like a chunk of moss-covered granite.

Museum officials agreed to hold the vagabond until he could be moved back to the Charles.

"Why didn't you bring it straight to the river?" asked Peter Joyce, a B.U. graduate student and part-time museum employee.

"I thought he'd rather live in the Blue Hills than the Charles," the man said without a blink.

A point for the locals.

Barbara Bush, Mamie Hit With Ed Spargo

George Bush, the Milton boy who wants to be vice president of the United States, may have a not-so-hidden campaign asset in his wife, Barbara.

Barbara Bush visited The Quincy Sun office almost a year ago during her husband's primary campaign for president and charmed the staff with her wit and frankness.

"I know that I'm not really up on some issues as I should be," she told us, "but I'm a terribly good housewife."

Now she's charmed Ed Spargo, a retired newspaperman who lives in Wollaston and devotes his time to pushing a health plan.

Spargo sent a copy of his health plan — six pages long — to Barbara Bush and quickly got back a "Dear Ed" note, partly typed and partly hand-written from "Barbara."

"I can't agree with you more on the need of everyone to take care of their health," she wrote. "It's so very important — and I loved reading your thoughts on it."

And she added in a scribbled afterthought: "Certainly sensible! A great reminder of how to take care of our most valuable gift!"

Spargo has a way with presidential and vice presidential wiles.

A few years ago, when a number of articles appeared in the media critical of the administration of the late President Eisenhower, Spargo sat down and sent his widow, Mamie, a couple of articles that were in praise of her husband.

Back from Mamie Doud Eisenhower came a thank you note with this little story about President Ike:

"When he was getting ready to make the world trip, after he had his first heart attack and a small stroke (which I never believed he had), I begged him not to make this terrific effort."

"He looked at me in surprise and said, 'Why, Mamie, if I have one more drop of blood to give this country, I will give it.'"

"That certainly showed his love of country and that he considered himself very fortunate to be born in America."

Spargo calls his notes from Barbara and Mamie "a couple of examples of class personified."

FORMER Red Sox star Eddie Pellegrini, a Weymouth resident, was in Quincy last week to conduct his annual baseball clinic for the Quincy Recreation Department at Adams Field. And attracted the usual large turnout of young major league hopefuls.

Eddie played for the Sox from 1941 to 1948 and, of course, was a member of the pennant winning 1946 club. The very first time at bat for the Sox in 1941, he hit a home run. And pals like Ted Williams have never let him forget that he then hit only 10 the rest of his 10-year major league career.

GUY FAIELLA

GUY FAIELLA, chairman of the Quincy Board of Registrars of Voters, is a patient at Quincy City Hospital. He hopes to be out on his feet in time for the Sept. 16 primaries.

TWO POLITICAL FUNDRAISERS coming up Friday and Sunday, one for Senator Paul Harold and the other for Rep. Michael Morrissey.

Harold has his fourth annual "Moonlight Cruise" of Boston Harbor set for Friday, 8 p.m. to 11, out of Long Wharf. Entertainment and dancing. Tickets ($10 per person) must be reserved in advance, and may be obtained through Michael Linnane (472-0879), Dan Monahan (773-7382) or Eddie Burns (472-6188).

Morrissey will have a champagne brunch at Squantum Yacht Club Sunday from 10 a.m. to noon. Tickets ($25 per person, $40 per couple) available by calling 328-0900 or 328-6039. Charles Kane is ticket chairman.

SHORT STORY: She double-parked her car on Hancock St. in downtown Quincy, just opposite the sign that says: "No Double Parking." and waltzed into the eating spot for lunch. She was blocking a car at the curb but that apparently didn't matter. The driver of the blocked car finally complained to a police officer. The latter went into the eating spot to see if the illegally parked car belonged to anyone there. No response. So, he called a tow truck. As the car was about to be towed away, the woman rushed out excitedly claiming she didn't hear the police officer asking about the car. The tow truck driver let both her and her car off the hook — for a $10 nuisance fee. And she got a $5 parking ticket for good measure. And then guess what? She put her car under a sign that said "10 Minute Parking, Bank Use Only," and went back into the eating spot — apparently to finish her lunch.

Tips On How To Quit Smoking

Quincy City Hospital and the American Cancer Society offers the following tips to help you quit smoking:

• Before you quit smoking, try wrapping your cigarette pack with a sheet of paper like a Christmas present. Every time you want a cigarette, unwrap the pack and write down what you are doing, how you feel, and how important this cigarette is to you.

• If you're bored and want something to do try gum, modest exercise, a brisk walk, or a hobby. Avoid eating new foods that are high in calories.

• To help you relax, try eating low-calorie foods, drinking new, low-calorie beverages, or social activities within reasonable bounds.

• On a 3" x 5" card, make a list of what you like and dislike about smoking. Add to it and read it daily.

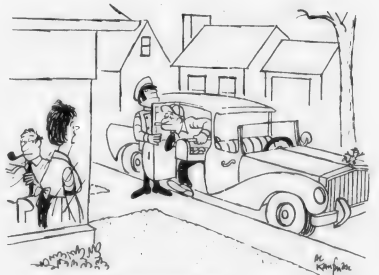

• Never smoke after you get a craving for a cigarette until three minutes have passed since you got the urge. During that three minutes walk to the kitchen or the water cooler and take a drink, or telephone an ex-smoker or somebody you can talk to until the craving subsides.

Statistics show that about 53 million persons 12 and over smoke. According to a recent study, some 25 million of those who are smokers would like to quit. If you would, Quincy City Hospital and the American Cancer Society are offering a Stop-Smoking Program in the Hospital Conference Room.

To register, call John Felci at 773-6100, Ext. 308.

Convention Observation

Kennedy Now Strong Contender For 1984 Race

(Editor's Note - Ron Iacobucci of 10 Hyde St. Quincy Center, went to the Democratic National Convention in New York in the dual role of Kennedy campaign aide and correspondent for The Quincy Sun. Here is his personal view of the moments of high drama in that convention.)

By RON IACOBUCCI

"... the work goes on; the cause endures; the hope still lives; and the dream shall never die." Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Aug. 12, 1980

Sen. EDWARD KENNEDY

Jimmy Carter may have won the Democratic nomination for President but Ted Kennedy won the hearts and minds of Democrats across the country.

Madison Square Garden became Kennedy country last week as the senator from Massachusetts clearly outdistanced President Carter throughout the convention proceedings. In fact, Kennedy won everything but the nomination.

It was reminiscent of his late brother John F. Kennedy's loss of the 1956 vice presidential nomination to Sen. Estes Kefauver, a defeat which later became a blessing in disguise by giving him exposure that earned him the respect and admiration of Democrats and put him on the road to the Presidency in 1960.

Similarly, Ted Kennedy walked away from the New York Convention a class act and a strong contender for 1984.

The contrast between Kennedy and Carter was most evident in the style and substance of their "acceptance" speeches, Kennedy graciously accepting defeat and Carter the nomination.

Kennedy's speech was considered his best ever, a rousing attack on the Republicans and a call for Democrats to "keep the faith" with their traditional principles.

Kennedy brought the convention to life and the response from the delegates was both warm and genuine; they laughed; they cried; they applauded; they roared their approval.

Kennedy did his job, placing his influence squarely behind party unity. In fact, he did more for Carter in defeat than Ronald Reagan did four years ago when he lost the nomination to then-President Gerald Ford.

In contrast, President Carter's acceptance speech was too long and bored the delegates. The "spontaneous" demonstration that followed was forced and lacked the genuine enthusiasm of the one for Kennedy.

It was a challenge to top Kennedy's performance and Carter failed.

These are not the observations of a bitter or disgruntled Kennedy loyalist. I was an active worker in the Kennedy campaign but I was also on the convention floor, an eyewitness, and the difference was very real.

Originally, I was convinced that it was a "one day" convention. After the rules fight on Monday, I thought it was all over, time to go home. But I was wrong. The real action was only beginning.

Sen. Kennedy quickly announced that his name would not be placed in nomination and he assumed the role of party healer.

Tuesday was "The Speech," and then his platform victories. By Wednesday, Kennedy was running the convention. All eyes focused on the senator. His actions, even his inactions, were closely watched.

The nomination process was overshadowed by the Kennedy announcement of support for the President and speculation over Kennedy's appearance on the podium with Carter dominated discussions until the very end of the convention.

Given the Kennedy distraction, Carter and Vice President Walter Mondale did manage to succeed in focusing attention on the real enemy — Ronald Reagan.

The job at hand for Democrats remains a Democratic victory in November, and to this end Sen. Kennedy pledged his complete support.

1000-Man Layoff At Shipyard

The Bethlehem Steel Co. explained that the recent layoff of more than 1,000 men at its busy Fore River Shipyard was due to the fact that shipbuilding actually was being carried on too fast.

"We have launched several tankers and one cruiser in high speed time," said a Bethlehem news release, "and within a few weeks we will launch the battleship Massachusetts and another cruiser."

"The completion of work has far outstripped our start of new work and hence there have been layoffs until we can get the new work far enough along to call the men back."

BOMB DEMONSTRATION

Three bombing planes roared down out of the night skies to attack a specially constructed building on the shore of Black's Creek in Merrymount Park in a simulated air raid.

Actually the incendiary thermite "bombs" were touched off on the ground by Louis Arienti, a pyro technician, of 22 Barry St., West Quincy, while 5,000 spectators oohed and aahed.

Quincy auxiliary firefighters, under Capt. Robert Fenby, put out the fire in five minutes.

QUANTUM CLINCHES

Edward P. Batchelder was appointed probation officer at Quincy District Court by Judge Kenneth L. Nash to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Chief Probation Officer Joseph J. O'Brien.

AIRPORT COMMITTEE TOURS

Members of the Quincy Municipal Airport Committee toured several locations proposed for a city landing field, including sites in Broad Meadows and the Rock Island Cove section of Houghs Neck.

Making the tour were Victor A. Brown, chairman; Harold Martin, Samuel G. Jarvis and Robert H. Foy, all of Quincy, and William J. Connell of Braintree. Martin used to manage Denison Airport in Atlantic.

Unity Ending But:

Carter-Mondale Toughest Battle Is Within Democratic Ranks

(Editor's Note: Sen. Paul D. Harold (D-Quincy) was an alternate delegate pledged to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy at the Democratic National Convention. Here he writes his reactions to the Convention.)

By Senator PAUL HAROLD

Democrats wound up a week's activity in New York City, seemingly united to work together to defeat the Republican nominee, Ronald Reagan, in November.

The two major events of the week revolved not around the nominee, President Carter, but around the Bay State's favorite son, Edward Kennedy.

First was the much-publicized battle between Kennedy and Carter forces over a rules change on whether it should be an "open" or "closed" convention.

The second was Kennedy's speech on a platform plank which would provide $12 billion for a national jobs program.

The Kennedy challenge for the nomination fizzled out on the first day when his supporters lost the rules fight which would have effectively released delegates from having to vote for the candidate at the convention to whom they were pledged when elected in state caucuses and primaries.

It was thought that Kennedy was within 75 to 100 votes of winning the rules battle, but when all the votes were tallied, he was badly beaten by a 540-vote margin.

This vote indicated that Kennedy's chances of changing Carter delegates on the subsequent vote were minimal.

Among the Massachusetts delegation, Kennedy was able to change only four votes and, within hours of the roll call on the rules change, Kennedy withdrew his name from further consideration.

Although his withdrawal was anticipated at some later point, Massachusetts loyalists were caught somewhat unprepared when they learned of it through television commentators.

Even though he withdrew, Kennedy still pushed his economic plank in the platform, and was successful in having the jobs program adopted.

Kennedy addressed the convention in what has since been described as one of the most eloquent and stirring speeches in recent years.

He outlined the jobs program plank, arguing forcefully in favor of it; he laid the groundwork for a reconciliation with Carter for a united front against Reagan's bid for the White House; and he enhanced his own chances for the Democratic nomination in 1984.

The Kennedy magic was still apparent to all of those who watched the speech, and many delegates observed that if he had given such a speech six months ago, the results of the primaries might have been very different.

Kennedy's speech also came forth with a searing attack on Ronald Reagan, which was a preview of what we can expect in the general campaign through the fall.

After the balloting for President was completed, Massachusetts Lt. Governor Thomas O'Neill called upon the convention to make the nomination of President Carter by acclamation.

He thus served notice to the other delegates, and to the American public watching the proceedings on television that despite their differences, President Carter can count on the backing of the Kennedy forces.

While Massachusetts Kennedy supporters were ready and willing to accept a role in the Carter campaign, delegates from other states have made it clear that they will not support Carter, but will lend their aid to Independent Presidential candidate John Anderson.

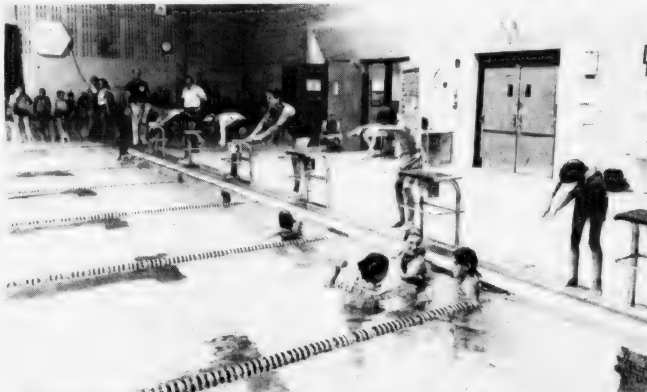

The economy is still the main concern of Kennedy supporters, particularly those from other parts of the country.

In Massachusetts, because of the high-technology industry, the current recession has had minimal impact. But in other areas of the country, the recession has reached depression proportions.

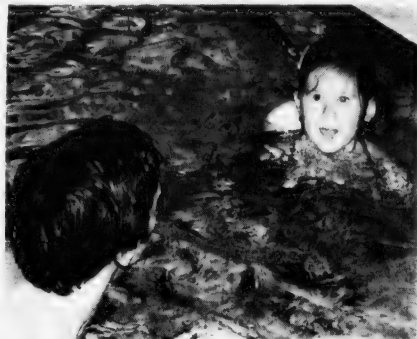

In Michigan, for example, where unemployment runs as high as 35 per cent, discussion with those delegates points up the fact that the toughest battle for the Carter-Mondale ticket is still within the Democratic ranks.

Following any challenge in politics, the priority concern is first to bring one's own party into line. This Carter will be able to do, but it remains to be seen whether he can do it in time.

Tells Chamber

End To Inflation Just Around Corner, Says HUD Official

The Carter administration's anti-inflation program, says HUD's Shelly Friedman, is turning the American economy around — but "nobody wants to say we've rounded the corner yet."

"If the public thinks we've rounded the corner without good reason, then we're off and running again," he said.

Friedman, who is the New England regional director of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, spoke on inflation and the housing market at a South Shore Chamber of Commerce breakfast at Valle's.

Braintree.

"Much depends," he said, "on the public's perception of where we are; how serious we are about combating inflation; how serious we are about reducing petroleum consumption."

"If people do not believe it is a life or death battle then we're in for more tough times ahead."

Friedman said the Carter administration is not supporting a tax cut this year "although there will be a more cohesive policy about one in 1981."

"If we can make it a target tax cut, that is one that can help productivity, we will be in much better position than we are this year," he said.

"A tax cut that does not lead to a real increase in the gross national product is a fraud.

"What our anti-inflation package is all about is an effort to increase the gross national product or productivity."

"If we go with a massive tax cut and do not expand the GNP at the same time then we will be going the inflation route once again."

Friedman said both sides of the political spectrum now recognize that "inflation has to be the No. 1 enemy and unless we come to grips with it the American way of life is seriously threatened."

"That is the prevailing mood in the White House and that is the prevailing mood of the marching orders I receive as I go about HUD's business in New England."

SUDDENLY WHITE HAIR

It is a well-known fact that a person can lose hair after experiencing some very stressful situation, such as observing a tragedy. Sometimes large amounts of hair come out every time the hair is combed or brushed.

A great amount of gray or white hair is mixed in with naturally-colored hair as a person becomes older. However, the impression is that the overall appearance is black or dark brown. The hair that comes out is the dark hair - not the gray. Therefore, if the dark hair is lost and the white or gray hair remains, then it is suddenly apparent that the hair is white.

The hair did not turn white. It is only that the white hair remains. What may have taken weeks or even months to happen is said in some instances to have taken place "overnight".

McGrath Suggests Traffic Signals At Fenno-Hancock Sts.

Councillor Stephen J. McGrath has requested that the Traffic Commission study the possibility of installing traffic signals at the Fenno-Hancock Sts. intersection.

In a letter to Traffic Commission Chairman Captain Paul Lahive, McGrath said that several area residents had expressed concern about the difficulty of entering Hancock Street southbound from Fenno Street.

"At the present time, a dangerous situation results, especially during busy traffic hours," said McGrath.

McGrath suggested a delay-signal device to prevent any further serious accidents.

5 Named To Conservation Commission

A little unfinished business was cleaned up recently when Mayor Arthur Tobin announced his appointments to the Conservation Commission.

One of those appointments, according to commission Executive Secretary Clara Yeomans, was to fill a three-year old vacancy.

Another was the reappointment of a member whose last term had expired in February, 1979, but who had never been officially been renamed to the board, she said.

Tobin's appointments bring the commission up to its full complement of seven members, for the first time in about three years, she said.

Appointed to the commission were:

- Mrs. Frances Gaudiano, 76 Miller St., West Quincy. She replaces Mrs. Priscilla Murphy, who resigned earlier this year when she moved out of the city. Mrs. Gaudiano's term expires in February, 1981.

- Dr. E. James Iorio, 10 Furnace Brook Pkwy., Merry-mount. Dr. Iorio, whose term had expired in February, 1979, was reappointed to a three-year term expiring in February, 1982. He had continued on the board for the last year and a half.

- Alfred Fontana, 1025 Hancock St., Quincy Center, who was appointed to a three-year term expiring in February, 1983. He replaces Timothy Galligan.

- Olin A. Taylor, 18 Taft St., Quincy Center, also appointed to a three-year term expiring in February, 1983. He replaces John McEvoy.

- Dr. William O. Duane, 112 Sims Rd., Wollaston, also appointed to a three-year term expiring in February, 1983. He fills the three-year vacancy.

The commission's other members are Chairman James Donahue and Hazel Usher.

How we made 180 senior citizens and special needs people happy.

By the cooperative effort of the MBTA and The Quincy Co-operative Bank we were able to offer senior citizens "T" discount pass service at our Main Office during the downtown sidewalk sale on July 18.

The number of passes issued was 169 for Senior Citizens and 11 for special needs people for a total of 180. The usual procedure for issuance of such passes is for a person to apply at the MBTA office at Washington Street Subway in Boston. We feel our cooperative venture with the "T" in issuing passes made it just a bit easier for persons to get their identification cards nearer home.

Tobin To Name Committee To Study Germantown Problems

Mayor Arthur Tobin said Tuesday he will appoint a committee to study problems, particularly unruly youth, in Germantown's public housing.

Tobin said the need for such a study was brought to his attention after a rock-throwing disturbance on Aug. 9, the closing night of the annual St. Boniface Festival in Germantown.

Several youths were held in protective custody as a result of that incident, according to Lt. David Rowell, Quincy Police chief of detectives.

"We don't want that kind of trouble in the city," said Tobin.

"I want the committee to identify the problems down there and say to the mayor and the public officials, 'this is what we want you to do,'" Tobin said.

"Suppose, for example, they were to identify a certain group as the trouble makers. Then, maybe, we could go to the Housing Authority for eviction notices," Tobin said.

The committee will include City Council Leo Kelly, State Rep. Thomas Brownell, either Rev. Gerald Osterman or Rev. George Carlson of St. Boniface and Germantown resident Robert Foley, Tobin said. He is now lining up other members, he said.

Foley, who was chairman of the St. Boniface Festival, approached him after Aug. 9 incident, Tobin said, and proposed the committee.

Foley, a Howe St. resident, blamed many of the area's problems on outsiders who give the neighborhood a bad name.

"Somebody will get arrested, for dope, say, and he'll give a Germantown address. And maybe he hasn't lived there for 10 years.

"We have several beaches in Germantown. We'll have groups come in from the outside and throw wild parties. All we're saying is 'something has to stop.'"

"All we're doing from the start is just looking for cooperation from everyone involved—the police, the city, the Housing Authority and the neighborhood," Foley said.

Foley expected the committee to meet within the next week.

The group will include representatives of residents' groups, senior citizens, the police, church and city government, Tobin said. He had set no limit on the number of members.

"I don't want to be hamstrung by numbers. If anybody can contribute to this, I don't want to exclude them," Tobin said.

Quincy Housing Authority Administrator Clement O'Brien approved of the committee.

"Oh, beautiful," O'Brien said Tuesday. "Something like that would certainly be a big help to us."

O'Brien hoped the committee's main priority would be solving security problems in the Germantown public housing. Senior citizens at the Oceanview and Snug Harbor Courts, in particular, have been the victims of youth harassment recently," he said.

"State housing regulations make eviction of problem tenants a long and difficult process," O'Brien said.

"There is no provision for immediate eviction in that sort of case," O'Brien said. "We have to go through a grievance procedure, we have to get other tenants to testify against them, and, of course, they're usually reluctant to for fear of retribution."

The QHA has asked the state Executive Office of Communities and Development for permission to evict certain tenants immediately, O'Brien said. This would include those convicted of drug offenses, assaults on other tenants or destruction of property.

"We do have a number of complaints on that sort of thing," O'Brien said, "but I wouldn't call it overwhelming."

"I understand it's a hard-core group that causes the problems down there," Tobin said. "It's only a certain few."

"I lived down there, you know. I lived in the projects and I know that 98 percent of them are good, decent, hard-working people."

Snug Harbor Seniors 'Fed Up' With Youth Harassment

the funding just isn't there," he said. "Not now."

"We want the locks changed," Mrs. Murphy added. "Some of them have been here since the place was built. Of course, people move out and take the keys with them. So these keys are all over the city and everywhere else."

Some of the locks don't even work, she said, and can be blown open by a stiff wind.

"That's the first I've ever heard about that," responded O'Brien.

"We have to keep all of our doors and windows closed, no matter how hot it is," said Mrs. Murphy. "You see, we're all on the street level."

The project's residents "all feel about the same," Mrs. Murphy said. "They're really fed up with it."

"A lot of them feel it's just not safe to live down there," Zusman said. "They are very fed up with the Housing Authority."

"This is very upsetting to me," O'Brien said. But this is a problem nationwide, not just in Germantown or in Quincy. Every time you pick up the paper, you read about the elderly being the target of abuse somewhere.

"Maybe if the police could arrest a few of these people or the courts were a little tougher on them..." he said.

"These old people down here... we love this place," said Mrs. Murphy. "We pay our rent on time, we try to keep the place neat, some of us have little gardens outside."

"But, what good is it if we can't enjoy it?"

it. If I can't be up to actively taking part, I want to step aside."

Ryan was appointed to a third five-year term on the Hospital Board by Tobin in February, 1978.

The Mayor said plans are being made to honor Ryan for his services to the city during the Constitutional Bicentennial celebration, probably on Saturday, Sept. 6.

That is the day that Chief Justice Edward F. Hennessey of the Massachusetts Supreme Court is to be the main speaker at ceremonies at 1 p.m. in Constitution Plaza. He will be introduced by Judge Albert L. Kramer, presiding justice of the Quincy District Court.

"I think it's appropriate," said Tobin, "to give Quincy, the Hospital Board of Managers and the bar associations an opportunity to honor Dennis Ryan at the same time."

Tobin said he was disturbed at reported dissension among members of the Hospital Board of Managers, particularly attacks on Simon Fireman, who was criticized by other members for absenteeism at meetings.

The Mayor said Fireman had been absent on personal business.

"He had come down here once before to tender his resignation because his business dealings were going to take him out of the country," said Tobin.

"I said it was not necessary for him to tender his resignation, that when he came back from his trip he could put in the time."

"Through Dr. Corea, I'm asking all the members of the board to please have a meeting and iron out any differences they may have and let's get on with the business of the hospital."

Tobin said his own blue ribbon commission studying the hospital, chaired by Atty. Lawrence O'Donnell, would meet last night (Wednesday) to hear a presentation by Hospital Affiliates Inc. of Texas.

Hospital Affiliates and two other management companies have been studying the hospital, he said. "To see if they want to get involved in running the hospital and make a proposal to the Mayor."

The Mayor said he has also received a 2½-page report from the accounting firm of Peat Marwick Mitchell & Co. on things to look for when studying the hospital.

Norfolk County Hospital Reduces Operating Deficit By 73.6%

Norfolk County Commissioners James J. Collins, David C.

Ahearn, and George B. McDonald announce the Norfolk County

Hospital, Braintree, has reduced its operating deficit by 73.6 percent for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1980, and the hospital is currently running in the black.

The hospital's deficit, paid for by the City of Quincy and the towns in Norfolk County, has been reduced from 1.2 million in 1976 to this year's $142,835. Next year, there will be no deficit at the hospital.

John A. Barmack, hospital administrator, stated there were several reasons for the respiratory specialty hospital to have "financially turned around," and he cited the work of the Norfolk County Commissioners as the major reason.

The City of Quincy's assessment for the last fiscal year is $16,195.00, representing a saving of about $45,000.00 over last year.

Your Dental HEALTH

by Daniel P. Sweeney, D.D.S.

Unless born with extraordinarily soft teeth, there is no reason why teeth should not last a lifetime. However, it does seem to be a problem in so far as at least half of all Americans over the age of fifty do not have all of their original teeth. Unfortunately, in many cases, it is due to people not disciplining themselves to follow a simple routine of dental care and hygiene. It is too easy to eat foods with refined sugar. It is too easy to forgo daily brushing and flossing. Finally, visiting a dentist for regular checkups and cleanings is required as well. Lack of discipline has a high price. Dentures, as good as they are, are never as satisfactory as natural teeth.

At the office of DANIEL P.

SWEENEY, D.D.S. we want to preserve your natural teeth. It's essential to get routine dental work but it is just as important to follow up when advanced work is necessary. We encourage root canals to save teeth. When you lose a tooth you are on your way to losing more teeth and the proper function of your mouth. Dental breakdown in your mouth will not stop without proper dental treatment. Stop dental breakdown at the lowest possible level by keeping regular dental visits and following up when work is advised. Your dentist will help you keep an attractive smile. Visit us at 539 Adams St., East Milton Square or call 698-3636.

(Quincy Sun Photo by Richard Matthews)

She Came A Long Way To Win $25

If they gave a prize at the recent downtown Quincy Sidewalk Bazaar for the person who had come the furthest, it probably would have gone to Barbara Walsh.

That would have been the second prize won by Miss Walsh, who also won a $25 gift certificate in a drawing sponsored by the William R. Caddy Detachment of the Marine Corps League.

Although Miss Walsh, a former Quincy resident, has been visiting friends and relatives in Weymouth in recent weeks, her permanent address is in the remote Himalayan nation of Nepal about 10,000 miles away. As an employee of the United Nations-sponsored World Health Organization (WHO), she coordinates graduate nurse training programs at Tribhuvan University in the capital city of Kathmandu.

The drawing was held by the Marine Corps League to provide services and entertainment for patients at the Brockton VA Hospital.

Ironically, Miss Walsh is a former nurse at that hospital, in 1958 and 1959. Her 18 years with

WHO has taken her to stops throughout Southeast Asia. Every two years she returns home for 10 weeks to meet friends and reminisce.

"Actually, whenever I get home, I seem to spend most of my time shopping," she said.

Miss Walsh plans to return to Nepal, a nation of about 14 million people and about the size of North Carolina, in late August.

That mean's she'll be out of town on Sept. 3 when the Caddy Detachment draws their grand prize winner. That person will receive a moped.

Pvt. Steven Wynands Completes Training

Pvt. Steven Wynands, son of Mrs. Sylvia Wynands, 7 Roselin Ave., Quincy, recently completed One Station Unit Training (OSUT) at Fort Benning, Ga.

OSUT is a 12-week period which combines basic combat training and advanced individual training.

Wynands, a 1978 graduate of Quincy Vocational Technical High School, entered the Army in February, 1980. His father, Hawbrick Wynands, lives at 30 Brooks Ave., Quincy.

Brownell Seeks No Sales Tax On Energy Saving Devices

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D-Quincy) says he plans to file legislation that would exempt energy saving items from the Massachusetts state sales tax.

The Brownell bill would remove the tax from such items as home insulation, storm windows, thermostats, energy meters and furnace modifications designed to increase fuel efficiency.

It would also exempt the costs of such renewable energy sources as solar, wind-powered or geothermal materials.

"The energy crisis is real and will be with us for some time to come," said Brownell.

"We must provide the incentive for people to conserve or switch to alternative energy sources; to make people pay a sales tax on such necessities is both unwise and unjust."

High Winds Disrupt But:

Quincy Bay Race Week 'Outstanding'

Excellent weather prevailed for last week's 43rd edition of Quincy Bay Race week and, despite high winds Saturday which forced cancellation of the laser and hustler races, Quincy Bay Race Week Association president Dave Maloney termed the week "an outstanding success."

"Except for the Saturday winds which forced cancellation of some racing, the weather man cooperated fully," Maloney said. "Everyone cooperated beautifully and everything went off smoothly."

"I'm not certain of the total number of boats but I think it must have been a record number. I do know we had a record for the ocean racing as more than 100 boats started, 54 on Saturday and more than 50 on Sunday. It is the first time we had two days of ocean racing."

Maloney hailed the return to Quincy Yacht Club for the annual Gala Night.

"We were able to return there for the first time since the 1978 blizzard, which heavily damaged the club, and it was truly a gala night in every sense of the word."

"For the last two years we held Gala Night at Town River and everyone was happy to return to Quincy. It was an excellent evening."

Maloney was especially pleased that nothing interfered with the colorful Marine Parade this year. The parade had to be cancelled last year for the first time in at least 20 years.

"So much time and effort is put into decorating the boats that it was a shame to have to cancel last year," he said. "This year there were some outstanding entries and it was one of the most colorful parades we have had."

Ever wonder why so many boats in the average marina are white? Probably not... if you've noticed what happens to a colored vessel after a couple of years on the water. Sun and sea take a heavy toll on the average marine finish. That's why so many leading boat yards, marinas and manufacturers are discovering AWLGRIP... in its equally brilliant colors. No new owner to boating, AWLGRIP has been tested and proved over a number of years on all types of boat surfaces. In fact, the aluminum American's Cup victor Courageous and the wooden defending champion Intrepid both chose AWLGRIP for their above-waterline finish.

Glass Retention - Even the most hot and humid climates... combined with the weathering force of salt spray... can't diminish the luster of AWLGRIP retains its gloss for years to come. Just as its cousin ALUMIGRIP is the finish of most corporate jets and airliners, AWLGRIP is becoming the preferred coating of the discriminating yacht owner.

Corrosion Resistance - Salt water and salt spray simply don't fret AWLGRIP. Neither does the country's quality of sun, heat and humidity. Gasoline and chemical spills, likewise, don't harm a sparkling AWLGRIP finish.

Maintenance - AWLGRIP'S hard, non-porous surface won't harbor fungus, mildew or mold. Even dirt and grime can not hold on to AWLGRIP'S sleek finish. Simply wash with soap and water... or use an industrial cleanser if desired, with no fear of harming the coating.

Crow Point Donates QBRW Sportsmanship Trophy

The Crow Point Sailing Club of Hingham announces it is donating a sportsmanship trophy to the Quincy Bay Race Week Association.

The trophy is to be perpetual, awarded annually and inscribed with the name of the junior sailor who exhibits the best example of sportsmanship during Quincy Bay Race Week.

The trophy is donated in the memory of three young Crow Point men; Stuart Allen, Thomas Curtis Jr., and William Sullivan, who exemplified in their lifetimes the true spirit of sportsmanship and fair play, the Club said. It will be awarded for the first time at the conclusion of this year's Quincy Bay Race Week, which starts Aug. 13.

The Crow Point Sailing Club was founded in 1954 by a group of yachtsmen in Hingham for the purpose of introducing junior sailors to the enjoyment of sailing and racing boats.

Fitzgerald, Burke HopefulQuincy, North Football Practice Aug. 25*By TOM SULLIVAN

Here is an antidote for those who have been frustrated by the Red Sox misfortune:

Football practice for the Quincy and North Quincy football teams gets underway next Monday after the players underwent physicals and received their equipment last week.

Tom Fitzgerald, starting his third year as Quincy coach and his 29th year as a schoolboy coach, has piloted the Presidents to wins the past two years over his alma mater, North Quincy. Tom was an all-scholastic at North and before taking over as Quincy coach he was a North assistant for nine years.

Fitzgerald will greet his squad for the first practice session Monday morning at 8 at Faxon Field. The Presidents will work out until 10:30, then, following lunch, will return for an afternoon session from 1 to 3.

Fran Duggan, one of the Suburban League's outstanding tackles, will captain Quincy this fall and Ed Jodice and Walt Kilgallon will be co-captains.

"The boys decided, instead of electing tri-captains, to pick one captain and two co-captains," Fitzgerald said. "I think they made good choices."

Quincy has the same assistant coaches as last year, Bill Maver, Peter Chella, Joe Goguen and Mark Conroy.

Dave Burke, another former North all-scholastic, is beginning his sixth year as Raider coach.

Last season North had its own locker room facilities and was able to return to its home practice field, Kavanagh Stadium, for the first time in four years. For the previous three years the Raiders were forced to travel to Veterans Memorial Stadium, dress there and work out at Pageant Field.

Burke's teams have lost their last three games to Quincy after his first two Raider teams had won.

Dave will have his squad out Monday, 8:30 at Kavanagh, will workout until 10:30, following lunch a blackboard drill will be held from 12:30 to 1:15 and the squad will return to Kavanagh from 1:15 to 3:30.

North will be led by four captains this fall, Glen Segalla, Lou DiPietro, Jack Leone and Jack Browne.

Burke will have the same group of assistants as a year ago, Ken McPhee, Jack Ravner, George Liset and the dean of them all, Ted Sadowski, beginning his 23rd season as a North aide.

The teams will follow Monday's schedule of double sessions throughout next week, the last week before school opens.

Both teams will open their seasons on Saturday, Sept. 20. The Presidents, following a 7-2-1 season, their best in 10 years, will play at Cambridge Rindge and Latin in a Suburban League game while North, hoping to rebound from a 4-6 season, its second losing season in a row, hosts oldtime rival Milton in a non-league game at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Quincy plays Revere and New Bedford in non-league games while North again meets Milton and Catholic Memorial outside the league.

Sons Of Italy Babe Ruth Champs

Quincy Sons of Italy successfully defended its Babe Ruth League championship last week, sweeping the Firemen in three straight games in the playoff finals.

The SOI had finished with an 18-3-1 record, the best in the league, to win its division.

The team had lost its first game of the round robin playoffs, 7-6, to the Police Club, rebounded to top Granite City Electric, 6-3 and the Police 11-2, to make the three out of five finals.

The SOI took the opener, 3-1, with Jim Austin the winner and Andy Eames the tough luck loser as each allowed only four hits.

John Doherty had two hits for SOI and Bob O'Brien, Steve Lenhardt and Nick Cristiani all played well defensively. Eames, in addition to his fine pitching, had two hits.

In a wild second game SOI pulled out a 9-8 victory as Brian Donovan and Bob McElaney had three hits each. Winning pitcher Donovan pitched well until tiring in the fifth inning.

Peter Lynch had two hits for SOI and O'Brien, Austin, Lenhardt and McElaney played well defensively. Mike Miller, Brian Gibbons and Eames had two hits each for Firemen.

The champions scored twice in the sixth inning to edge Firemen, 3-2, in the third game as Cristiani pitched a five-hitter and loser Billy Phillips also pitched five-hit ball.

Donovan drove in a run for SOI in the first inning but Firemen came back to tie it in the third and move in front, 2-1 in the fourth.

In the sixth Austin walked and came around to score on Lynch's single and Cristiani drove him in with the winning run.

McElaney, Doherty, O'Brien, Austin and Lenhardt played well for SOI.

HARVEY'S SALT WATER FISHING Club, Houghs Neck, played host to disabled veterans during its annual fishing trip. Displaying their catches are Larry Callahan and Ed Briggs (in wheelchairs) as Malcolm McLellan, Frank Locke, John Lyons, Bill Lydon, Gary Shaw, David Shaw, Bob Kennedy (in rear), Ed Urbano and Tony Carramagno look on.

Morrisette won the finals in two straight games behind the pitching of Susan McDonald.

Morrisette finished with a 13-3 record during the regular season and was 4-1 in the playoffs.

The team was coached by Bob Callahan and the team comprised Maureen McCullough, Susan McDonald, Brenda Pagnani, Lorna Dionne-Keay, Ann Sorgi, Raeline DeMullis, Gail Callahan, Leah DePolo, Kathy Cashman, Elaine Flanagan, Laurie Guglielmi, Elaine Bergman and Lina Kearney.

Christiani and Chris Doyle had a double and a single each, and Joe Cullen, Bob Ciarty, Roy Peterson, John Carroll and Dave Phillips a single apiece. For Milton Mike McGuire had a double.

In another Sunday game Norwood Police blasted St. John's of Quincy, 10-0, scoring seven runs in the last inning.

SPORTS FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

Brought To You By ROBERT COLMAN

Amazingly, a pitcher could be BOTH the winner AND loser in the SAME baseball game... Let's say a pitcher is losing a game 1-0 going into the last of the 9th and the game is suspended because of a light failure... The game is to be completed the next time the teams meet in the same park a month later... During the interim, the pitcher is traded to the other team... When the game is resumed, his new team brings him in to pitch the last of the 9th, and he gives up 2 runs... That makes him both the winner and loser in the same game... It's never happened in the majors, but under the rules, it could.

Here's an oddity... Football is often called the "pigskin" sport, and the football itself is called the "pigskin", but footballs aren't made from pigskin anymore... Most footballs today are made from cowhide.

It's hard to believe now, but a big league baseball team once won 14 PENNANTS IN ONE 16-YEAR STRETCH... The Yankees won the American League pennant in 1949-50-51-52-53-55-56-57-58-60-61-62-63-64... No other major league team has ever come close to that record, before or since.

I bet you didn't know that... Colman's has tremendous savings in sportswear and sports fashions! Famous brand names at Colman's low, low prices. Styles and items for men, women and children. SAVE

WEEK OF AUGUST 21.

AQUARIUS—January 21-February 19
You begin this period on note of triumph, for you've won important point—or earned promotion of sorts. Celebrate, but not extravagantly, for period closes with surprise bill or two.

PISCES—February 20-March 20
A fine week for enjoying cultural activities, pursuing academic program. Talents are impressing high-ranking people. Romantic companion is in loving and surprisingly generous mood.

ARIES—March 21-April 20
An argument is settled—dramatically, emphatically. Romantic picture keeps brightening, though now and again you find partner mysterious. Facts need verification through weekend.

TAURUS—April 21-May 21
Obligations weigh on you, though you thought they'd be lifted by you. Also, you hear disappointing news about someone in high position. On bright side, romance is very much on upswing.

GEMINI—May 22-June 21
Postponements mark week, but you still manage small financial gain. You're in logical mood, but partner can be argumentative through weekend. Difficult friend is suddenly easy to please.

CANCER—June 22-July 22
You're inching closer to long-range personal goal—just a bit more patience! Project begun some months ago can be returned for further work. Prepare to look after family finances.

LEO—July 23-August 22
Friend may seem possessive, but children lend support. Prepare to enjoy love, life on down-to-earth level. Week generally favors selling, renovating, decorating and onward moves.

VIRGO—August 23-September 22
Dealings with teachers, employers, in-laws all are favored. In romantic relationship, be little more realistic, lot more sympathetic. Check appropriateness of dress style on weekend.

LIBRA—September 23-October 22
Focus is on health, fitness, return engagements. Former suitor could return to scene, former task could be returned for further research. Details demand meticulous attention.

SCORPIO—October 23-November 21
Problems getting loved one to agree with plans complicate week. Monday offers good chance to advance in professional organization. Question financial advisors if you have any doubts.

SAGITTARIUS—November 22-December 22
A conflict with a Gemini can be balanced by sweet times shared with a Libra or Leo. Shopping excursions can yield wonderful bargains. Pets have special place in weekend picture.

CAPRICORN—December 23-January 20
Partnership disputes can be resolved with little imagination, and long-distance communication offers surprise tidbits. Week has international feel; experiment with new foreign cuisine.

BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK
You can worry a lot about little things, tend to underestimate your considerable talents: persuasiveness, resourcefulness, dependability. The coming year should bring periods favorable for expressing yourself in new ways. Some outstanding financial opportunities appear around Christmas.

BORN THIS WEEK
August 21st, jazzman Count Basie; 22nd, actress Cindy Williams; 23rd, dancer Gene Kelly; 24th, writer Max Beerbohm; 25th, dancer Ruby Keeler; 26th, inventor Hans Kleinschmidt; 27th, actress Martha Raye.

Morrisette Defeats Wollaston In MDA Benefit Series

The Morrisette Legion baseball team, which just missed winning its 22nd Zone 6 championship this year, defeated zone rival Wollaston, 4-2, to win the three-game series played for Muscular Dystrophy at Adams Field. Morrisette won the series in three games.

Gary DiNardo pitched outstanding ball in the finale and Morrisette scored three times in the fifth inning as Bill O'Connell singled. Bill Deitsch singled. Mike Morris reached on an error. O'Connell scoring, and Tom Canavan tripled in Deitsch and Morris.

Wollaston added a run in the seventh when Sullivan reached second on an error. Alibrandi singled Sullivan in and later was thrown out at third on a perfect throw from Deitsch to Hugh Campbell.

Deitsch, O'Connell, Biagini and Andy Carrera played their final games for Morrisette.

Morrisette had won the opener of the MDA series, 5-2, behind the six-hit pitching of Deitsch and Morris. It was the first start of the year for Deitsch.

The winners scored a run in the first when Dan Boyle walked. Canavan singled and Boyle scored on another single by Kevin Howlett.

Morrisette added two in the fourth when Howlett walked. Steve Peceovich singled and was forced at second by DePietro. Campbell singled in Howlett. Mitch Johnson walked and Wollaston came back to win the second game, 4-0, behind the five-hit pitching of Rich Hallberg. Wollaston won despite being held to four hits by Paul Earle and Morris.

All the runs scored in the first inning when Murphy reached on an error. McConville, John Kavanaugh and Brian Reale singled and Sean Martin doubled.

Morrisette finished with an overall 15-8 record, while Wollaston, which had its best season since reviving baseball, wound up 9-14.

Quincy Police Bomb State For Playoff Berth

Edgar Roberts led the Quincy Police softball team to a 15-5 victory over the State Police Sunday and a playoff berth in the Eastern Mass. League.

With Quincy leading, 7-4, in the fourth inning, Roberts hit one of the longest home runs ever seen at Rotary Field, the ball traveling more than 310 feet over the centerfield fence. The drive propelled Quincy to another seven-run inning, putting the game out of reach.

Quincy had taken a 3-0 lead after two innings as Ronald O'Donnell drove in two runs with a double after singles by Joe Mannix and Chico Caporale.

Buddy Moon continued the assault with a lazy fly ball that just cleared the right field fence for a homer.

Gerald Queeny, O'Donnell and Roberts combined for 10 hits as Quincy pounded out 20.

Quincy will face first place Wellesley in the opening round of the league playoffs. Wellesley finished with a 13-1 record.

"If we can get by Wellesley, we should be favored to win the state championship," said Quincy manager Caporale.

There will be a $1 admission charge for Sunday's playoff game to defray the costs of the Mannix-Mulligan charity golf tournament which benefits the handicapped.

4 Medals, 4 Ribbons For Track Club

Several members of the Quincy Track Club did well in national competition last weekend, with four winning medals and four receiving ribbons.

The standout performance was by 13-year-old Georgia Traficante, an eighth grader at Sterling Junior High who, despite the flu, laryngitis and a 100-degree fever, won the high jump in the 12-13 division in the U.S. Youth Games at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

She won with a jump of 5-2 and barely missed at 5-3, which would have broken the national record of 5-2½.

"I would never have thought about quitting," she said.

"Despite being sick, there was no way I was going to miss out on that chance. I had the flu, laryngitis and I had a terrible headache the day of the meet but I just forgot all about it and went out there."

Her proud coach, Jeff Hennessy, said, "She was so psyched up, I don't think a pack of wild horses could have stopped her. She is really the best clutch performer we have ever had and is our first national champion, which makes me especially proud of her."

"I'm absolutely on cloud nine over her performance and the performances of our other athletes in the three national meets they competed in."

Georgia's family and friends gave her a homecoming that she will never forget.

"I was almost asleep when we arrived in Quincy," she said.

"When we pulled down my street, all I could see were those spotlights beaming two big signs on my house saying, 'Welcome home, you're number one.' I was so surprised and I couldn't believe my eyes."

Georgia credits her father, who runs with her every morning and helps her practice the high jump at the high school, and Hennessy for her success.

"I owe an awful lot to Jeff," she said. "He spends a lot of time with me and is a super coach. He works with me on every detail and corrects me when I do something wrong. And I really do appreciate that."

Quincy's Lorrie McNeill took sixth in the long jump in the 9-11 division. Rob Glynn was second in the 9-11 880. Jamie McArdle fourth in the 9-11 long jump. Maureen Roche third in the 12-13 long jump. Tommy Walsh fifth in the 9-11 100 and Kristine Picarski sixth in the 14-15 100 in a club record-tying 11.4.

In the national Junior Olympics at Santa Clara, Calif., Quincy's Brian Donahue, a graduate of App. Williams, placed third in the shot put with a toss of 59-4. He barely missed winning the gold medal at 62-1, but fouled.

In the Arco-Jesse Owens Games at UCLA, the Quincy boys' relay team of Sean Hunter, Bobby Roche, Kevin O'Brien and Stu Coull made the finals and finished eighth overall.

Asbestos Expert May Come Here To Explain Tests To Shipyard Workers

Dr. Irving Selikoff, whose report on asbestos problems among Fore River Shipyard workers touched off a furor last winter, may visit Quincy next month to explain his report in detail.

Sen. Paul D. Harold (D-Quincy) conferred with Dr. Selikoff at the Mt. Sinai School of Medicine in New York last week while the senator was attending the Democratic National Convention. "I told him about the asbestos commission that we have in the State Legislature," said Harold. "We're having a hearing in September on asbestos in general and I invited him to come up and testify."

Harold said Dr. Selikoff, who is the acknowledged worldwide leader in the study of health problems connected with asbestos, told him "I probably should be coming up" to explain details of his report to shipyard workers.

But, the senator added, "he didn't really commit himself to it." Harold said Dr. Selikoff told him he expects to file soon with the federal government a final report of tests he made last November on more than 300 Fore River workers who were exposed to asbestos dust.

General Dynamics, owners of the yard, stopped using asbestos in shipbuilding in 1972.

"He promised that when he filed it with the government he would send me a copy," said Harold. "He said that should be about in six weeks. He may come up after it's released."

"I told him that if he came up we would try to hold our commission hearings at the same time so he could testify."

Harold said Dr. Selikoff expressed interest in the program of X-rays for asbestos problems that has been started at the Norfolk County Hospital in Braintree.

"He said that if suitable funding were available he could coordinate that and similar programs from Mt. Sinai where he has the names and vital statistics of everyone who has worked at the shipyard dating back to when it was run by Bethlehem Steel," said Harold.

The senator said he got the impression that Dr. Selikoff was unaware of the controversy he stirred up when he gave some details of his test results in a lecture at the Harvard School of Public Health in February.

First published reports of that lecture quoted him as saying that 80 per cent of Fore River workers had a chance of contracting cancer or other diseases from asbestos dust.

Brownell To File Medicaid-S.S.-Bill

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell, (D-Quincy) will file legislation to correct the imbalance between Medicaid payments and Social Security disability payments resulting from a cost of living increase in Social Security benefits.

"Recently, Social Security disability checks were increased by as much as 14 per cent while the income exemption for Medicaid coverage was increased by only six percent," Brownell said.

The net result has been to leave many disabled persons without insurance coverage. My legislation will index the percentage increase of Medicaid income exemptions to any percentage increase in Social Security disability payments."

Living In Fear In Germantown

'They Tore The Place Apart!'

(Editor's Note: Some people live in fear in Germantown. Among them are members of one family whose home was vandalized and burglarized. They have asked that their names not be used in fear of retaliation. This is their story.)

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Vandalism and youth harassment has truly struck home for one Germantown family.

Members of the family returned to their Taffrail Rd. home last Thursday, after several days' absence, to find it vandalized and burglarized.

Among the missing items were a couch, chairs, a TV set and mattress. Much of the house's furnishings were strewn about and several rooms bore the smell of stale urine.

"Everything was just smashed around," said the family's divorced father, who lives in another part of Quincy.

"They tore the place apart."

The family's three children had just returned from several days on Cape Cod with their father. Their mother had spent those days with family members in Weymouth.

She and the three children have been living in Weymouth since last Thursday.

The incident is part of a mounting wave of such problems involving neighbors, the man claimed.

"I'm pretty sure I know who it is," he said, "and I believe it's right here in the neighborhood."

Local youths have been a problem virtually since the family moved into QHA housing five years ago, according to the family's mother.

According to the mother and $30 Million 'Jewel'

4th Office Building Being Planned For State Street South

By TOM HENSHAW

A fourth new and largest office building --- the "jewel of the complex," according to developer Peter O'Connell --- is being planned for the State Street South area of North Quincy.

It would be a $30 to $35 million office-retail building or buildings with up to 400,000 square feet of space between the end of South Road and the Neponset River.

Construction could be underway as early as next year.

"If all goes well with our other buildings," said O'Connell, "this would be the next logical step. Naturally, we would hope to be involved with someone in the development."

O'Connell Brothers Construction Co. is currently completing a five-story building in State Street South, is about to begin a nine-story building, and is dickering to build one of two stories.

O'Connell's associate in two of the ventures is the Monarch Insurance Co. of Springfield, which Peter O'Connell describes as "very aggressive and knowledgeable about Quincy."

In addition to the "jewel of the complex", O'Connell also made these disclosures:

- The Commercial Union Insurance Co. of Boston will become the prime tenant in the five-story, $11 million office building that the O'Connells and Monarch expect to finish in about a month.

- The O'Connells and Monarch also are planning to build a nine-story, $15 million office building on a nearby site, with construction scheduled to start in 60 days and completion due late in 1981.

- Negotiations are underway with a national computer firm to construct a two-story, $6.5 million building, also in State Street South, which will be started as soon as a lease commitment is obtained.

O'Connell said Commercial Union is taking most if not all of the five-story building in order to expand its Boston operation, which now occupies 17 floors at 1 Beacon St. and eight floors of the Federal Reserve Bank Building.

"There was no single block of space in Boston big enough to handle them," he said, "and corporations like to go where there is a strong corporate identity. It feeds on itself."

"The new nine-story building, which we are building with Monarch on speculation, will be easier to rent because of the corporate identity of State Street South."

The five-story building, which was named the Monarch Office Building, will be renamed the Commercial Union Building and the nine-story building will bear the name Monarch.

"We were fortunate to come across such a great tenant that will be good for Quincy," said O'Connell.

O'Connell Brothers, which recently made its first move out of state with an elderly housing development in Connecticut, is also moving into the energy field in Maine.

The Quincy-based company has filed with the federal government for a preliminary license to study three sites in Maine, including two on the Penobscot River, for hydro-electric development.

O'Connell said that, if the license goes through in the late fall, it would cost some $700,000 just to study one site and as much as $150 million to develop them as a source of renewable energy.

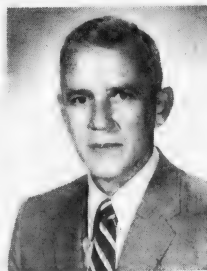

"One site alone could replace 10 million gallons of oil a year," he said. "The lenders we have talked to have been very receptive to the idea."

42,000 New Telephone Directories Being Delivered

Delivery of about 42,000 new Quincy telephone directories will start Friday.

The books - featuring a photo of the Lincoln Monument in Hingham - contain listings of telephone subscribers in Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth.

A wealth of other information also can be found in the directory ranging from emergency services listings and guides to human services to tips on saving on phone bills. United States time zones and postal zip codes.

Local New England Telephone manager Mary Norton said delivery is expected to be completed Sept. 24.

New England Telephone annually distributes more than 10 million copies of 98 different directories which include more than 3 million listings on some 6 billion pages.

The first telephone directory appeared in 1878 as a sheet of paper listing 50 customers. No telephone numbers were used - callers simply told the operator or the name of the party to contact.

Today, area telephone numbers can be obtained fastest by looking in the fully indexed white pages of the directory which would reduce the number of unnecessary calls made each day to directory assistance for listed numbers.

Donnelly Predicts: Coal-Carrying Ships In GD's Future

Cong. Brian J. Donnelly sees a new role for the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard in the construction of coal-fired, coal-carrying ships to service public utilities plants on the East Coast.

There could be some action on it by the end of 1981, he said. "If legislation passes giving the East Coast utilities the tax incentives to convert their power plants from oil to coal," he said, "there will be a great need for ships because we don't have any with the capacity to handle that."

"I see that as the market of the future and that's something I think the people at the Yard are going to be looking into."

The coal conversion bill is currently in the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Donnelly said, "but it's a priority item of the Carter administration, so something's going to happen there."

"When that moves, we'll have a series of power plants along the East Coast that will convert to coal. Many of those plants are on waterways. We'll be in the market for the type of ship that carries coal and is coal-fired."

"If we move ahead there will be something doing in that area late in 1981, provided the company can compete. I can only look at what's available. I can't tell them what to do.

"I think coal-carrying, coal-fired ships are the thing of the next 20 years. And they have to be American ships because only American ships can transport things in the intracoastal trade."

Donnelly said his last communication with General Dynamics indicated that the company "is talking about a stabilized employment level of 2,500" based solely on stopgap repair work.

"The people in the company feel that 2,500 is necessary to keep their most skilled people at the yard," he said. "Less than that and I think they're afraid of losing them to other jobs."

"Now construction, of course, means more than 2,500 jobs."

Donnelly said General Dynamics also will be competing for what the Navy calls "rapid deployment ships."

Eight of them will be converted from containerized cargo ships, currently owned by the Sea Land Co., which have been deemed too fuel inefficient to be profitable.

"It may be well worth our while for the government to buy them," said Donnelly, "and convert them from crane to 'roll-on' capacity to deploy tanks and other equipment."

"There will be eight of those ships that will have to be rehabilitated, probably at a cost of about $25 to $30 million a ship. I suspect they'll all go to the same yard."

The need for rapid deployment ships is a result of the unsettled conditions in the Middle East.

"Since we don't have the deployment necessary in the Middle East, we're going to have to pre-position all our supplies in the Indian Ocean just in case of an emergency," said Donnelly.

"In addition to the conversions, the Navy itself is going to have to build a series of about 10 of those ships. Two of them are included in the House budget now with long lead money for a third."

"General Dynamics is going to compete strongly for those."

He said the future of more liquefied natural gas (LNG) tankers at the Yard depends on the future of a proposed port site at Point Conception, Calif., which is currently in litigation.

"The proposed site is on an earthquake fault line and they are very concerned," he said. "It's also in the path of a proposed space shuttle, although the Air Force has signed off on that."

"If all the objections to that were settled, we would be in good shape to build six more LNGs."

'ECHO' — Dr. Leonard Ross operates new ultrasonography machine at City Hospital. Sound waves reflected from inside patient's body produces picture of ill on screen for safe, rapid diagnosis.

Explores With Sound Waves

City Hospital Unveils $87,000 Medical 'Sonar' Device

By TOM HENSHAW

City Hospital has unveiled a sophisticated new machine that explores for ill and defects inside the body with sound waves rather than sometimes risky X-rays.

It cost $87,000, which just about wiped out the Hospital's capital outlay budget for the year.

The machine is nicknamed "Echo", which is short for echocardiography, or more accurately, "ultrasonography", and it puts the same principle to work for medicine as Sonar does for the Navy.

It is not designed as an absolute replacement for X-rays but to supplement other forms of radiology in cases like obstetrics in which the dangers of radiation are obvious.

"This is the only procedure that is risk free, at least in this stage of our knowledge," said Dr. Marius Ehrlich, chief of radiology. "It has been used for more than 20 years with no known side effects."

There are other advantages of equal importance.

It is particularly useful in cardiac (heart) cases for it can "see" the organ in motion and detect any abnormal movements of the heart valves.

It can analyze gallstones so quickly that the patient could be in the operating room in an hour instead of a day or two as under the best of previous circumstances.

And the ultra-sound waves can tell the difference between malignant and benign tumors without invading the body with either needle or knife.

City Hospital has been using ultrasonography in its radiology department for more than 10 years but, says Dr. Ehrlich,

"there is no comparison in the accuracy and speed of the new machine."

The new equipment is operated by technicians Arthur Milmore, Frances Taylor and Phyllis Roscoe, under the direction of Dr. Leonard Ross, senior radiologist.

It was Dr. Ross who introduced ultrasonography to the department.

Already the machine is used 10 to 12 times a day for periods of 15 to 30 minutes each and it is anticipated that a daily peak of 15 to 18 patients will be using it soon.

"Good, sophisticated equipment like this greatly lessens a patient's hospital stay," said Dr. Ross.

The next piece of "good, sophisticated equipment" needed by the hospital, according to Dr. Ehrlich and Ross, is a CAT scanner to detect and examine head injuries.

Right now City Hospital patients with those injuries have to go the expensive route of an ambulance to Carney Hospital in Dorchester for a CAT scan.

The CAT scanner is one of the priority items on the list of hospital equipment if a $2 million bond issue for capital outlay passes the City Council next month.

"This department has all the technical skill that is necessary," said Dr. Ehrlich, "All it needs now is up-to-date equipment."

Work On Center Plaza Set To Start Sept. 8

The first signs of construction of the proposed $10 million Center Plaza Building at Hancock and Granite Sts. will be shown on Sept. 8 or 9 when fencing will be put up around the site.

But Mayor Tobin said that the dates have not yet been set for the formal groundbreaking for the 10-story building or the $3.79 million UDAG garage over the MBTA tracks.

But both groundbreakings will be held in September, he said.

Planning Director James Lydon said that a letter will go out soon to the Police Department's Traffic Division asking that certain restrictions be placed on the area.

One lane of Burgin Parkway will be closed for use as a construction staging area; a 10-foot lane on Granite St. will be closed to traffic; and the Della Chiesa Parking Area will be closed.

Lydon said the parking lot will be closed in mid or late September.

The two buildings are expected to be completed in 12 to 18 months, Lydon said, after which the old buildings are the corner of Hancock and Granite Sts. will be torn down and the area landscaped.

Teachers Union To Meet Sept. 2

The more than 1000 members of the Quincy Education Association are scheduled to meet Sept. 2 in what President Joanne O'Malley describes as an "informational" meeting.

The 7 a.m. meeting will be held at the George F. Bryan VFW Post, Broad St., Quincy Center.

Among the topics to be discussed, according to Mrs.

O'Malley, will be the QEA's court suit to fund their still unpaid 1979-80 raises, the union's opposition to Proposition 2½, the status of the union contract and the QEA's "work-to-rule" policy.

Union leadership will have no recommendations to the membership concerning any possible job actions, although motions could be suggested from the floor, Mrs. O'Malley said.

3 Closed Schools To Be Boarded Up

The city's three closed schools will be boarded up as soon as possible should ownership be transferred from the School Department back to the City Public Works Department according to DPW Commissioner James Ricciuti.

In addition, Ricciuti said, representatives of several city departments will form a committee to determine the future of those buildings.

The School Committee voted in May to close the Hunting, Great Hill and Myles Standish schools. Since then, the board has been unable to make a decision on what to do with them.

Last week the committee voted 3-2 to table a motion to turn the schools back to the city.

Ricciuti said that, although the committee has yet to make a decision, he's "gotten the impression" that the three buildings will be turned over to the city to dispose of.

To prepare for that possibility, Ricciuti said, "we're going to have to consider boarding up the schools."

"We realize that residents of those neighborhoods have requested that the schools not be boarded up," he added, "but we think that boarding up is better than the blight of broken windows."

Boarding up is also the best way to "protect the integrity of the building" to keep it attractive to possible private developers, he said.

Ricciuti said he did not know how much it would cost to board up the three schools or how soon the task could be completed after the School Committee relinquished control of the buildings.

"We're totally unprepared for this right now," he said. "The job will be done as soon as the funds and personnel are available."

"Somehow, I would hope those buildings would not have to be boarded up," said School Committee Vice Chairman Christopher Kennedy. "A boarded up building tends to be, somehow, a sore to the eyes."

Kennedy didn't know what final disposition would be made by the School Committee, noting that at the Aug. 19 meeting, "we were not close to agreement."

He said he expected a decision at the committee's scheduled Sept. 10 meeting.

"Time is pressing," he said. "We have to come to some sort of agreement before the winter comes."

Both Kennedy and Ricciuti noted that the buildings will require maintenance and heating during the winter months, to prevent damage from freezing.

Representatives of the city public works, law and planning departments will begin meeting to discuss possible uses for the three schools, Ricciuti said. They will probably be joined by members of the mayor's staff and of the city tax assessors.

Among other tasks, they will sift through the numerous requests for use of the schools already received by various city departments. These have come from various agencies and firms, including "quasi-governmental" groups such as the Red Cross and Quincy Community Action.

In May, Planning Board Chairman Rev. Bedros Baharian told The Quincy Sun that the sale of the three schools to private developers could net the city about $1.4 million.

Rev. Baharian envisioned the Standish School as a possible office park, the Hunting as senior citizen housing and the Great Hill as a site for condominiums.

On Baseball And Training Fields

Point Man Combining Careers At Naval Academy

Quincy Point resident Jim Roberts, 21, is successfully combining careers on the baseball fields and training fields of the U.S. Naval Academy.

A senior at Annapolis, Roberts will be captain of the academy's baseball team during the 1981 season. And, this fall, he will be a "company commander" for 120 of his fellow midshipmen.

Roberts is a 1976 graduate of Archbishop Williams High School, where he played baseball, football and basketball. He says baseball has been part of his life since he began playing catch with his father at age three.

The son of retired Navy Chief Petty Officer and Mrs. George W. Roberts of 21 Vine Ave., Quincy Point, he began playing in the Junior Farm League at seven, progressing from that to Little League, Babe Ruth and Legion Ball.

As a freshman at Brandeis University in 1977, he played on their team which was ranked second in the nation in their division.

When Roberts decided to enter the U.S. Naval Academy in 1977, he practiced with the baseball team, but did not play in any of their scheduled games. He lettered in baseball during his sophomore and junior years and, as a senior, he's captain of the team which finished the 1980 season with its best mark in 18 years, a percentage of .786.

A third baseman, Roberts plays some 45-50 games both in the fall and in the spring at the academy and then plays with the South Shore Coastal League and the Boston Park Leagues when he's home on summer leave.

Having practiced so much and gained so much experience in game situations, Roberts has changed his hitting and fielding habits since entering the academy.

"Before coming here, I had developed my own habits and tried to emulate some of the players in the major leagues, but starting my freshman year here, the coach began teaching us the correct way of doing things and the way that would lead to the best results.

"We went back to the basics, studying the laws of momentum and how they applied to the hitting stance. We also learned how to 'read' the various pitches and to act for the good of the team instead of for ourselves."

For Roberts, going out and playing doubleheaders on Saturdays and Sundays is fun. It's a relief from the academic pressures and a time to forget everything, he says.

However, he has obligations at the academy, including academics. An aerospace engineering major, he takes an average of 19 semester hours, including courses involving practical applications of theories he has learned.

In the past, academy seniors in aerospace engineering have experimented with a surface effect vehicle developed at Patuxent River, Md., done performance evaluations on a gyrocopter, and studied the efficiency of a turbine engine.

Although Roberts hasn't decided what type of project he will work on this year, he is looking forward to working on his own and applying many principles he has learned during his three years of study.

"It'll be good to get into the lab again and gain some more practical experience," he says.

Roberts entered the academy because he wanted to become a pilot and felt the academy would be challenging and in keeping with the goals he had set for his future life.

Looking back, Roberts feels that the academy has more than met his expectations although he admits, "It has been harder than I anticipated.

"Having played three sports in high school, I didn't have any problems adjusting to the physical requirements," he remembers, "but adjusting to the regimentation took some doing. It was a totally different lifestyle."

As an academy senior, however, everything seems much easier. "Many of my questions have been answered now and I've learned to work within the system," he says.

In fact this summer Roberts is a squad leader in charge of helping 11 plebes (freshmen) make the transition from civilian to military life.

Roberts sees this job as a preparation for the fall when he'll be a company commander responsible for 120 midshipmen.

"Because I have been involved with the plebes on a one-to-one basis, I'll be able to look beyond the paperwork and see how my policies will affect the individual squad members," he says.

Looking back, Roberts says, "I turned the academy down once and realized I'd made a mistake. I was looking for a challenge and the academy seemed to offer the best of everything. The combination of academics, athletics and leadership training was unbeatable.

"It was something I couldn't turn down twice."

A lifelong Quincy resident, Roberts is the second oldest in a family which includes sisters Betty, 23 and Teresa, 12 and brothers Bobby, 20 and Arthur, 18.

Quinoid Awarded $861,206 T Contract

Quinoid Industries of Quincy has been awarded an $861,206 contract to supply No. 2 heating oil to the MBTA during 1980-81.

A $122,852 contract was also awarded to Mass Bay Petroleum of Walpole, which will deliver 144,600 gallons at 84.96 cents per gallon.

The MBTA is now paying 96.7 cents per gallon.

New Quincy Family Genealogy Ready For Reunion

Quincy Historical Society announces that Supplement No. 1 to the Quincy family genealogy will be published in time for the Quincy Family reunion to be held here Sept. 5.

This is most fitting, since "the book" was a forerunner of the reunion, the Society noted.

Published in 1977 by the Society, "Descendants of Edmund Quincy 1602-1637 who settled in what is now Quincy, Massachusetts, in 1635" compiled by H. Hobart Holly, historian of the Society, was the result of many years of work.

As the first such record of the Quincy Family to be undertaken, much information, particularly for the current generations, came from family members who could be located.

This was the start of a list of living Quincy descendants and the occasion for family members to learn of cousins whom they had never met. Some will be meeting for the first time at the reunion.

The 1977 volume plus the supplement lists over 600 persons who have borne or bear the name of Quincy by either birth or marriage.

The Society has further recorded the names of many other descendants of Edmund Quincy who bear other names, but it is impractical to include these in the publication.

The 1977 volume carried the request that readers come forward with information to correct or help complete the contents of the book.

Supplement No. 1 is the result of the response to this request; even down to a young Mr. Quincy who was born June 1, 1980. It is hoped that further information will come in to fill some of the gaps that still exist.

The Supplement may be obtained at Quincy Historical Society at a price of $1. The book is $3.

'What's Arthur Going To Do?

For anyone who goes to sleep nights dreaming of becoming mayor of Quincy, the big question right now is: "What's Arthur going to do?"

And, right now, that's a good question.

There are days when those close to Mayor Arthur Tobin are convinced he will seek a third term next year. But then there are days when they think maybe he won't.

Tobin himself isn't even hinting. Maybe he really doesn't know at this point.

Prospective contenders like City Councillors Frank McCauley and James Sheets would like to know early before trying to crank up things for themselves. So, too, would Councillor Joseph LaRaia who some still think will make a bid to regain the mayor's office. No doubt, there are others who are at least toying with the thought of running.

If Tobin decided to step down there might be a traffic jam at the nomination papers window at City Hall. If he decides to run, though, who will actually challenge him?

The strange thing is that anyone would really want to be mayor. The $25,000 salary is hardly worth the problems a mayor has to face day by day. The job definitely should pay more. Well, at least there should be a special expense account marked Aspirin, Excedrin or/and Anacin.

But despite the headaches that go with the job, Tobin appears to be enjoying being mayor. There could be a lot of changes in the city in the next two or three years. He's got some things moving - like the multi-million dollar Quincy Center Plaza hailed as the catalyst for big things to come in downtown Quincy. And he's got a few other things brewing like office buildings in North Quincy. The feeling is he'd like to be around as mayor when some of these things are completed. And, if everything went well, they might be remembered as The Tobin Years.

Things could change in the months ahead before election but right now the answer to the question, "What's Arthur going to do?" would appear to be: "He's going to run for a third term."

WILL JIMMY CARTER be coming to Quincy on a campaign visit? Maybe. Senator Paul Harold was in the group with Senator Edward Kennedy that met the President at Logan Airport last week on his arrival to address the American Legion national convention in Boston.

TOBIN

Harold, (who was a Kennedy alternate delegate,) got to chat with Carter for about 30 seconds and managed a plug for Quincy.

Harold introduced himself as the "state Senator from Quincy, the City of Presidents and home of the Adamses".

Carter replied: "I know Quincy. I've been there (1976 campaign) and hope to make another visit there soon."

CONGRESSMAN Brian Donnelly is seriously thinking of moving his Quincy office from the Post Office on Washington St., to the new Quincy Center Plaza, the Campanelli project at the corner of Hancock and Granite Sts. Seems the Post Office space, at $12 a square foot, is becoming too expensive for the cost-conscious Donnelly.

DONNELLY

HERB FONTAINE, WJDA news director, is marking a special anniversary today. It was 25 years ago that he joined WJDA under the late James D. Asher, Sr. whose initials are the station's call letters. Herb wonders where that quarter-century went. Well, as they say, time flies when you're having fun. And Herb enjoys his work. That's what helps make him one of the top radio newsmen in New England.

FONTAINE

OOPS! DEPT: One of The Sun's photos in last week's Quincy Bay Race Week coverage identified a line of boats (Page 21) as Turnabouts when they were actually Hustlers. Two sharp eyed sailors, City Auditor Charles Shea and Atty. Douglas Randall, quickly spotted the booboo.

SMILE DEPT: Jack Silverstein, the North Quincy druggist, says: "There are three kinds of people to make the world. Right handed, left handed and underhanded."

83.4 Cents Of Every $1 Goes To MDA Program Services

The Muscular Dystrophy Association, reports that of every dollar contributed in 1979, 83.4c went directly to program services.

The services included research, medical services, professional education and training, and public health education.

The remaining 16.6c went to supporting services of fund raising, management and services.

A total of $1,638,119 was awarded in research grants and fellowships within Massachusetts, and contributions also supported six clinics throughout the state which offer services at no charge.

Among the 40 neuro-muscular diseases included in MDA's program, along with the dystrophies, are Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis, commonly known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, and Myasthenia Gravis.

Early Abolitionists

Members of Bethany Congregational Church, now located at the corner of Coddington and Spear Sts., were among the first congregations formally to denounce slavery. In 1841, they resolved:

"... that as a church we cannot conscientiously countenance the sin of slavery by extending the hand of fellowship to those who continue to hold their fellow men in bondage."

First Parish Church Takeover Near Cong. Donnelly Sets Sights On Visitors' Center For Quincy

Cong. Brian J. Donnelly feels the National Parks Service will be cleared to take over First Parish Church in October — and then he'll go after a long-needed visitors' center for tourists in Quincy.

"I would suspect that will be one of my goals for next year if we can get this bill through the Senate and signed by the President and negotiate the church-state thing," he said.

"Once all three parcels are in place, I'll be looking at the appropriations bill next year with a lean, hungry look."

A bill authorizing the National Parks Service to take over the church was passed by the House last week and a similar bill in the Senate received a subcommittee hearing on Monday.

Donnelly, who testified for the bill along with Sen. Paul D. Harold and Richard Porter of Braintree, representing the congregation, said that things went "pretty well" at the hearing.

The major stumbling block to a federal takeover is the fact that the church has a resident congregation, a federal funding concept that both the Park Service and President Carter find hard to accept.

The First Parish Church bill, however, has an amendment asking the attorney general to come up with some guidelines on how to solve such situations, which may come up again.

Donnelly noted that, with the church, the National Parks Service would have three major locations in the Adams National Historic Site scattered around Quincy.

"We would then need one center that would be manned by National Parks people and used as a focal point for the three pieces and any other pieces that are added over the years," he said.

Harold, who was one of those responsible for the National Park Service taking over the Adams Birthplaces in 1978, also expressed an interest in pushing the federal visitors' center.

"When you look around and see what money the Service spends elsewhere in the country it is obvious that there is a lot of money that could be coming to New England," he said.

"They even have Custer's grave site with a 1,500-car parking lot, a visitors' center, the whole operation."

"Once we tie the Church in with the other Adams sites, the next thing we need to do is promote them properly so we can have people come to Quincy and spend money as tourists."

"If we have a visitors' center they might be encouraged to stay overnight or buy a meal or do some shopping. Right now they get off the Expressway, spend $1.25, get right back on and go to Plymouth."

Harold said the church-state conflict was one of the objections that the National Parks Service had against taking over the church.

"They also objected to the cost," he said. "They estimated that initial repairs would be $600,000 for the heating plant, security and some work on the roof. Then there would be $100,000 for annual maintenance."

"But they said if the church-state problem didn't exist that they would be in favor, that money would not be a problem."

Harold said he personally did not see the church-state conflict as insurmountable.

He cited the examples of Christ Church and the Old Swede's Church, both in Philadelphia, which have "complicated agreements which allow them to use the sanctuary for religious purposes."

And in about three weeks a similar bill covering the Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta, closely associated with the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, is due to come up in the Congress.

Harold said he was in touch with David Flynn of Bridgewater, Carter's campaign manager in Massachusetts, to contact the president "and make sure he knows this is coming down."

Sen. Paul Tsongas (D-Mass) who presided over the subcommittee hearing Monday, likened Quincy to Lowell, where he was instrumental in putting together a National Urban Park last year.

Donnelly said the First Parish Church bill went through the House only three months and four days after he filed it.

"It has to be some sort of a record," he said. "We're proud of that. Usually these things languish around for a couple of years."

Despite Polio Threat Schools To Open

School Supt. Dr. Paul Gossard announced that the prevalence of infantile paralysis, or polio, on the South Shore would not delay the opening of Quincy schools.

Dr. Gossard said he was advised by medical people that it would be useless to close the schools if other public gathering places were allowed to remain open.

Meanwhile, four new cases of polio, including one "bulbar," the most serious kind, were reported in Quincy over the weekend, raising to 14 the number of cases at City Hospital.

Paddock lineup: Bobek 3b, A. Reggie ss, Donovan rf-cf, McDonald rf, Duggan 1b-lf, Lombardi cf, McDermott c, Lints c, DeCelle 2b, Babbitt lf-1b, Healy p, Marini p, Daley p, Pena p.

CHLORINATION PLANT

Four sites in Quincy, including a favored one on Black's Creek, were under consideration for the proposed $120,000 state shellfish chlorination plant.

The other locations were off Sea St. in back of the Police Station, near the corner of Sea St. and Curlew Rd. in Adams Shore, and on Southern Artery not far from the Municipal Stadium.

SQUANTUM PARK SOUGHT

Mayor Charles A. Ross was negotiating with the city of Boston for a 10-year lease on Squantum Park as a municipal recreation area, long sought by Squantum residents.

It was learned several months before that a prominent Boston politician was seeking to lease the land and put a tourist camp on the site, which was considered one of the most beautiful areas on the coast.

HEALTH CENTER SNAGGED

A hitch developed in plans to build a municipal health center on Hancock St. when plans to take land belonging to the Woodward School were challenged by Dartmouth College, a residuary beneficiary.

QJC Accepting Fall Admissions

Quincy Junior College is accepting applications for full-time and part-time day studies for the academic year 1980-81.

Among the associate degree programs the college offers are Criminal Justice, Early Childhood Education, Accounting, Management, Retailing, the Liberal Arts transfer - oriented program, Medical, Legal, and Executive Secretarial Science programs, Computer Science, Electronic Technology, and a new Hotel-Restaurant Management Program.

A one-year health preparatory program is also available for people needing remedial work in the Science, English, and Math areas. While this program is not a pre-requisite for nursing or health programs, nor a guarantee of acceptance into a program, it does provide an exploratory time for people considering education in the health science area.

"Quincy Junior College's approach to education is humanistic - students know and visit with faculty members; administrators are available for advising and counseling; and friendship and acceptance is the common dominator of students, faculty, and administrators," Edward Pierce, Quincy Junior College President, told a group of visiting students.

Quincy Junior College continues to be "the Community College of the South Shore." Students interested in full-time study should submit an application to the College, and arrange to have sent to the College a copy of their high school transcript. Upon receipt of these documents a personal interview will be arranged with the Admissions staff or faculty members within the students program of studies.

Students transferring from another college should also arrange for their grades from their former college to be sent to Quincy Junior College. Quincy Junior is a viable alternate for many students, turned off by large universities, large classes, and impersonal faculty.

People interested in part-time day studies may call the admissions office for an appointment. Courses can be arranged around individual schedules and needs.

For more information about Quincy Junior College programs and admissions procedures, call Dean Hugo Saluti at 786-8777.

'They Tore The Place Apart!'

father, last week's break-in was preceded by such incidents as:

- Over 150 windows broken in the house over a five year period.

- A bullet fired through one bedroom window in the middle of the night. The bullet hole remains and, the man adds, "my son hasn't used the bedroom since."

- Two different cars vandalized at night.

- "One Easter morning," according to the woman, "a full gallon of paint went flying through the window."

Numerous complaints to the Housing Authority have proved fruitless, the woman claimed.

"They don't care," she said. "We get treated as if we're dirt."

"I keep applying (to the QHA) for a transfer, but I never get any response."

QHA Administrator Clement O'Brien responded, "We've tried to help that woman."

"There's no doubt they've tormented those poor people - but what can we do? We don't know who they are. The Housing Authority doesn't have police powers."

Tenants in public housing often have unreasonable expectations as to what the authority can do, O'Brien claimed.

"If you or I were living in a private apartment," he said, "and somebody put a rock through a window, could you go to the landlord and say, get those kids out of here? This is a police problem."

On the family's requests for transfers, he said, "we feel that, if we transferred her, the problem would go with her.

"That's a small, close-knit neighborhood down there, and we feel, if we just moved her across Germantown, those trouble-makers would just follow them."

"Then you'd have the new neighbors complaining about us bringing problems in there, that we didn't care about them."

The QHA has offered the family opportunities to transfer to the Weymouth Housing Authority or to private subsidized housing in the city, O'Brien claimed, but the family has not taken advantage of these.

"It's unbelievable," the father said. "It's a damn shame something can't be done."

"This is no way to live - living in fear like this," he added. "When I brought the kids back today, my daughter said 'Dad, do we have to go back there?'"

The break-in is still under investigation, with no leads as yet, according to the Quincy Police detectives department.

22 Local Musicians In Six City String Festival

Twenty-two young string musicians in grades four through high school are representing Quincy this week at a workshop at Devotion School, Brookline, being held as part of the Six City String Festival.

The festival is the first of its kind in New England and the local musicians are participating along with 107 other students from Bourne, Brookline, Cambridge, Medway and Needham.

The musicians play either violin, viola, cello or bass and the workshop will prepare them for a series of six concerts from October to March, one in each of the six cities. The Quincy concert will be in February.

A special recording session to make an LP album will be held prior to the final concert.

The festival may also lead to an invitation for the musicians to perform at the Eastern District Conference of Music Educators National Conference in March 1981 in New York.

Sponsoring the festival is the Foundation for the Advancement of String Education, in cooperation with the public school music departments of the six cities. Local participants are:

Rachel Boland, 30 Reardon St.; Danielle Carboneau, 30 Sea St.; Helen Delichatsios, 71 Rogers St.; Kathy Fiumara, 52 Gardner St.; Maureen Gralton, 196 Marlboro St.; Shelly Hansen, 12 Cranch St.; Karl Johnson, 36 Garfield St.; Danielle Litterio, 25 Hynes Ave.; Elizabeth Maher, 190 Plymouth Ave.; Donna McLoughlin, 154 Putnam Ave.; Donna Parry, 105 Putnam Ave.; Lisa Perfetto, 15 Tinson Rd.; Barry Pike, 74 Crescent St.; Silvia Pincof, 143 Upland Rd.; Robert Pitts, 15 Curtis Ave.; Vanessa Rush, 51 Narragansett Rd.; Kirsten Saunders, 100 Bicknell St.; Ruth Simon, 51 Unity St.; Dianne Theoharous, 62 South St.; Eric Wickberg, 41 South St.; David Wolff, 312 Adams St.; and Kimberly Parzyck, 12 Perkins St.

McGrath Issue Call For Civil Service Reform

City Councilor Stephen J. McGrath, who is a candidate for the State Legislature, has called for a comprehensive effort to reorganize the Massachusetts Civil Service system.

"The system as it is presently constituted is a slow, inefficient and overly centralized bureaucracy that needlessly frustrates hard-working employers and employees alike," he said.

"It is unreasonable to expect that one agency can effectively handle a personal function that includes 85,000 municipal employees in 234 cities and towns, as well as over 70,000 state employees."

McGrath told a gathering at the home of Geraldine Dorsey, Meadowbrook Rd., Wollaston, that delays in establishing eligibility lists have resulted in the widespread hiring of provisional employees.

"I have seen some estimates that as many as 50 per cent of all Civil Service employees in the state are provisionals," he said.

"And after the exams have finally been given, provisional employees who have done a good job may not be high enough on the list to get a permanent appointment."

"Consequently, thousands of tax dollars in training costs are lost."

McGrath said he supports a two-part reform program.

The first would restructure the state system for the benefit of state employees and aid those cities and towns that are not yet ready to handle full personnel responsibilities.

The second would provide local option for decentralization that would permit a community to develop its own strict merit system, subject to state standards.

These state standards, McGrath explained, would cover areas such as "recruitment, compensation and the appeals process and would be enforced via regular state audits."

QCA Candidates Night Sept. 3

Quincy voters, especially those newly registered, are invited to attend a pre-primary Candidates' Night sponsored by the Quincy Citizens' Association, Wednesday, Sept. 3, at 8 p.m. at the Montclair Men's Club, Holbrook Rd., North Quincy.

Since the Republican Party does not have candidates for many of the offices on the primary ballot, in many instances the winners of the Democrat contests will be the actual winners for state and county offices.

Norfolk Labor Council Backs Corcoran, Brownell

The Norfolk County Labor Council has endorsed Patrick J. Corcoran, a Quincy contractor who lives in Marshfield, for the Fourth District seat on the Governor's Council.

Corcoran is in a four-way race for the Democratic nomination to succeed the late Patrick J. (Sonny) McDonough of Boston.

who held the post for 33 years.

The Norfolk Council also endorsed Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D-Quincy), who is seeking reelection to the Second Norfolk seat in the State House against City Councilor Stephen J. McGrath.

Also endorsed by the Council were the following candidates who are unopposed in the Democratic primary for reelection:

Son, Paul D. Harold, Norfolk senate; Rep. Michael W. Morrissey, 1st Norfolk house; Rep. Robert Cerasoli, 3rd Norfolk house.

Cong. Brian J. Donnelly (D-Dorchester) got the Council's nod for the 11th Congressional district.

Brownell Discusses Legislation At Seniors Coffee Reception

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D-Quincy) recently discussed 1980 legislation affecting senior citizens at a "Thank You Coffee Reception" held in his honor by residents of Wollaston Manor, 91 Clay St., Wollaston.

The function was held for Brownell because he had aided the residents in obtaining a reduction in a management proposed rental increase.

Brownell thanked the residents for the reception and told the gathering that the most important legislation enacted in 1980 affecting the elderly was the $178 million housing bond issue.

"The most frequent requests my office receives are ones for elderly housing," he said.

"Unfortunately, the demand far exceeds the housing supply. The bond issue will help provide over $67 million for sorely needed new elderly housing construction, as well as $100 million to upgrade existing public housing. However, more will have to be done in the upcoming legislative session to meet the rising demand."

City To Seek $4 Million

Squantum UDAG Hearing Sparks Little Interest

By TOM HENSHAW

The initial public hearing into a proposed Urban Development Action Grant (UDAG) for the Boston Harbor Marina area of Squantum drew a scant five people to City Hall Monday night.

They were not asked to speak for or against the proposal, only to make suggestions, and they didn't have any of those.

Planning Director James Lydon indicated that the city will seek a $4 million UDAG with which to take Commander Shea Boulevard to provide better access to a planned condominium-restaurant development on the site of the marina.

City Councilor Joanne Condon, whose communication was read to the hearing by Lydon, asked that the developer be required to refund the money to the city later to be used for other development activities.

Lydon said that is becoming the common route for UDAG money.

"The federal government at this point in time is not looking favorably upon straight grants any longer," he said. "They're looking for loan-type situations where there is some payback to the city."

Lydon said a $4 million UDAG would be in line with HUD's desires for a 5-1 ratio of private to public money in a project. The condominium-restaurant development is set for about $20 million.

Speaking at the public hearing were Thomas Nutley, president of the Atlantic Neighborhood Association; Silas Porter, 173 Huckins Ave., Squantum, and Gerald Marquis, 45 Monmouth St., Squantum.

Present without speaking roles were Maureen Mazzimas, 49 Bayberry St., representing the Squantum Community Association; and Marie J. Reister, 15 Sonoma Rd., Squantum.

Gregory Gardner Enters Air Force

Gregory Gardner of 361 Freeman St., North Quincy, recently expressed concern that the East Squantum St. causeway was too small to support the amount of traffic that would be generated by a large development at the marina.

"It is an extremely attractive proposal," said Nutley, "but East Squantum St. is narrow and overburdened. We strongly support Shea Boulevard as a second access. This UDAG is absolutely essential."

Marquis, a former member of the Planning Department who now has a similar post in Watertown, suggested that the community have some input into how the money to be returned to the city is spent.

Judie Cullen of the Planning Department who conducted the hearing, said that anyone with such proposals should communicate them to the Planning Department.

STUTTERING AND NERVOUS TENSION

Stuttering is a frustrating problem. Speech is dependent on a highly complex mechanism that can easily be disturbed by nervous tension and self-consciousness.

Some medical experts speak of the "stutter type" of a child. Such a child may show symptoms of inborn nervousness. He often suffers from nightmares, bites his nails and may have difficulty in meeting people.

The stutterer is too much concerned with what others are thinking of him. His real problem is not the ability to talk. His trouble is that he is afraid he will not measure up properly to what others expect of him.

Stutterers are usually able to talk without difficulty when alone. In many cases, the more worried the parents become over the child's speech, the worse he will stutter.

Wool To Welding

Colony Inc. Spotlighted In National Welding Magazine

The Blake brothers, John and Gary, formerly of Quincy, who built their Colony Inc. welding supply house into one of the premier firms on the South Shore in less than 20 years, are featured in the July-August issue of The Welding Distributor magazine.

Colony's Quincy plant was recently displaced by construction of the Quincy Adams MBTA station and has been moved into what the magazine calls "one of the finest welding" supply facilities in the country" in the South Shore Industrial Park in Hingham.

John Blake, who is chairman of the board of Colony, is past president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and current president of the Clover Club of Boston, a title once held by his father, Harry. They are the only father-son combination to hold the post.

The Welding Distributor story, written by Assistant Editor Ronald Welter, recounts how the Blakes pulled their half century old family firm out of the failing wool business and into industrial gas and welding supply, of which they knew virtually nothing.

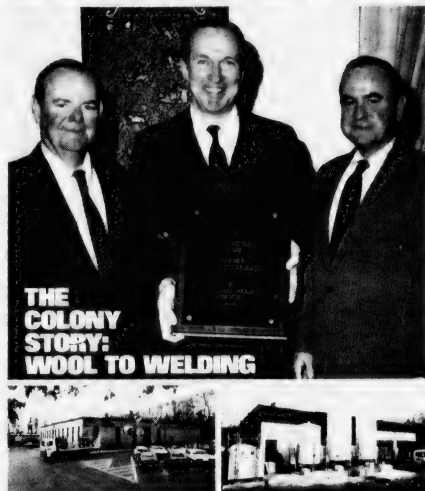

That was in February, 1961, and the company operated out of an old grain shed with John and Gary teaming up to make deliveries in the morning and handling sales calls in the afternoon.

"As a delivery crew," says the story, "they made a lasting impression: customers still talk about the 'kooks from Harvard' who didn't realize that (gas) cylinders could be rolled. They moved a cylinder by each taking one end and carrying it."

Now the company has 60 employees, 16 delivery trucks and annual sales of $7 million. It is one of the largest distributors of industrial gas and welding equipment in the northeast. Three years ago they expanded by acquiring Cryoweld, Inc., another distributor.

For many years, Colony Inc. was housed in a 4,000-square foot multi-purpose building in South Quincy, expanded in patchwork fashion over the years, until it was taken in 1978 to make way for the MBTA extension to South Braintree.

With the settlement from the MBTA plus funding from the Small Business Administration, obtained with the aid of the South Shore Economic Development Corp., of which John Blake was a founding trustee, Colony Inc. made the move to a new 25,000 square foot home in Hingham.

The move was so well planned that it was accomplished in a single weekend, with delivery trucks leaving the Quincy location on Friday morning, Aug. 24, 1979, and returning with empty cylinders to the new location in the afternoon.

The opening of the Hingham facility was highlighted by a visit from Gov. Edward J. King, who commended the Blakes for their activity in civic and charitable organizations. John Blake is chairman of the board of the St. Coletta Day School for children with special needs.

Last year, John and Gary Blake were honored as the "Business Family of the Year" by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and the Linde Division of Union Carbide named Colony Inc. "Distributor of the Year" in the eastern United States for 1979.

Advance To Semi-Finals

Quincy Police Erupt, 13-4

The Quincy Police softball team erupted for seven runs with two outs in the fourth inning and went on to wallop the Framingham State Police, 13-4, Sunday to advance to the semifinals of the South Division of the state police tournament.

Quincy faces a strong challenge Sunday when it meets the powerful Wellesley Police team, which finished 13-1 in the Bay State Division of the Eastern Mass. League.

"The way our team is hitting, the players will want to renegotiate their contracts," Quincy Manager Chico Caporale said with a smile.

"Seriously, though, we will have to continue to hit if we expect to beat Wellesley. Our team has really peaked during the past month and I just hope the trend continues."

Framingham jumped off to a quick three-run lead last Sunday but Buddy Moon ignited Quincy's comeback with a long home run.

After two singles and a walk, Nick Nichols cleared the bases with a triple. Ed Kisser put the frosting on the cake with a three-run homer in the sixth to end the scoring.

The $1 admission charge for Sunday's game with Wellesley will be used to benefit the work Joseph McLory does for the Sisters of Charity.

Summer Pool Program Ends Friday

The Recreation Department's summer swimming schedule at the Lincoln Hancock Pool will end Friday at 9 p.m.

The department will re-open the pool for recreational swimming Sept. 8, at 6 p.m. with a new fall schedule.

Finlay's Houghs Neck Softball Loop Champs

Finlay's Variety crushed Louis Cafe, 15-9, to clinch third place in the Houghs Neck Men's Softball League, then went on to win the playoff championship with a 6-2 victory over Manet Shell, the regular champ with a 13-2 record.

Chuck Fratolillo was the winning pitcher and John Bogan the loser in the playoff championship game. Finlay's won the game with five runs in the fifth inning.

Finlay's combined excellent defense with the fine eight-hit pitching of Fratolillo.

In the playoff opener Manet had defeated Houghs Neck Package Store, 7-5, scoring single runs in each of the first four innings and adding three in the fifth. Bogan was the winning pitcher and Pete Little the loser.

Jimmy Gilmore had a home run and single to pace Manet, while Jeff Little had two hits for Package. Little was cut down at the plate in the top of the seventh to kill a potential rally.

In Finlay's win over Louis to clinch third place, Fratolillo pitched and batted the team to the victory. He had a home run as did Billy Knopp and Tom Grady, who went four for five, made some outstanding plays in the outfield.

Paul Galligan went three for four. Bob Nigro three for five. Ed Kelly two for four and Mike McNally, who also sparked in the field, two for five.

In regular season games Houghs Neck Package scored twice in the bottom of the seventh to edge Louis, 6-5, with Pete Little the winning pitcher and Joe DeAngelis the loser.

It was the third straight come-from-behind victory for Package. DeAngelis had tied the score in the top of the seventh with a sacrifice fly. In the bottom half Kenny White singled and John Duffy hit a two-run homer for the win.

Quincy Yacht Club, scoring nine runs in the third inning, walloped Chenette Plumbing, 15-7, with Bob Brill the winning pitcher.

Jimmy McNally and Brill hit home runs. Glenn Reynolds, Jimmy Goldie and Ray LaRue sparked in the outfield and Vinnie Quilty, Frank Catrobono and Wayne Stone played well in the infield. Paul Chenette hit a three-run homer for the losers.

Manet Shell completed its regular season with a 16-1 thumping of Houghs Neck Package, scoring six runs in the fifth and eight in the seventh. John Picarski was the winner as he and ace reliever John Bogan combined for a four-hitter.

Bogan led the 18-hit attack with a long homer and a triple, while Connie Driscoll, Jimmy Gilmore, Gary Keefe, Bill Mitchell and Steve Marsters had two hits each. For Package Rich LeBel, Kenny White, John Ryan and Paul LeBel had the only hits.

In the eighth inning Mary Thibodeau's double, Janice Beau's, together with Morrisette, B League champion, was honored with a banquet at Morrisette Post.

"These girls were just incredible," LaRaia, a Quincy firefighter, said. "They have so much heart and desire, it's no wonder they came back and won that game and the semifinal series."

The Koch Club Men's Bowling League will begin its 31st season Tuesday, Sept. 9, at 7 p.m. at the Wollaston Boulevard Bowldrome, Quincy Shore Drive.

Several openings are available. Men wishing to participate in the Loop are welcome at the first session.

One of the oldest activities of the Koch Club, the Men's Bowling League was formed in September of 1950 with 30 bowlers and has had several hundred men participating during the past 30 years. Paul Koch is the only original member still in the league.

Leading the league into its fourth decade are Mike Shields, president; Joe Keenan, secretary and Richard Mancuso, treasurer.

Brooklyn Sweeps 2 From Quincy Babe Ruth Champs

The Caribe Stars, a team of 14-16 year old baseball players from Brooklyn, visited Quincy last weekend and swept two games from Quincy's Babe Ruth League champions.

The visitors, who were guests of Quincy families, bombed Firemen Local 792, Quincy's Babe Ruth American League champions, 11-2, last Saturday at Adams Field.

The Brooklyn team, which has a 36-5 record, is playing in the city championship playoffs.

The visitors exploded for seven runs in the first inning on three hits, three errors and two walks. Andy Eames then settled down and in his four innings pitched, gave up 11 runs on only four hits as the Firemen made five costly errors.

Bill Phillips relieved Eames in the fifth and faced only 10 batters, pitched shutout ball, gave up just one hit and walked one in three innings.

Eames collected the only two hits by the Firemen.

Sunday, also at Adams, the Brooklyn team, trailing, 2-0, after three innings, rallied to squeeze by the Sons of Italy, the Babe Ruth League's National League and city champions, 3-2.

Brian Donovan and Jim Austin pitched well for Quincy, but Brooklyn's Dennis Marcano and Miguel Caban were a little better, combining on a five-hitter. Donovan and Austin allowed eight hits.

Quincy scored two runs in the third but Brooklyn tied the count with two in the fourth and won it in the fifth on a perfectly executed squeeze bunt.

Bob McElaney had two of the SO's five hits. Tito Nieves and Ruben Corchado had two apiece for the visitors.

The Caribe team arrived in Quincy last Friday and was presented a citation from Mayor Arthur Tobin welcoming the group to the city.

The visitors presented their Quincy hosts with a handsome bronze plaque reading "The people of Quincy -- with grateful admiration and appreciation, Caribe Stars, 1980."

The visitors were served supper by members of the Sacred Heart Prayer Group of North Quincy at the home of Mrs. Alice Solari.

The Star of the Sea Prayer Group of Quantum prepared and served a cookout Saturday at the home of Mrs. Alice Szabo in Marshfield, where they also enjoyed a swim in her pool.

A second pool party was held Sunday afternoon at the home of Frank and Mary Vallier.

Hosting the visitors at their homes over the weekend were Vicki Carolan, Jeffrey Isaacson, Alice Solari, Ben and Jean Landey, Jack and Carole Danckert, Mary Donnelly, Mary Gougan, Abe and Madelyn Cohen and Frank and Clara Yeomans.

Arrangements for the annual trip of the Hispanic-speaking youths were made by Ann Yeomans, director of the New York recreation program, with the assistance of Mrs. Clara Yeomans, executive secretary of the Quincy Conservation Commission.

Sox-Angels In Jimmy Fund Game

By TOM SULLIVAN

When the Red Sox play the Oakland A's at Fenway Park on Thursday, Aug. 28, it will be the official 1980 "Jimmy Fund Night".

All proceeds from the game will be donated to the Sidney Farber Cancer Research Institute of Boston, the official name of the popularly known Jimmy Fund, leader in the fight to find a cure for cancer in children.

Ken Coleman, formerly of North Quincy and Radio Voice of the Red Sox, is the executive director of the Jimmy Fund.

As part of last year's "Jimmy Fund Night" a special Thomas A. Yawkey Award was instituted to be awarded annually to an individual or an organization for long time support of the Jimmy Fund. The first award in 1979 went to Carl Yastrzemski.

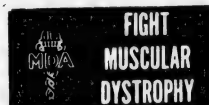

Two Yawkey Awards will be presented Aug. 28 to the Variety Club of New England and the Massachusetts Police Chiefs Association for their contributions through the years.

The fans will have a chance to salute marathoners David McGillivray of Medford and Bob Hall of Belmont. McGillivray ran coast to coast for the Jimmy Fund to a triumphant arrival at Jimmy Fund Night in 1978 and this spring he joined Hall, the national wheelchair marathon champion, in running from Winter Haven, Fla., to Boston for the Jimmy Fund.

Another feature will be a musical concert and drill on the field by champion Massachusetts marching unit.

Tickets are available through the Red Sox ticket offices at Fenway Park and all regular Sox ticket outlets, and can be obtained by using Master Charge or Visa credit cards in person at Fenway Park or by phoning AC 6-7-267-8661 with credit card number.

Third Party Reimbursement Key To Hospital Success

Proper management of third party (Blue Cross, Medicare, etc.) reimbursements is critical to the operation of City Hospital, the Mayor's Advisory Commission on the Hospital was told last week. Oscar Amparan, regional director of Hospital Affiliates management Corp., told the Commission that with proper third party management significant money could be generated for capital improvements.

His company, he said, could generate enough revenue to begin making capital improvements in about a year.

Hospital Affiliates management Corp., one of the pioneers in the field which operates some 150 hospitals around the country, is one of at least three companies seeking to manage Quincy City Hospital.

One of the criticisms of recent hospital management, especially by the medical staff, has been the lack of capital expenditures on plant and equipment over the past decade or so.

Amparan reinforced that criticism.

"To allocate $100,000 out of a budget of $25 million for capital improvements is absurd," he said. "We would look to a minimum of 5 per cent of the budget for capital improvements."

"To generate a bottom line of $1 or $2 million for capital expenditures would take one year at least."

Dr. William J. Frates of the medical staff indicated that the staff did not really want to wait a year for the improvements and Richard W. Corner of the Board of Managers said the board felt the same way.

Amparan said he was aware that another commission, the City Council's blue ribbon group, had put out a report on the hospital but, he added, he would prefer to see it.

He did, however, contradict one aspect of the Council commission's conclusions.

"I would say overstaffing in Quincy City Hospital is not significant," he said. "There could be some very minor changes but you are not way over staffed."

Amparan said his company's report to the commission would have a recommendation on whether or not to take the Hospital out from under the control of the Mayor but he declined to say what the recommendation would be.

The Council's commission criticized strongly the "politicizing" of the Hospital through appointments by the Mayor but Amparan tiptoed around that subject.

He had praise for the Hospital's staff, particularly its purchasing department.

"The city is to be congratulated on the prices it has been able to get for supplies," he said. "It ranks as almost the lowest we have seen. Someone has done an excellent job negotiating prices."

But, he added, Hospital Affiliates could do an even better job in securing low prices through the practice of group purchasing for the 150 hospitals under its management.

"The savings in purchasing alone would be enough to underwrite the cost of the management team," he said.

The management team, he told the commission, would consist of one executive director full time at the hospital plus the services of seven specialists on a parttime basis.

The assignment of an executive director to the Hospital would not necessarily displace the current director, Anthony DeFalco, he said.

"If the board is pleased with the work of the current director," he said, "we would work with him."

Lawrence F. O'Donnell, chairman of the Mayor's commission, said there is no suggestion that the hiring of a corporate management team to run the hospital would put the city out of the picture.

"It would still be a municipal hospital," he said.

O'Donnell said he expects that the commission will be able to make its report to the Mayor sometime in October.

QUINCY FURNITURE

Proudly Presents Cherry Towne

Cherry Towne

... a very special bedroom

Cherry Towne is one of the finest expressions today of a time when furniture was crafted to perfection.

Just as their Colonial ancestors had done 200 years before, craftsmen use only the finest solid Alder hardwoods—no veneers—and apply a rich Cherry finish that's hand rubbed to a special glow.

But the quality doesn't stop with all the beauty and elegance. It extends deep—to every construction detail. Like solid antique brass hardware. Or drawer bottoms, dust proofing and backs that are made from genuine wood. There's so much more, but you'll see the inherent beauty from first glance. For this is Cherry Towne—the finest.

NOW FOR NOW

(or payment by check
is coming back in style.)

In this topsy-turvy economic period, there is one stable, safe way to handle your money—open a NOW account at our Bank.

What can a NOW account do for you and your money management?

Well, as the use of credit cards becomes more and more restricted, a NOW account lets you switch to a cash operating basis, thus avoiding interest charges for time payments. And your money in your NOW account is earning 5% interest per annum. Thus you get the best of both worlds—you avoid interest charges while collecting interest for yourself.

But, you say, going on a cash basis means I can't make larger or more costly purchases and spread the payments. In this economy with interest charges going up almost daily, maybe that is not all bad.

It depends on how much you need a "big ticket" item. If you have a wife and five youngsters and your washing machine breaks down hopelessly, you need a washer, of course. If you don't have the cash, you charge it. But if you can switch to a cash only (or check) basis for most items, you will save money.

The trouble with cash itself is that cash is dangerous. You can be robbed or you run the risk of losing it. NOW account checks are safe and you have an ongoing record of your expenditures.

Think about it.

Should your household budget be keyed into a NOW account?

Will it save substantial interest payments?

Will it be safe and convenient for you?

If you don't have a NOW account and want to open one (for as little as $10.00) come in to our main office or one of our branches.

We think a NOW account is the simplest and best way you have to help fight inflation.

Are "Free" NOW Accounts Really Free?

You will notice in this advertisement we did not use the term "free NOW account." That's because we want no confusion about our NOW accounts even though we feel that we come as close as anyone in offering NOW accounts at a basic minimum cost with no hidden charges.

Here is the way we work our NOW accounts:

You can open an account for $10.00.

As long as you maintain a balance of $10.00 or more you will get interest credited monthly at 5% per annum.

Overdraft charges are $5.00 each, which covers the paperwork in notifying the customer.

Stop payment fees are $5.00 for the same reason.

And the only other charge is $3.85 for each book of 200 plain checks imprinted with your name, address and account number.

What about those which claim to have "free" NOW accounts? They can demand a $300 monthly balance—or $500.00. The only minimum at our bank is $10.00 if you want to earn interest.

The thing to think about when someone says "totally free NOW account" is this: if you don't keep your balance at $300.00 all month long, you can be charged 20 cents for every check you write that month even if you bring your account up to $300.00 within 24 hours. Nothing like that at Quincy Cooperative!

We remind our customers that nothing in life is really free.....but the cost of a NOW account at our bank is very much less than for most other banking institutions.

Dramatic Finish Puts Us Over Top For Jerry's Kids

By HENRY BOSWORTH

It took a dramatic photo finish to do it, but we did it!

The Quincy-South Shore Jerry Lewis Telethon Pledge Center based at The Quincy Sun went over the top in the final moments Labor Day night with a $2,000 pledge from Quincy Atty. George G. Burke to beat last year's total mark.

It brought the pledges to $40,629 and set the stage for what is virtually certain to be a record-breaking year for the Quincy-South Shore Jerry Lewis Telethon Committee when the final figures are in.

The final 1980 total should easily pass last year's total of $102,801 raised at the pledge center and through pre-telethon events.

This Labor Day weekend, the fish bowl at the pledge center just barely beat last year's with $9,201. The 1979 figure was $9,123.

However, more fish bowl donations are still coming.

There should be a big gain in pre-telethon fund-raising events. As of now more than $52,000 has been brought in through pre-telethon events compared to $42,272 at this point last year. Last year's final pre-telethon figure was $53,437. This year's final pre-telethon figure, with $52,000 in should beat that without much trouble.

Thus, it means, the Quincy-South Shore area will top last year's combined figure for all three departments: pledges, fish bowl and pre-telethon

Burke's last minute $2,000 pledge made the difference. The $40,407 blackboard figure wound up as $40,629 and the fish bowl reached $9,201. The committee also raised over $52,000 in pre-telethon events with money still coming in. The total figure is expected to pass last year's $102,801. More telethon photos pages 10, 11, 12, 13, 14.

City Eyes New Federal Funds For Roads, Garages

By TOM HENSHAW

A revamped and updated Economic Development Act, under which the City Hall Annex was built, is expected out of Congress this fall and the city is drawing a bead on funds for roads, garages and an addition to the police station.

Mayor Arthur H. Tobin said the city is going to be "using a two-pronged attack" on the federal treasury in an effort to promote development in Quincy.

"We're not only going after UDAG (Urban Development Action Grant) money, we're going after EDA funds," he said.

He spoke of using UDAG and EDA funds and other unspecified sources for money with which to take over or build two roads and three parking garages.

One of the roads is Commander

Shea Boulevard, an existing street under the control of Jordan Marsh Co., which is used for access to the warehouse near Boston Harbor Marina. The Mayor called that a top priority.

The second road would be used as an egress to another development but Tobin declined to say where. It's too premature, he said.

Parking garages are contemplated for the John Hancock Parking Area, the Ross Parkingway near the Gilchrist building, and on Dimmock St. adjacent to a planned development at the corner of Hancock St.

Tobin said the new EDA bill is currently before a congressional committee but he said "we've been informed that it could be out of Congress by late September or early October."

A UDAG requires substantial investment of private funds, usually at a ratio of 5-1, in a proposed project, while an EDA grant is an outright award for public works.

"We're going to be looking for an addition to the police station under the EDA," said Tobin. "The facilities are very outdated and outmoded and it should be all modernized. I'm going to give that high priority."

Meanwhile developments already underway in Quincy received widespread publicity in the Aug. 20 issue of the prestigious New England Real Estate Journal.

There were feature stories on the Commercial Union building that is being constructed by O'Connell Brothers in North Going Up -- But How Much?

Tax Rate By Early October

It is possible that the Quincy tax rate for fiscal 1981 will be announced by Oct. 1, according to City Auditor Charles L. Shea.

"I'll have a better answer to your question by the end of the week," said Shea, to whom Mayor Arthur H. Tobin referred queries on the tax rate.

"The first thing is to get the books closed and I've almost got that done now. Then we have to send the budget cap forms and other documents to the state."

"We could possibly have a tax rate by Oct. 1.

"It would be the earliest we have had one in many years and a lot of things can happen. I hate to make predictions, so don't hold me to it."

Last year's tax rate of $224 was not set until the middle of December, after city officials argued long and loud with the state over their estimate of receipts.

The 1981 rate is expected to go up, what with decreases in state aid and lost court cases, but just how much is uncertain.

Flood Control Project Engineers Hearing On Town Brook Tunnel Plan

The Army Corps of Engineers will hold a public workshop Thursday, Sept. 18, at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall on the deep tunnel that is planned to divert flood waters from Town Brook in South Quincy.

The proposal is designed to solve chronic flooding in the Quincy Center business district and residential areas of South Quincy and Braintree.

The recommended plan includes construction of a tunnel through the rock, 12-feet wide and 130 feet underground, to divert flows from Town Brook and from drainage conduits along Burgin Parkway Extension.

The tunnel would be 4,000 feet long to the Southern Artery, including new culverts under the Artery. Downstream, the left bank of the river would be widened to increase channel capacity.

The Town Brook drainage system is being designed in conjunction with the Burgin Parkway Extension and the MBTA's Quincy Adams Station.

The current cost estimate of the project is $18.6 million.

Quincy Schools - CETA Program Preparing Unemployed For 'Hi-Tech' Field

A Quincy Public Schools-CETA run program is taking aim at easing two of the state's employment problems.

One is the state's rapidly growing high technology industry, expected to generate as many as 120,000 in jobs here by 1983. Projections suggest, however, that local workers may be able to fill only about two-thirds of those jobs.

The second involves the employment problems of some special groups, like "displaced homemakers" or former teachers out of work because of declining enrollment.

The program, South Shore High Technology Training, is preparing those persons and others for the "hi-tech" field.

About 110 persons are now being trained in five-to-13-week courses, according to Susan Carroll, program coordinator.

The six courses being taught are Computer Programming, Word Processing, Technical Writing, Microprocessor Technician, Production Test Technician and Electronics Assembly.

The courses are a joint effort of Quincy CETA, which referred 200 CETA-eligible applicants to the program, Quincy Junior College, which narrowed the 200 down to 110 by screening and testing, and Vo-Tech, which is conducting the courses.

The program, first of its kind in the state, is funded by a $329,000 federal CETA grant, according to Miss Carroll.

The 110 students, she says, range in age from 18 to 57 and are a mixed bag, including former teachers and housewives, teachers high school and college graduates and about 25 former members of the armed forces.

The program's goal, she says, is to place 80 percent of them in jobs, a process she admits may take several months after the last course ends in October.

As part of the program, two "job developers" are at work, visiting or calling prospective employers.

"We haven't been getting a real positive response yet, Miss Carroll said, adding that she expects responses to improve.

"We are helping them (the students) as much as we can," she said, "but we cannot guarantee a job. That's up to the student and, of course, up to the employer."

Several students were enthusiastic about the training they were receiving.

"This program came along at a very good time for me," said Donna Leary, a former Weymouth teacher who was laid off this year.

The technical writing course she's taking will prepare her for writing user manuals, warranties, product descriptions and other literature involving hi-tech products.

"This is the sort of thing that really takes a good year to get a handle on," she added. "I'll be satisfied if this course helps me get my foot in the door somewhere."

"This is something that really interests me," said Fran Comen of Randolph, also taking the technical writing course. "It's something that's really paycane and I'm into that."

A May, 1980 graduate of Syracuse University, Miss Comen admits her job hunting, before she entered the program, "got to be quite frustrating."

But, she thinks the nine-week course will help land her a job with a local electronics firm.

"I enjoy working with my hands on small objects," said Diane Sprince of Germantown, explaining why she entered the electronics assembly course.

She and her husband Richard, just out of the Navy, are both taking part in the program. They have two children.

Also in Mrs. Sprince's class was Julia Hochstrasser, a grandmother who gives her age as "over 40 but less than 60."

She and her late husband ran a Weymouth garden center until his death in 1973. Since then, she's had several jobs before seeing a newspaper ad for the hi-tech training courses this spring.

"I'm really coming to like this," she says. "I really find it interesting."

"Besides, my two sons are into electronics," she smiles, "so this is a good way to learn to talk to my children."

To Reduce Services

Teachers Starting School On Sour Note

For the second year in a row, Quincy teachers are starting their year on a sour note.

Teachers voted Tuesday to "work to rule" - reduce their services to the bare minimum required by contract - until they receive last year's raises.

The 1,000 Quincy Education Association members, like all school employees, negotiated raises for 1979-80, but never received those raises.

The School Committee voted this summer to pay all raises for 1980-81, but to leave last year's in the hands of a suit seeking to force the City Council to appropriate funding for them.

Until those raises are paid, the QEA voted to approve the following "work-to-rule" guidelines:

1. "Work only your contractual hours.

2. "No time should be put in prior to the opening of school (unless your contract says otherwise).

3. "No parent conferences unless within contractual hours.

4. "Student help and make up period should be given only during prep time or within the contractual hours.

5. "No faculty supervised detention beyond contractual hours.

6. "Teachers will not organize or accompany students on field trips.

7. "No teacher will supervise or chaperone dances, sporting events, musical presentations, gym shows, plays, etc.

8. "No recommendations are to be written for students unless release time is granted.

9. "No contests (i.e. essay, science fairs, spelling, etc.).

10. "Be creative unless it's specifically spelled out in the contract - do not do it - do not perform any duties which are above and beyond the contract."

The ten measures were passed by 6-to-1 or 7-to-1 votes, with "very few lonely voices" opposing, said QEA President Jo Ann O'Malley. About 800 of the QEA's 1,000 members, attended, the 7 a.m. meeting at the George F. Bryan VFW Post, she said.

"Once again, teachers in Quincy Public Schools are starting off the year with poor morale," she said. "People are very, very unhappy."

"I'm sorry it comes down to that," said School Committee Vice Chairman Christopher Kennedy. "The real losers will be the school children and their parents."

Kennedy noted that the School Committee has been trying for nearly a year to obtain funding for the 1979-80 raises.

"It's the mayor and the City Council that have denied the funding," Kennedy said, "but I suppose the teachers feel there's nothing they can do to them about that."

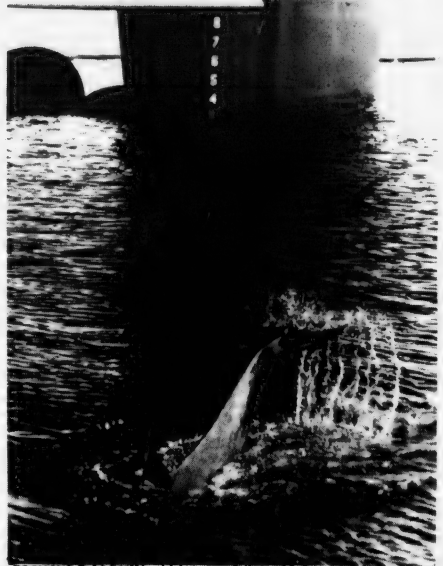

"Quite a few of the membership feel that the School Committee initially was at fault," Mrs. O'Malley said.

She noted that the committee's 1979-80 budget, submitted over six months before the union's contract agreement, didn't contain enough money to fund that year's raises.

Mayor Arthur Tobin and a majority of the City Council opposed a supplemental budget to fund the raises during 1979-80.

The School Committee also voted not to "piggy-back" last year's raises onto this year's paychecks, she noted in order to preserve funding for other programs.

"A lot of members feel we are subsidizing summer school, community programs and other at our expense," she said.

ELUSIVE DOLPHIN, which successfully avoided rescuers for two days at the General Dynamics Shipyard, seems to be defiantly shaking its tailfins at onlookers. The female dolphin was trapped behind the LNG tanker Louisiana, docked in the shipyard, before finding its way to open water Saturday. The dolphin then went aground trapped on a sand bar in the Fore River and was taken to New England Aquarium in Boston, where it is recuperating and undergoing tests.

QHA '1000 Percent' Behind Them

Seniors 'Very, Very Happy' After Meeting

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Last week's meeting on security at troubled Snug Harbor Court wasn't a solution, but a step in the right direction, said several participants.

The Aug. 28 meeting heard complaints about abusive local youths from residents of the senior citizen complex and pledges from local officials to work to remedy the situation.

The meeting produced at least one immediate result, according to Larry Zusman, director of the Germantown Service Center.

"The following morning, the Housing Authority was down here checking on all the locks," he said. "Also, they were kind of cleaning up the area."

"I was very pleased with the meeting, and the senior citizens were very, very pleased," he added.

Gertrude Murphy, president of the Snug Harbor Court Association, told about 75 persons present that the group's demands were:

- Police protection for the 45-unit complex, target of youth harassment and vandalism in recent months.

- Repairs to the fence which surrounds the complex.

- Repairs for some of the complex's faulty locks, or completely new locks, and

- An upgrading of the complex's dark and difficult-to-reach laundry room. The room is located at the bottom of 15 steps and is a hazard for many of the elderly residents, Mrs. Murphy said.

"The Quincy Housing Authority stands behind its tenants 1000 percent," said QHA Administrator Clement O'Brien, who complained that the authority has "serious and pressing problems on financing."

"The Housing Authority does not have the funding for a security force," said O'Brien, who added that the QHA has also been unsuccessful in obtaining financing for a community building that would house a new laundry room.

O'Brien said, however, that any faulty locks would be repaired and added that barbed wire, to repel youthful invaders, would be installed in certain spots atop the fence.

Other local officials present at the meeting included:

- Council President Leo Kelly, who criticized state Department of Community Affairs (DCA) regulations that, he said, prevented the QHA from evicting chronic troublemakers from public housing.

"We've got to get that state agency to start paying attention to our needs and wants," Kelly said. "I think the problem is that DCA does not live here in Germantown."

- Mayor Arthur Tobin's executive secretary Thomas Burke who said the mayor had asked him to investigate the possibility of obtaining CETA funding for full-time protection at Snug Harbor.

- Capt. Paul Neston of Quincy Police, who said the department would upgrade patrols in the neighborhood, particularly during the day time.

He disagreed, however, with Zusman, who claimed the only solution to the security problem was a foot patrolman "on the beat" in the neighborhood.

- State Rep. Thomas Brownell and Sen. Paul Harold, who promised to support increased funding for the QHA to help solve the security problems.

Eleey Takes Issue On 'Emergency' Criminal Cases Remarks

Atty. Peter Eleey of Quincy, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor's Councilor, has responded to State Corrections Commissioner William Hogan's remarks district attorneys prosecute only "emergency" criminal cases in order to avoid overcrowding of state corrections facilities.

"What is an 'emergency' criminal case?" asked Eleey. "Are all crimes short of murder and rape now, in effect, decriminalized by the Commissioner's recommendation?"

Noting his criminal justice experience in handling more than 1,500 cases as a practicing attorney, the former assistant district attorney said:

"Halting criminal convictions and commitments is a perverted solution to overcrowding problems. Criminal prosecution is not meant to have such time, place and manner restrictions.

The criminal needed no restrictions when he or she perpetrated an unlawful act. They should not now have the benefit of the system's failure as an excuse for being brought to swift justice."

Eleey pointed out that the state could move forward with its plans to add a combined total of 350 additional beds at Gardner, Concord, Norfolk and Bridgewater.

Referring to the Governor's Council power to approve pardons and commutations to convict criminals, and to approve appointments to judgeships and the state Parole Board, Eleey noted:

"The Governor's Council has awesome responsibilities to Massachusetts citizens in the area of criminal justice. As Governor's Councilor from the Fourth District, I will take a hard line against granting post-prosecution paroles, pardons and commutations. For this reason, I find it hard to accept the Corrections Commissioner's recommendation that state district attorneys grant what, in effect, amounts to a pre-prosecution reprieve to arrested law-breakers."

The Fourth Governor's Councilor District encompasses approximately 700,000 residents in the cities and towns of Abington, Avon, sections of Boston, Braintree, Brockton, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Marshfield, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

3 Residents Tour Army School

Three Quincy residents were among 21 members of the Military Intelligence Association of New England (MIANE) taking part in a recent tour of the Army Intelligence School at Fort Devens in Ayer.

The group - including Quincy residents John Creeth, Arthur Henderson and Isadore Zack - toured the base and were acquainted with modern intelligence training conducted at the school.

The visit was arranged by Cong. Brian Donnelly at the request of former Cong. James Burke of Milton, a former Army counter-intelligence officer in the Pacific during World War II.

Taking A Trip? Secure Your Home Before You Leave

Don't leave any invitations to burglars while you're gone.

The Massachusetts CRIME WATCH and the Quincy Police Department pass along the following tips to keep thieves from taking a trip around your home while you're on your trip:

Help yourself to a happy vacation! The Massachusetts "CRIME WATCH" and the Quincy Police Department recommend that you secure your home and your peace of mind, by following these effective simple tips:

Shortly before you leave

- Notify your local police department so a watch may be kept on your home.

- Tell the mailman, milkman, paper boy - anyone who might leave things piled up outside your door - to discontinue deliveries.

- Put away outdoor furniture.

- Remove money, jewelry and other valuables from your home.

- Look for possible fire hazards such as oily rags, open containers of combustibles, wooden matches and questionable wiring.

- Leave a key with a trusted friend or neighbor. Ask him/her to keep an eye on your home and to turn your lights off and on; also keep the front porch clear; water plants; feed pets, if any.

- If no one is watching your home, leave a light or two and a radio connected to timers, to turn on automatically at night and in the morning.

- Carry a minimum of cash. It is safer to use Travelers Checks. Take your check book with you.

- Leave window shades in normal positions.

- Unplug all unnecessary appliances, especially TV sets.

- Turn off furnace and water faucets. Check stove burners/oven.

- Have your car thoroughly serviced, if you're going to drive. Take an extra set of keys with you.

- Check all windows and doors for security, including cellar windows and garage door(s).

DO NOT: Disconnect phone. Hide a key to your house anywhere outside. Leave notes regarding your absence. Inform your local newspaper about your plans.

On the day before you leave:

- Set your thermostat so that your furnace or air conditioner maintain a reasonable temperature.

- Close your fireplace flue to prevent birds or animals from entering.

- Remove all highly perishable foods. Defrost and unplug refrigerator.

- Turn down the volume control on your telephone so it cannot be heard from the outside.

- Put window shades in normal daytime position, and make sure all main floor drapes, shades, and curtains are arranged so that the police and neighbors can see into your home.

If a burglary has occurred during your absence.

- Do not enter the house. The burglar might still be there. Use a neighbor's phone and call the police immediately.

- Do not touch anything. Wait until the police arrive.

- Have a record of the serial numbers of the missing items, and your Operation Identification number. This is your best chance to get your property back.
